In the metric system, on the other hand, there is one specific, definite, appropriate word to denote the linear unit, one for the unit of area, one for the unit of solid measure, one for the unit of capacity, and one for the unit of weight. The system thus employs five unit words, and for purposes of division and multiplication, uses seven prefixes. This is a considerably simpler mechanism than the English system now in use.

In almost all instances where the system is now in use, its inauguration has been due primarily to difficulties which have arisen in the commercial world. At every Customs house in Europe, under the old system, it had been necessary to keep a staff of computers who did nothing but reckon the weights and measures of the goods of one country in terms of the weights and measures of the other. Besides being a great expense, this plan was slow and cumbrous. The result has been that all the nations of Europe, with the exception of Russia, have long since adopted the metric system. Some, like Switzerland, to make the change easier, have retained the names familiar to the people, and substituted the metric weights and measures. It is just as if we in Canada decided to add three inches to our yard and still call the elongated measure a yard. It would really be a metre, but it would be more easily recognized as a yard.

Even in a single country like the United States confusion exists at some points. The term bushel has many significations. Wheat, rye, oats, corn, buckwheat, barley, potatoes and onions are sold by weight, whereas prices are quoted by the bushel. Thus, if oats are quoted at 20c. a bushel in Ohio, a Dakota farmer would take it to mean that he could get 20c. for 36 pounds of oats. A Maine farmer would dispose of only 30 pounds for 20c., whereas the Ohio farmer would actually get 20c. for 32 pounds.

With these explanations, it should be clear that a better system is desirable, and, as will be shown, the metric system offers a great improvement in this respect. The metric system came into effect during the time of the French Revolution, when a concerted effort was made to do away with all old-established systems. Some of the revolutionists' acts were commendable, some were unworthy and many were neither. Among the more laudable movements was the establishment of a decimal system in all departments of weights and measures.

Hitherto standards had been absolutely arbitrary. Thus, the English yard was the distance between two gold studs in a brass bar, kept securely by the Government in London. Should this standard be destroyed, an exact counterpart could not be recovered without making use of models of the original, and should all the yard-sticks in the world be destroyed, the British standard could never be restored. At a time when French scientists saw all established things being ruthlessly destroyed around them, they perceived that if they were to establish a more stable standard, it would be necessary to have recourse to something indestructible and they turned to the earth itself. Measuring, with their astronomical instruments, one forty-millionth portion of the earth's circumference, north and south, they said, let this be our standard and let it be called the metre. A standard metre was therefore made which is kept in Paris. Of course, it is nearly as arbitrary a length as the English standard yard, for the measurements were not made quite exact. Still, it is a near approach to a stable and indestructible length.

Next, as we divide our dollar up into ten-cent bits and our ten-cent bits into cents, so the French divided their metre into decimetres and the decimetres into centimetres, and they went still further and divided the metre into thousandth parts called millimetres, or, to complete the analogy, the mill bears to the dollar the same relation as the millimetre bears to the metre. On the other hand, 10 metres are called a decametre, 100 metres a hectometre, and 1,000 metres a kilometre. Practically speaking, the metre nearly corresponds to the yard and the kilometre to the mile.

To secure a unit of volume a small cube was constructed, each side of which measured a decimetre, or nearly 4 inches. The cubic contents of this cube were styled a litre. It, in turn, was subdivided into tenths, hundredths and thousandths, and multiplied by ten, one hundred and one thousand, and similar prefixes to those given the multiple of the metre were bestowed on these divisions. For the unit of area, of course, the square metre was employed.

To obtain the unit of weight the scientists obtained the weight of one cubic centimetre of pure water at a given temperature and this they termed gramme. The gramme is really a very small weight, being not much heavier than 15 grains, and it is accordingly the kilogram which comes into most use, being about equal to two pounds. The gramme is divided and multiplied in tenths like the metre and the litre.

The advantages of the metric system are many and obvious. The very fact that it is built up from a single unit renders its use extremely easy. Thus, when we think of the relation between the pound and the cubic foot here, as compared with the relation between the gramme and the cubic centimetre under the metric system, it seems strange that this simple plan was not adopted long ago. Just as we regard with despair the pounds, shillings and pence of the Englishman, even so do the users of the metric system look upon our yards, feet and inches and our pounds and ounces.

The whole trend of the world is towards the universal adoption of the metric system. All obstacles that tend to hamper commerce and intercourse must be removed. By the time all the nations of the world are transacting their affairs on a decimal system, then a very desirable state of affairs will have been inaugurated. Meanwhile, a Chicago paper is figuring on how much time and money will be saved in the education of children. It computes the loss in the United States alone at 40,000,000 years and $1,000,000,000. This may be exaggeration, but it is a fact that a child can be taught the metric system much more rapidly and effectually than the present cumbersome system.

In Canada, things are working slowly towards the desirable state of affairs. The Retail Merchants' Association and the Manufacturers' Association have both been advocating the change in no weak voice. Moreover, the country is daily becoming riper for the inevitable. The system has for some time been taught in the secondary schools of the land, and in some primary schools, and people are fairly familiar with its main features.

In England there exists what is known as a Decimal Association, which is agitating for the adoption of its favorite system. A letter from the secretary of the Association, directed to the United States Consul-General at London, contains some instructive details about the progress being made by the Association in converting public opinion to its beliefs. The letter says in part: "There are 290 members of the present House of Commons so thoroughly in accord with our aims that they have given me authority to publish their names as supporters. If we add to this the number of members of Parliament who would be influenced by a debate in the House of Commons to vote in our favor, we are convinced that we are now strong enough to carry a Bill.

"During the last four or five weeks, no less than 60 city, town and county councils have passed resolutions to the effect that it is desirable that the reform should be made in the interest of commerce and education.

"One of the most definite results; in fact, I think I may say, the most definite result, of the conference of the Colonial Premiers was the passing of a resolution in favor of the adoption of the metric weights and measures throughout the British Empire. This will have a most important result, and will render certain the early passing of a Bill to give effect to those views.

"All the chambers of commerce in this country, nearly all the school boards, the trades unions, and a great number of societies of various kinds have for a long time been active supporters of my Association.

"The attitude of our Premier may be gathered from some remarks he made to the deputation which waited upon him in regard to this question in 1895. He said:

"'If I may express my own opinion upon the merits of the case, there can be no doubt whatever that the judgment of the whole civilized world, not excluding the countries which still adhere to the antiquated systems under which we suffer, has long decided that the metric system is the only rational system.'"

At the Colonial Conference held this summer in London, a resolution was passed dealing with this subject. It reads: "Resolved, that it is advisable to adopt the metric system of weights and measures for use within the Empire, and the Prime Ministers urge the Governments represented at this conference to give consideration to the question of its early adoption."

Mr. Joseph Chamberlain recently forwarded a formal notice of this resolution to the Governor-General to ascertain what the Canadian Ministry propose to do in the matter.

YOUR FRIEND—THE TRAVELLER.

By Hec. Secord.

HOW many merchants adequately realize to what extent their success in business is indebted to the travelling salesman, the ubiquitous "drummer," how few merchants fully appreciate the knowledge that is imparted to them by the traveller, knowledge that could not be obtained by them as readily, as concisely, as positively as through this wandering human encyclopædia, this unabridged volume of practical hints and useful suggestions, this meandering "tape-line" of market reports, this living "ticker" of commercial values and fluctuations. Very few, it is to be regretted, fully realize what they owe the "drummer," and if they do give a thought to this phase of their connection with him, do not appreciate his worth, or acknowledge the value of the information that leaks out of him like water through a sieve. The travelling salesman, generally speaking, is looked upon by many merchants in the light of a "necessary evil"—a something that has entered into business affairs and, like "the poor," always to be with us, and not to be shaken off—an incubus on the wheels of trade, or as a barnacle on the ship of commerce. These opinions held of the commercial traveller often lead a merchant to consider him a nuisance, and to accord him treatment not merited by the services rendered and in inverse proportion to the courtesy and attention shown him by the salesman. It is a lamentable fact that many merchants are not only not appreciative of a traveller's visit, but often downright rude and neglectful. It is true that the vicissitudes of business at times prevent a merchant from according the traveller as close and prolonged attention as the salesman would wish, but it is also an acknowledged fact that politeness is cheap and brings its reward, and insistent and persistent as every good traveller is when in quest of trade, there is not one of the ancient and honorable brotherhood but will remember the manner of his reception and treatment. The traveller is of much greater value to the merchant in many ways than the latter has any conception of, and it is a fact that many a business man unknowingly is indebted to the genial "Knight of the Road" for "easier credit" with his jobber. The pressure that would in the natural course of events, owing to overdue accounts, etc., be put on the merchant is often withheld on advice of the salesman. In many other ways the traveller is the merchant's friend, as who better than he can give the merchant a timely hint as to rising or falling markets, salable goods, shipping information, put him into touch with the best houses in his various lines, etc.? The instances of a traveller's utility to a merchant are too numerous to cite, and it is not the purpose of the writer to enter into a lengthy review of them, but merely to enter a plea on behalf of the "boys" for good all-round fellowship between buyer and seller. We are all interested in each other and practically after the same mercenary end, the almighty dollar, but we can gather those golden shekels more pleasantly, and they will jingle more merrily in our pockets if we remember the "Golden Rule." Personally, the writer can state that in all his travels, from the Gulf to Victoria, with very few exceptions he has been accorded fair treatment; whether this was due to his good looks, his amiability or the houses he represented, he has never taken the time to analyze, but the few instances where he has bumped up against one of those "rough jewels" has left an impress, if not on his anatomy, at least indelibly on his memory. It is around the hotel fireside, on the train and on the station platform that the text for this article was gathered. It is not the purpose or the intent of this article to convey the impression that the salesman has not his shortcomings (he has a few), as well and like in every flock a dark-hued lamb will be found among the "boys." There are one or two who probably through extreme youth, verdancy or over-freshness bring on the heads of the fraternity the treatment referred to in this article. The traveller is out to sell goods and must be persistent, he cannot whisper about his wares, he must holler, or as ryhthmically expressed—

He who whispers down a well
About the goods he has to sell
Will never reap the golden dollars
Like he who climbs a tree and hollers.

The Canadian West as a Food Producer.

We send our grass-fed cattle
In droves from the teeming West,
Of our grain in its rich abundance
We freight your ships with the best.
—Frank I. Clarke.

IT is a little difficult to say anything new about the productive possibilities of the West, and yet, from constant contact with the newly-arrived Eastern Canadian, Englishman, Scotchman or American, it is only too evident that the resources of the West in the matter of food production are but vaguely guessed at.

You have to "ca' canny" with the newly-arrived, as they have no hesitation in insinuating that they do not believe you, when you are probably only giving them the most conservative estimate of things as they are. The writer happened to tell one of the members of the General Conference of having seen 150,000 tons of hay in stack in the Northwest Territories, and he promptly said:

"Oh, it could not have been more than 1,500 tons. That would be an enormous quantity!"

Yet, the person, to the contrary, replied that it was 150,000 tons.

THE WHEAT FIELDS OF MANITOBA.

This great Western country of ours is so vast, the ease of culture so great, the soil so fertile, that people accustomed to 10-acre fields with a fence round them cannot grasp the idea of "a league-long wheat field." Yet, such is a common occurrence in the West. The British journalists, during their recent visit, had their farming ideas enlarged by seeing five self-binding machines cutting round an 800-acre wheat field on the Portage Plains. And, as the straw was heavy, there were four horses to each binder. These are only ordinary incidents in the farming life of the West, and yet many people find them difficult to believe.

As to what the West has produced in past years, no better evidence can be furnished than the following official table of exports:

| Crop. | Bushels. |
| 1886 | 4,000,000 |
| 1887 | 10,500,000 |
| 1888 | 4,000,000 |
| 1889 | 4,500,000 |
| 1890 | 11,500,000 |
| 1891 | 14,000,000 |
| 1892 | 14,000,000 |
| 1893 | 12,000,000 |
| 1894 | 15,000,000 |
| 1895 | 29,000,000 |
| 1896 | 14,000,000 |
| 1897 | 22,000,000 |
| 1898 | 23,000,000 |
| 1899 | 30,000,000 |
| 1900 | 17,000,000 |
| 1901 | 55,000,000 |

As to what may be done in the future, he would be a rash mortal who would attempt to prophesy.

In 1901 Manitoba had in wheat 2,011,835 acres and the Northwest Territories 508,564, and they produced between them something over 63,175,928 bushels of wheat. This year the acreage has not been increased so much as was anticipated by many thousands of acres owing to the unusually wet spring. There has been an increase, however, of 28,105 acres in Manitoba, and the Northwest Territories of 80,291, making a total increase of 109,396 acres, or 2,624,637 acres in wheat this season.

THIS YEAR'S WHEAT YIELD.

The latest crop estimates before threshing commenced was an average yield of about the same as last year, viz., 25 bushels to the acre, which would mean roughly a crop of 65,000,000 bushels. Since threshing has begun in many sections the average has gone up to fully 30 bushels to the acre. There is not, however, sufficient threshing done to say how far this increased average yield of oats being heavier than was anticipated, but leaving it at 40,000,000 bushels, this would mean 103,000,000 bushels of grain of all kinds for the season of 1902.

Manitoba is estimated to have 23,000,000 acres of arable land. What amount of arable land is possessed by Alberta, Assiniboia and Saskatchewan is not yet fully known, but it is not less than 55,000,000 acres. Over 63,000,000 bushels have been produced from 2,624,637 acres, and all who are fond of figures can amuse themselves with working out the posibilities of the future. This is only food production along one line. In that of breadstuffs and cereal foods the Province stands well to the front.

BEEF CATTLE.

Manitoba has an enviable reputation for the production of beef cattle, and, year by year, her farmers are very wisely going more extensively into mixed farming. In Alberta, the cattle ranges produce yearly many thousands of head for the export trade. When, as time goes on, these cattle runs are more and more curtailed by the influx of settlers, there are still the many thousand acres of the Peace River country, the finest grazing land in the world, on which countless herds can be raised.

may extend, and there is still too much wheat in the stook to say that the average is safe from depreciation. It is, therefore, probably not wise to base calculations on more than a 63,000,000 crop of wheat.

COARSE GRAINS.

While the increase in land sown to wheat was comparatively small, the increase in land sown to coarse grain was enormous, being 39,109 acres in Manitoba and 50,000 in the Territories, or a total of 89,109 increase in the lands sown to coarse grains. In August, the coarse grain crop was estimated at 40,000,000 bushels, but since then the amount has increased, owing to the the fact that wheat-raising is so much easier than the slower and more detailed methods of mixed farming. Hogs do remarkably well, and can be cheaply raised owing to the ease with which coarse grains are grown. Some idea of the value of hog-raising may be gained from the fact that, since January last, live hogs off cars at Winnipeg have never been less than 6¼c. per lb., and a great part of that time they have brought 6½c. The packing-houses this year have not been able to secure hogs enough to reach half their packing capacity. There is unquestionably money to the farmer who undertakes the systematic production of the bacon hog. Sometimes people question as to whether, if many farmers went into the business, it would not be overdone, but of that there is little danger, as Manitoba packers are in a good position to export bacon and hams if they ever had any to spare, but at the present time carloads are constantly being imported from the American side, and, with our present growth of population, the home consumption will increase steadily. The increase of the present year has been enormous.

A FUTURE FOR POULTRY.

As to poultry, there is a future for the man or woman who will go into the business here. Winnipeg has never yet been adequately supplied with a good grade of poultry. It has been demonstrated that chickens, ducks and geese can be raised to excellent profit, and there are even now one or two successful turkey farmers. Such a thing as a supply of broilers is unknown to Manitoba. In the winter season new laid eggs retail at 35 to 40c. per dozen, and the supply never even approximates the demand. Every winter poultry is brought into Manitoba by the carload. Last winter one firm brought in 150,000 lb., and numerous others like amounts.

DAIRYING.

Manitoba alone produced $1,000,000 worth of butter and cheese last year, and this industry, so far as butter is concerned, is capable of infinite development, as the conditions are all good for profitable dairying, the present tendency being towards large creameries at central points, run on the cream-gathering plan.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES.

Manitoba is not in the banana belt, neither is it likely that oranges will ever be grown for export, but when it comes to small fruits, hardy plums, apples and crab apples, Manitoba is all right, as the recent horticultural exhibition proved to a demonstration. So far as raspberries, strawberries, currants, gooseberries and blackberries are concerned, an abundance is now grown. In a few sections of Southern Manitoba they raise sufficient crab apples for the home market. There are a few apple and plum orchards, and these were this season laden with fruit. The growing of these fruits has passed the experimental stage, and it only requires care and attention to produce an abundance of both plums and apples.

VEGETABLES.

All the ordinary garden vegetables grow readily, and some of them, such as cauliflower and squash, can hardly be equalled, the one for size and whiteness and the other for size and weight.

Already two pickle factories are established here, and find the supply of vegetables most satisfactory. This is but a brief sketch, and is, of course, incomplete, but it may give readers of THE GROCER something to ponder on.

E. CORA HIND.

THE TEA-TASTER'S BURDENS.

The professional tea-taster does not live a life overburdened with pleasure. His vocation is a jealous one, and he has to be particularly temperate in his living.

The lot of a tea-taster, in the opinion of Inland Grocer, is far from a happy one. His profession is not overcrowded, and he is in consequence able to command a good salary, but after a time this business entirely destroys the nerves and injures the digestive organs. Many of these men sample between three and four hundred cups of tea during the course of the day. This, of course, necessitates the drinking of an enormous quantity, for, even if they only take the smallest spoonful from each cup, the number of spoonfuls is so great that when placed together they would form a quantity of tea which few people would care to drink.

In spite of all this, men who find that they possess the necessary qualifications rarely hesitate to become tea-tasters, as the handsome salaries which are paid are a great inducement. It is not every man who can earn his living as a tea-taster. In the first place, the tea-taster, like the poet, is born and not made, for it is practically impossible to have the delicacy of taste and smell which is necessary for the work. Not only must a tea-taster possess an extremely susceptible palate, but his sense of smell must also be practically "born." Smelling, in fact, plays almost as important a part in the work as tasting. By simply handling and applying to his nostrils a pinch of tea from a dozen separate chests, the tea-taster can often tell the quality of each and the price.

This is not the only drawback to the work of the tea-taster. He has to pay the strictest attention to his mode of living. Certain articles of food and kinds of drinks have to be avoided, and above all he must never smoke more than one mild cigar or pipe of tobacco in twenty-four hours, and that always in the night time.

GROCERY WINDOW DISPLAYS.

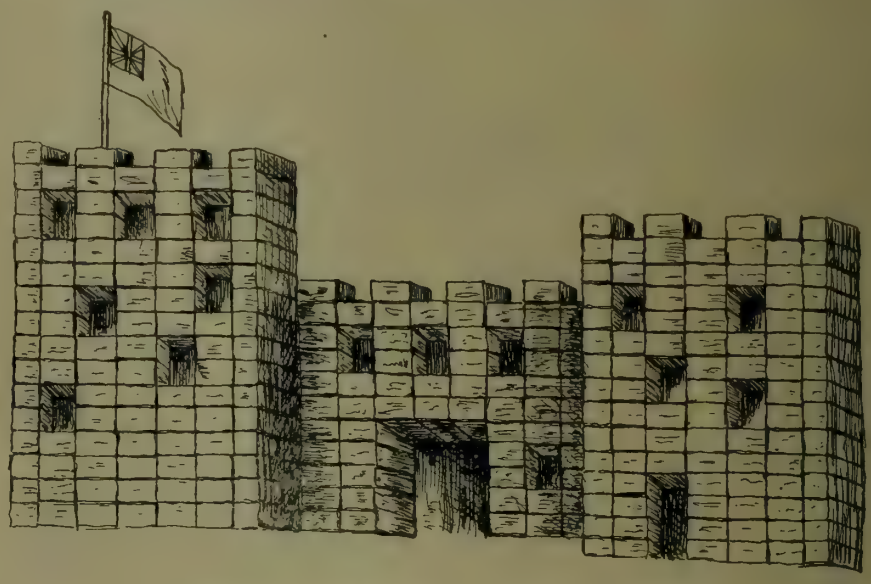
SOME SUGGESTIONS FOR RETAILERS.

IT is a matter of doubt that many grocers realize the value of their window space as an advertising medium. Let a man stand in front of his store, measure up its space, reckon how many people pass by his door every day and compare them with the number of readers in the local paper. He will find that he can reach through his window display hundreds of people who never read the newspapers. By properly tagging everything he has in the window with a price and a card with some catchy name written on it, he attracts the eye of the man on the street, and impresses on his memory the fact that he can get granulated sugar at 23 lb. for $1, choice soap at three bars for 25c., smoking tobacco of good flavor at $1 per lb., a good briar pipe for 25c. at this particular store. The attractiveness of the display creates an admiration of the articles shown in the mind of the passer-by, and, as it is a short step from admiration to a desire for possession, their sales are greatly increased. With this borne in his mind, the merchant should set about dressing his window with a determination to excel all others, and if he does so his business is bound to grow.



The fall is a good time for window display. Trade then is more brisk than in the summer, new lines of goods are coming on the market, displacing other goods, and need to be pushed. Put samples of them in your window, name them, tell what they are for, if necessary, and price them.

TOBACCO DISPLAYS.

FOR those grocers who carry tobaccos in stock a catchy window dressed with cigars and tobacco will draw custom. Have the floor covered with red or blue cloth, and let there be two or three shelves arranged the length of the window. Along the front of the window place a number of pipes of the same or of different style. Next, in the centre, make a low pile of cigarette cases and label them with a card, having written on it some fancy title. It is wise to put in those kinds of cigarettes that come in brightly colored boxes. On each side place a pipe-stand, which may be made of wire and arranged to hold a number of pipes. Then, on both sides of the pipes, place a pile of tobaccos in tins or packages. Have each pile labelled with the price and special name of the article. Such signs as "B——'s dollar mixture will not burn the tongue," ought to be effective.

On the second row can be placed more pipes of different patterns, cigarettes, cheroots, boxes of cigars, having their lids open, showing their contents to the passer-by. The cigars would look best if placed in the centre of the row with the pipes and cigarettes, etc., in piles on each side. On the back row have some piles of tobaccos in plugs and cans, a lot of different styles of pipes, a couple of small pyramids of boxes of cigars and several piles of smoking mixtures, as in the illustration. This window may be arranged in many different ways to suit the space at his disposal and the amount of stock carried by the storekeeper.

A good way to advertise cigars is to build a castle of empty cigar boxes, as shown in the illustration. The boxes may be fastened together by glue or nails. The towers should be built first and openings left for the battlements and windows, as shown in the cut. These towers may be connected by a wall in which is a gateway and three or four loopholes or windows. A card may be put in the window containing the motto, "Old M——d cigar, the best cigar on the market. Can be had here for 5c.; worth double the money." This makes an effective display. The castle may also be built of cigarette boxes.

A DESIGN OF CIGAR BOXES FOR A WINDOW DISPLAY.

PROVISION DISPLAYS.

The cold weather of the fall should much increase the demand for all sorts and conditions of meats and provisions, and the grocers who deal in those goods may greatly increase their sales by dressing a window now and then with these commodities. Care should be taken to have everything clean and neat about the window. Anything dirty would detract from the attractiveness of the display and hinder sales of the goods shown.

One of the ways of making a display effective is to show an immense stock of the same article. This method may be adopted in dressing a provision window. As in the illustration, have shelving arranged in the window. In front, pile in two rows a number of rolls of bacon the length of the window against the glass. The bacon will fill up the space between the shelving and the glass. On the first shelf pile a lot of chickens, all placed in the same way, and piled two or three deep. On the next shelf, plates heaped with sausages, pork tenderloins, pigs' feet, a hamper of eggs, bologna sausage, and the like. On the top row piles of head-cheese, corned beef, and such like, may be arranged. The display may be adapted to suit any window.

The sales of cheese from this out ought to be heavy, and it would not be a bad idea to bring cheese into a window display. Instead of shelving, cheese boxes may be placed in the window in tiers and covered with paper. Large cheeses may be placed on top of the boxes. Have about three rows of the cheese, and on top of these may be placed alternately one or two bottles of pickles, with some Dutch or Limberger cheese. In front of the cheese may be arranged some rows of various styles of bottles of pickles. Everything should be placarded with a price ticket and sometimes with the special name of the article to assist those who see it to remember what it is at some future time.

HONEY DISPLAYS.

A SEASONABLE time for dressing a window with honey is the fall. By building in the centre of the window by means of glass squares a pile of jars of honey of various sizes, and on each side an artistic pile of comb honey in cases, a pretty effect may be

AN ATTRACTIVE PROVISION WINDOW.

A provision store on King street east, Toronto, recently had a most attractive window display. As will be seen by the accompanying sketch, the bottom rows are rolls of bacon and small sausages. Pickle bottles are placed around the cheese boxes on which the tubs of lard are resting on their sides with their open tops facing the front. Various-sized pails of the same commodity are arranged as in the illustration.

AN ATTRACTIVE PROVISION WINDOW.

The top row consists of tubs of butter with their open tops pointing outward. The back is made of boxes of creamery solids, piled as in the engraving, presenting the appearance of a solid wall. At each side were piles of canned goods. Some palms and ferns in the window contrasted pleasantly with the lard, butter, etc.

CONFECTIONERY WINDOW.

The approach of Christmas is hailed by a great consumption of candies. It is then the energetic merchant endeavors to push them strongly. A window may be dressed with them by overturning a lot of pails of different styles of candies and leaving the candies just as they came out of the pail, piles placed in rows. Above these rows boards may be arranged from the two front corners of the window and meeting in the centre of the back as in the illustration. On the boards a number of different plates of candies can be placed. Tissue paper may be utilized to cover up the boards and to place under the plates.

CROCKERY AND CHINA DISPLAYS.

Dishes form part of the stock of a good many grocers and general merchants and an effective window may be produced by setting in it a small table with an attractive dinner or tea set upon it. The table need not take up the whole of the window and ought not to be over a foot above the floor. Around the table pitchers, vases, lamps, with brightly painted sides. Globes may be shown to advantage, by being arranged in orderly rows. A window of this sort may be modified in a variety of ways and is sure to be much admired. A clean white table cloth should be placed on the table and never allowed to become dirty.

SEASONABLE WINDOWS.

Seasonable windows are essential to active retailing, and if yours have the summer accumulations of cobwebs, dead flies and other interesting bits, it would be well to get rid of them at any rate, remarks N. E. Grocer. You may not feel disposed to undertake any important decorative work, but you can, at least, be neat with no great expenditure of effort or money. Perhaps it would be well to emphasize the assertion that a season of housecleaning, greater or less, according to necessity, should precede window trimming, and in making the declaration one would not be far astray. Frequently the mere act of cleaning up would be sufficient to cause a general improvement in the appearance of the window. Perhaps some retailers would find that sufficient at first, and the remainder would come as a development of the idea of cleaning up.

AN OBJECTIONABLE WINDOW.

A well-known tailor and men's furnisher characterized the coal situation by putting in his window a "dummy" police officer whose back was turned on a hod of real coal. In the "dummy's" hand was a card bearing this incription:

"Help yourself. I am not looking."

Near the hod was a picture depicting boys stealing the coal.

A number of the coal dealers protested to the police, and an attempt was made to remove the objectionable exhibit. The tailor refuses to allow it to be removed and he was sustained by the chief of police. The objectors claimed that it incites boys to steal.

LEARN TO WRITE SHOW CARDS.

The demand for the card-writer's work and skill has greatly and rapidly increased within the past few years, on account of the

The farmers are thrifty and have the very highest grade of stock. Good cows and good pasture cannot help but furnish a high grade of Milk. Consequently it makes it easy for the Reindeer Company to put up the very highest quality of goods. This brand was the first to be introduced and is still the leader. Dozens of others have made their appearance since and have been forgotten. Quality is the one important feature which has held the trade against all-comers.

You don't have to stand talking half an hour to sell a can of "Reindeer" Brand, and it don't pay you to waste time trying to persuade your customers that something else is just as good, which you surely will have to do if you keep on putting in other unknown Brands.

Artistic show cards and price tickets call attention and sell goods that otherwise, very often, would lay on the shelf. Neat and attractive show cards are assistant clerks. An artistic show card in the window speaks louder than words. Clerks and window-trimmers who are good card-writers are always in demand. They have no "dull seasons." W. Edwards, Carleton Place, Ont., advertises in this issue a book of instruction at $1, postpaid, teaching this art. It has constantly grown in patronage and public favor, and is now universally recognized as the most popular and reliable book ever placed before the public. See advertisement.

A PEACEABLE INVASION.

The people of Canada await all business invasions of our friends across the border with feelings of pleasant expectation. To maintain the commercial relations between the two countries on a friendly basis is the work of the practical and enterprising man of business on each side of the line, no matter what imaginary difficulties are announced by political agitators and theorists.

One of the latest of these "invaders," whose business it is to introduce their own lines of teas and coffees to the people and grocers of Canada, is the firm of Thomas Wood & Co. of Boston, whose Montreal headquarters are established amid pleasant surroundings at No. 428 St. Paul street. They come to us laden with the laurels of business success in a market where victory is the reward of those alone who steadily meet most powerful competition both in character and price of these imported goods. Some of these are trade-mark goods, bearing a distinctive name, always of uniform quality, and thus appealing not only to the taste but the confidence of the consumer.

Among their higher grades of coffees may be mentioned the "Gilt Edge" and the "Acme," and in teas the "May Queen," the "Primrose," and the "Queen Bee." They have also built up an enormous trade in a brand of coffee known as the "Duchess," one of the most popular of all their brands.

The house of Thomas Wood & Co. has existed in the United States for over 25 years. Their presence in Canada will be welcomed by our grocers and by the purchasing public, and we bespeak for them the same success that has attended their business career in the States.

A CHEAP WAY.

A Missouri grocer took three new silver coins—a dime, a quarter and half-dollar—and stamped his initials on each one. He then put these in circulation through separate channels. After a week he took liberal space in his daily paper and advertised to give ten dollars in gold for the return of each one of the coins. The consequence was that he had everybody for miles around examining their money. He claimed that every time a man, woman or child in his territory came into possession of coins of this denomination they at once looked for the initials, and while doing so unconsciously thought of his store. The rather strange part of it is that, although this offer has been made for nearly a year, not one of the coins has been returned.—St. Louis Grocer.

THE SUCCESSFUL CLERK.

By R. H. Hudson, Toronto.

THE successful clerk is a somewhat rare young man. To be full of successes in one's chosen work is a grand ideal; but to get there is the rub. For, what do we find from observation? Not the successful clerk, but the dominant class we are forced to brand as failures, pure and simple, and this condition of affairs is brought on themselves altogether, or nearly so, by their own carelessness and lack of enterprise. There are some features which go to form the characteristics of a successful clerk, which we ought never to lose sight of in thinking about the life behind the counter, with its results so advantageous or otherwise to both clerk and employer.

The successful clerk must be a gentleman—a man, in the best and truest sense, a man, not a puppet who has to be barked at constantly to make him attend to his business. Nor will he be a boyish man, who seems to forget everything but his boyish frolics and tricks and his desire for fun. Nor can he be satisfied with being a dude, whose principal business qualification is to keep his hair beautifully parted in the middle, his moustache waxed, his apron spotless, his tie and collar of the very latest styles (though these may be all very well in their place). He must be a gentleman; gentle in his dealings with the children, gentle and modest in his whole behavior.

Good manners cost nothing, perhaps, but those who practice them are spotted by the best customers, and they wait for him, while the other fellows sulk and wonder why they cannot take the order as well as our good-mannered friend.

The successful clerk will also be on the very best terms of friendship with his employer or manager, constantly seeking to further the interests of the business by bringing to the notice of his employer well-planned schemes in store arrangement and decoration, advertising, delivery, or whatever affects the business in general. A successful clerk will also keep his stock well assorted and his want-book up-to-date, letting no stock accumulate under the counters or in out-of-the-way places, but rather pushed forward, remembering that the first loss is the least loss. A successful clerk will likewise be well informed on the manufacture or growth, care and uses of the goods he handles from day to day. And he need not grow weary, and will not, if only he gives himself to this pleasant task, for it is marvellous what these bins, barrels, boxes and shelves contain and how the four corners of the earth come to his help in satisfying the daily wants of his customers. Not only will it be a vast satisfaction for him to know as much as he possibly can about his stock, but this knowledge will give a splendid impression to his customers. For instance, a lady comes into the store, and in ordering her groceries she comes down to the item "cloves." She says to the clerk, "What are cloves, anyway, Mr. Clerk?"

"Oh, I don't really know," he says, "except that they are used at pickling time, and also for hiding the odor of the last beer before a fellow goes to see his best girl."

He frankly tells all he knows about the matter; but he loses an opportunity of imparting information which would give his lady customer a good impression of him. How much better if he had answered something like this: "Cloves are a most important spice, sometimes called spice nails, from their resemblance to a nail, you know. They are grown mostly in the East and West Indies, the choicest coming from Penang, one of the East-Indian islands. Those are large in body, with golden heads, and are very oily. They are harvested between September and March. The average annual yield is about 10,000,000 lb. The average tree yields about 5 lb."

The effect is good, for the customer necessarily goes away with the impression that Mr. Clerk is well posted, and she likes him. It is a drawing card for any store to have a clerk alive and up-to-date.

I read an article lately to the effect that clerks learning their business in the Old Country are superior to those learning in Canada, and the reason for this was given that every clerk had to serve from three to five years' apprenticeship. This may be applicable in some lines of business, but it is unnecessary, to say the least, for any young man to give away five of the most productive years of hie life for little or no wages. But what is needed rather is earnest application and adaptability on the part of every clerk, taking advantage of night schools, lectures, libraries and trade magazines, which are so easily obtained, and being wide awake and doing the work on hand just a little better than most other fellows would or could. Then, persevere.

HOW SCHWAB ROSE TO FAME AND FORTUNE.

CHARLES M. SCHWAB, who, at the age of 39, was chosen President of the United States Steel Corporation, the greatest commercial organization in the world, and who receives $250,000 a year, probably the largest salary in the world, was born in Williamsburg, Pa., February 18, 1862, and consequently is now nearly 41 years old.

When he was 10 years old his father, who had been in the woollen manufacturing business in Williamsburg, moved to Loretto, Pa., and established a livery business. Young Charles did considerable stage driving for his father, attended for three months each winter the Loretto country school, where he early displayed a great love for mathematics, and after two years went to St. Francis' College, where for four years he stood at the head of his class.

Just seven years after he entered the Carnegie concern he was sent as chief engineer to rebuild the great Homestead steel plant.

In 1887 he became superintendent of the Homestead works, and five years later, in consequence of the tragic death of his friend, W. R. Jones, he was made general superintendent of the Thomson works. He subsequently built the great steel rail mill and practically rebuilt the entire plant, receiving at this time a salary of $35,000 a year.

Several years before his advancement became a matter of course, Mr. Jones once answered the query as to who would succeed him as the head of the Edgar Thomson works by saying, "The young engineer Schwab is the only man thoroughly fitted for the place."

After his fatal accident there were 21 applications for Mr. Jones' position. Mr. Schwab did not apply, and was surprised to receive a letter from the officers of the Carnegie works appointing him superintendent, a great honor for a man so young.

During the Homestead strike, after the strikers had been out two months and there was no prospect of an early settlement, Mr. Schwab went to the Homestead works and, on account of the great fondness of the men for him, in three weeks, through his individual efforts, the strike was declared off. At that time he directed both the Edgar Thomson works and the Homestead works from Homestead.

When Mr. Carnegie sold out his interest in the Carnegie company to the United States Steel Corporation he stipulated that Mr. Schwab must be made president. He is now a multimillionaire and is very generous in his charitable work.

CEREAL BREAKFAST FOODS.

ADVENT OF THE PACKAGE PRODUCT.

ONE can hardly pick up a publication of any sort to-day, whether daily paper, weekly or monthly magazine, without coming across at least one advertisement of some cereal breakfast food. The great success of one brand of rolled oats, brought about largely by a series of strong, clever advertisements, induced other millers to enter the field, and now there seems to be no limit to the number of names and styles of labels being brought out under the name of breakfast cereals. The peculiar part of it is (and it is a proof of the great value of advertising), that each new arrival is greeted by many consumers; there appears to be room for all and more to come, while competent authorities state that there isn't a particle of difference between one brand and another. The label, backed by the advertisement, does the business.

The result has been that grocers find themselves burdened by having to keep a great variety of these goods, if they are to be able to supply all the demands made upon them. In former years the grocer's stock of breakfast goods consisted merely of oatmeal and cracked wheat, good wholesome articles, which formed the staple porridge at a low price and made a palatable, healthy diet.

Then came dry rolled oats, and in their train steam rolled oats, rolled wheat and innumerable other fancy goods. Rolled oats were introduced in October, 1882, by a well-known Canadian gentleman, F. C. Ireland, the founder of the Ireland National Food Company. These were dry rolled, and not mixed with water as is generally the case with all the rolled oats on the market to-day. It was a coincidence that in November of the same year, a Mr. Schumaker introduced rolled oats in the United States.

Each of these gentlemen believed that he was the first to discover this method of preparing oats. Calling upon Mr. Schumaker one day, Mr. Ireland intimated that he had first made rolled oats. Mr. Schumaker denied this, but an examination of their patents showed that Mr. Ireland was the first by nearly one month.

"But," said Mr. Schumaker, "I made rolled oats long before I had them patented."

"So did I," said Mr. Ireland.

And the question is still undecided, though the score goes to the Canadian.

As many of the trade will doubtless remember, there was a great difficulty in inducing grocers to handle the new preparation, and the millers had almost to beg the trade to at least give it a trial. The cereals then used consisted of fine and granulated oatmeal, with some whole oats which were imported from the Old Country. From a hygienic standpoint these last were about as good as could be produced, retaining as they did all the best of the grain. But they took much longer to cook, and consequently were not as desirable as the meal. At any rate there was not a great quantity of them used in this country. But after having once secured a foothold on the market, it was not long before the use of rolled oats became general. There are now, it is alleged, none of the dry rolled oats on the market. Steam rolled, which are cheaper, have taken their place; although there would doubtless be a good demand for the others if they were again placed on the market.

It is questionable if these rolled cereals, which sold at a higher price and needed much less time to cook, were any improvement as regards health on the old-fashioned meal, which had been in use for generations, and to which both merchants and public had become used.

From a hygienic point of view the rolled cereals used at present could not be as wholesome, because in their preparation a large percentage of water was added in the form of steam to soften the kernels of the grain in order to roll them into flakes. This moisture has a detrimental effect on the keeping qualities of the food, which is thus rendered more subject to become musty than the perfectly dry meal. The addition of water, however, gave from 10 to 20 per cent. additional weight to the food, and that much extra profit to the miller, while the consumers found they could not add as much water to the porridge as formerly.

In the matter of rolled oats, great care had to be exercised by the manufacturers in cleaning off every particle of hull, which is left on the groat; as it was offence to the palate when it appeared in the porridge. In oatmeal, small particles of hull left in could not be noticed, being ground up fine, and gave no offence. On the contrary, they were considered very wholesome.

But there was one feature about the rolled oats, besides the extra moisture and the appearance now and then of pieces of hulls, which rendered this preparation less valuable as a health-giving food than oatmeal. That was, that in removing every bit of the hull, the goods had to be more closely milled, scoured and brushed. In doing this the very best part of the oat food was lost. It was removed into the offals and sold at a low price for cattle food. From this lost part comes the strength which the consumer derives from eating the oat food. It contained the thin inner lining, rich in the very best substance which fattens the horses, and without which oats would not serve them as a food at all. It is that part of the oat which contains the fluoric acid, so necessary to the human system, for tissue, nerve and stamina.

The old-fashioned oatmeal is therefore much healthier, more convenient to handle, less bulky and less expensive. Rolled oats, from this theory, and it is not only a theory but a physiological fact, are no improvement on the oatmeal; although when there was nothing to choose from but the old fine and granulated oatmeals, there was considerably less business done in cereal foods than is the case at the present day.

Wheat, the food experts tell us, is the most perfect food for mankind. This is pleasant to hear, for we are asked to try a great many different brands, put up in every conceivable form and style. The constituent parts of the wheat require to be all left in the food in order to get the very best results to the human system. The outer fibre, which is a wood substance and indigestible, should be removed entirely. Then, when rolled, granulated, cracked, or made into fine meal or flour, it is equally useful and valuable as a perfect food. In most of the wheat breakfast foods now offered for sale there is the addition of sugar, malt, ferrum, phosphates or fancy flavoring to please the palate, which, of course, though likely increasing the sales, neither adds to the real value of the food or detracts from it. There is a great difference in the cooking of these foods. The plain, inexpensive foods, thoroughly and properly cooked, are as good as any of the fancy and higher-priced articles.

But what is the grocer to do? The numerous goods, put up in all kinds of fancy boxes and packages, are so systematically advertised that the public inquire for them regularly; and the merchant who does not stock them finds his customers going to where they can get them. He must place them in his stock, and keep abreast of the demand.

One thing is certain. That is that people do not make investigations to find out which is really the best food for them to build up bone, muscle, nerve and tissue, but accept any food that is well advertised, especially if it is doctored up with extracts and flavoring so as to be pleasing to the taste. With the new breakfast foods, which appear from time to time, the sale depends to a large extent upon the advertising they receive—the more thorough the advertising the better the demand.

But there is another thing, equally certain, which is that any article of merit will soon find its level. The genuine, health-giving food will settle down to its proper value and be here to stay. A fake article will also soon find its level, and no amount of advertising will make it stay longer than such advertising lasts. When such a time comes the grocer may find his sales of these articles diminish and something else taken in their place. But he will be consoled by being able to keep in stock only a few brands, instead of the present large number; and then to quote Lord Byron, or somebody else:

No more new foods will worry him,
He'll smile as broad as "Sunny Jim."

THE NEW 2,100-LB. DELIVERY WAGON OF THE CHRISTIE, BROWN CO., LIMITED, STARTING FOR THE MARKHAM FAIR.

AN ELABORATE DELIVERY WAGON.

The accompanying illustration shows the new delivery wagon of The Christie, Brown Co., Limited, Toronto, just as it was about to start from the firm's factory on the morning of October 2 for the Markham Fair. The reins are held by T. Holman, one of the firm's city travellers, and by his side on the box is John Edmonds, of the office staff. It was some years since Mr. Holman drove a four-in-hand in the picturesque lanes of Devonshire, but the 20-mile journey to Markham had scarcely begun before he was thoroughly at home.

The wagon, which was receiving its initiation into the firm's service, is, as may be seen from the illustration, an elaborate affair. It weighs 2,100 lb., is fitted with rubber tires and roller bearings, and is in every way up to date.

At Markham, escorted by a number of the firm's customers, the wagon was driven around the Fair grounds, samples of biscuits in neat paper boxes being distributed to the visitors. This was repeated on the following day, much to the satisfaction of the firm's customers, as well as to the delight of the recipients of the biscuits, and no doubt this progressive firm's unique system of advertising will bear good fruit in the future.

PRESENT CONDITION OF THE INDUSTRY.

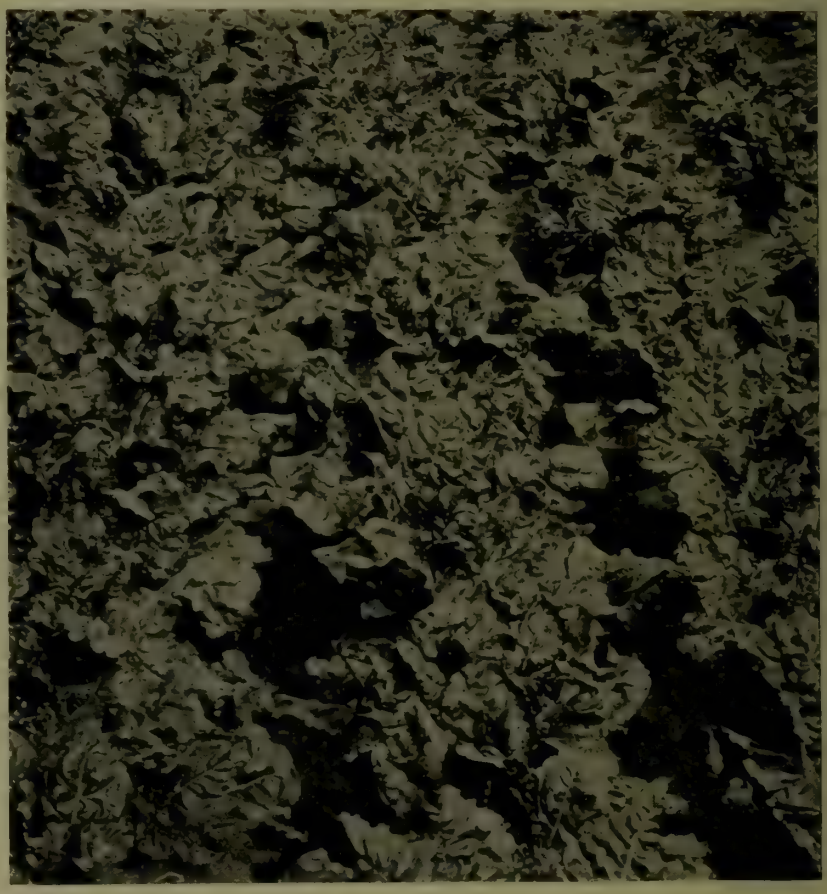
SUGAR was first procured from beets by a German chemist away back in the middle of the eighteenth century. Maggraf was his name and he wrote out the results of his experiments and read them before the Berlin Academy of Sciences. Unfortunately, while he was both enthusiastic and clever, he was poor and absolutely without influence, so that his words fell on unheeding ears.

But a time came when the predictions of Herr Maggraf were recalled and European scientists set to work to perfect a system for procuring sugar from beets. This was when the Emperor Napoleon was devastating the continent and when the sugar-supply from the Indies was cut off. Then necessity became the mother of invention and sugar was successfully derived from beets.



When peace returned to troubled Europe, however, the crude and expensive methods which had been adopted were found to be inadequate to produce a cheap enough product to compete against the cane-sugar, which was once more being brought across the Atlantic. This time scientists did not give up the struggle, and by slow degrees they succeeded in building up a home-industry, which eventually ousted the imported article from the field. Only in England was the industry viewed with contempt, mainly because of the English capital that had been invested in the cane-sugar fields of the Indies.

But in face of the European competition the West-Indian planters have not given way nor have there been lacking scientists to support the cause of cane-sugar. The struggle between cane and beet sugar is still continuing and it remains to be seen which shall conquer.

Experiments on this side of the Atlantic began about 1830 in the United States. Factory after factory was put up, but all proved failures for many years. Still, patience has had its reward and in recent years an industry of great importance has sprung up in the United States. The people and the Government have realized the importance of keeping the hundred millions of cash which they annually pay for imported sugar for circulation in their own country. The people are supporting the home-industry and the Government is keeping up experimental stations and is making close investigations. Factories are now in existence from Maine to California.

Some 25 years ago an attempt was made in Quebec to follow the example of the European nations and manufacture sugar at home. A series of unsuccessful experiments covering a great many years culminated in the removal of a factory from Farnham, Quebec, to Rome, N.Y., about five or six years ago. Its want of success was largely due to lack of capital, poor management and the apathy of the farmers. This was in face of the Government bounties granted in 1892 and subsequent years. The bounty paid was $1 per 100 lb. and the first payment aggregated $23,767. In 1893, $20,568 was paid. In 1894, $7,766, and in 1895, $29,449. In 1895 the bounty was reduced to 75c. per 100 lb., but no payment was made, the industry being dead.

Though the beet-sugar industry has been before the people of Ontario for several years, during which time sugar-beets in small patches have been grown in many counties with medium success, it was only in 1900 that the Provincial Government took up the subject in earnest and directed that special experiments be made. Professor Shuttleworth, of the Ontario Agricultural College, accordingly conducted experiments in three neighborhoods, Newmarket, Aylmer and Welland. The results showed beyond the shadow of a doubt that both soil and climate of many parts of Ontario were admirably adapted to the growth of sugar-beets of high quality and tonnage.

A HEALTHY BEET PATCH.

In 1901 the experiments were resumed in 15 localities and proved even more successful than those of the preceding year. So much so, that Professor Shuttleworth wrote in his report to the Minister of Agriculture, "The experiments of these two years in the cultivation of sugar-beets conclusively demonstrate the adaptability of this crop to our soil and climate, and indicate the probability of the cultivation of the beet for sugar production becoming within the next ten years rather extensive in Ontario."

During the past year four factories have been erected in Ontario. These belong to the Wiarton Beet-Sugar Manufacturing Company of Wiarton, the Wallaceburg Sugar Company of Wallaceburg, the Dresden Sugar Company of Dresden, and the Ontario Sugar Company of Berlin, with capacities respectively of 350, 700, 600 and 600 tons. At the same time in 1901 no less than 4,800 acres of beets were cultivated in Western Ontario to supply the Michigan factories. Now that the Ontario factories are in operation, this growth will doubtless be utilized at home.

Up in Raymond, Alberta, a factory is to be erected next year, which its promoters hope will be a huge success. They believe the conditions in Southern Alberta to be highly suitable for the growth of the sugar-beet. The company organized for the carrying on of the work is capitalized at about half a million, the building and sheds will occupy ground to the extent of from three to five acres and the daily capacity of the mill will be some 400 tons of beets. There will be in the plant about 20 large boilers running night and day which will mean a consumption of 60 tons of coal. In addition to this a lime-burning apparatus will be installed that will convert 20 tons of lime rock a day. When the concern is running to its expected capacity the annual output of sugar will be in the neighborhood of 10,000,000 lb. annually.

When it is remembered that Canada at present imports all her sugar, amounting to no less than 300,000,000 lb. annually, the benefit to the farmers of the country, when once cheaper sugar can be manufactured at home, will be considerable. It is estimated that to supply this amount of sugar 113,600 acres of land will have to be cultivated, which will mean a value to the farmers of over $5,000,000. Careful cultivation will be necessary, of course, and the best farmer will make most out of the new industry.

Already schemes for the utilization of the by-products of the sugar factories are on foot. One of the most important, over in Germany, is the use of the molasses-like substance that accumulates in the manufacture of the sugar for the making of whiskey. In Ontario Messrs. Gooderham and Walker are interesting themselves in the distilling of this by-product and a company known as the "General Distilling Company, Limited," has been formed with a capital of $600,000. They will use the distilled spirits for mechanical and art purposes only.

Taken all in all, Canada, and especially Ontario, seems to be well adapted for the successful promotion of the beet-sugar and its allied industries. Machinery can be brought in free. Transportation facilities are good. Farming processes are up-to-date and there will soon be a population requiring a greater supply of sugar.

WALLACEBURG BEET-SUGAR FACTORY.

TO give an intelligent description of the immense beet-sugar factory of the Wallaceburg Company is beyond the ability of any but an expert in that line of business. This magnificent structure impressed the writer with being not only one of the largest, but one of the most substantially-constructed plants in Canada.

On inquiring as to the dimensions, I was informed that from one end of the building to the other was a distance of over 1,000 ft., and the site includes 54 acres of land, being located on the banks of the Sydenham River, in the western portion of the town of Wallaceburg. The contractors for this factory, The Kilby Manufacturing Co., of Cleveland, who have built a number of the most successful beet-sugar refineries in the United States, broke ground in October, 1901, and have had a force of from 50 to 350 men up to the present time engaged steadily on the work of completing the refinery. All the foundation work throughout is built of concrete, huge concrete piers supporting the heavy iron columns that bear the weight of the structure and machinery. An idea of how much material has been used can be gained from the fact that over 3,000 carloads of machinery, building material, etc., have been utilized in the erection of this plant.

In going into the main building, which is four storeys high, 270 feet long and 65 feet wide, the writer was impressed with the substantial character of the structure and machinery throughout—all floors and roof being composed of concrete, the framework being made of the heaviest steel and iron used for structural purposes. On reaching the third floor we found 10 immense iron crystallizers weighing 48,000 lb. apiece, and on the same floor there were placed four evaporators which weighed equally as much as the crystallizers. The contractors have saved neither time nor expense from one end of the plant to the other, making many improvements over factories which they had built but a year ago.

A complete electric light system, which furnishes 300 incandescent lamps and 125 arc lamps, was installed, having separate dynamos for day and night service.

In a plant of this size there is a very large quantity of water used each day and they have installed two pumps, each having a capacity of 4,000,000 gallons per day.

Going further, we entered the sugar warehouse, which is a two-storey brick building constructed in the same manner as the main building. This warehouse is 200 ft. long, two storeys high and 65 ft. wide, with a capacity for holding 20,000 barrels of sugar, with all modern appliances for handling barrels. The boiler-house shows you that they contemplate using a great deal of steam, as they have eight large Scotch marine boilers with a total capacity of 2,000 horse-power, using over 100 tons of coal daily. Only a part of the steam generated here is used for power as a considerable amount is used in boiling and refining processes throughout the plant.

A complete and well-equipped machine shop is no unimportant part of this institution, it being very essential that in case of a breakdown as little time as possible may be required to make the necessary repairs and get started again.

In the manufacture of beet-sugar it is necessary to use large quantities of lime in the purifying processes, and, therefore, a large limehouse has been erected with a steel lime kiln 50 ft. high in which to burn the lime rock for this purpose. About two carloads of limestone a day are consumed and this is burned with coke. In an ordinary season's campaign about 500 tons of coke would be consumed, about 10,000 tons of lump bituminous coal and 4,000 tons of limestone.

Then there are the mammoth beet sheds, in which are stored the beets after they have been hauled in by the farmers and the railroads. These sheds are constructed of concrete and iron, in the same substantial manner as the other parts of the factory. There are 10 sheds, each 400 feet long, all under one roof, and are capable of holding from 12,000 to 15,000 tons of beets. Over 100 teams can be unloaded at one time.

A unique part of this plant is their equipment for bringing in sugar-beets by water, the company having supplied themselves with a fleet of 25 scows and a tug, for handling beets they will have grow along the banks of the many streams leading to this point. The beets are conveyed from these scows by elevators driven by electricity, and hoisted up into a large shed built on the dock. All beets are carried from the sheds to the factory by water running through concrete and iron flumes, where they are sliced, and start on their way to be manufactured.

This factory will have a capacity for slicing 700 tons of sugar-beets daily, and will turn out from 125,000 to 150,000 lb. of sugar per day, all of the finest quality of standard granulated.

There will be employed many skilled chemists and mechanics, and the total number of employes on the pay roll will amount to at least 250.

In order to have a full season's run, that is a run of about four months, it would require the beets raised on from 7,000 to to 10,000 acres of land, and from what the writer could learn of the surrounding country, it is believed to be one of the best for producing not only a large tonnage per acre in beets, but will also produce those containing a high percentage of sugar.

This industry without doubt benefits the farming community to a greater extent than it does any other class of people. If we consider that the farmer should raise on an average 10 tons of beets per acre, and would be able to secure $4.50 per ton for his sugar-beets at the factory, this would mean to him $45 per acre for his crop, which he can produce in any fair season, at a cost of about $25 per acre, leaving him a net profit of from $15 to $20 per acre. Where the farmer raises from four to five acres of sugar-beets, he can readily take care of these with the ordinary farm help, and not pay out anything additional for the cultivation of his sugar-beets. In an average season the Sugar Company would pay to the farmers of that vicinity at least $300,000, which, you can readily understand, is a large amount of cash to be distributed in one section, for one kind of crop.

The writer was informed that this plant at Wallaceburg cost over $600,000, and the investors very naturally must feel that it is a business that can be carried on profitably, otherwise they would not have put such an immense sum into this institution. It does seem that this industry should receive the encouragement, not only of the consumers of sugar, but also of the Government, as it means the building of a vast industry in Canada, and keeping within this country immense sums of money that have been sent to foreign countries every year, for a product which can be manufactured at home.

DRESDEN BEET-SUGAR FACTORY.

JUST about one year ago Capt. James Davidson promised the citizens of Dresden, Ont., that he would build the most modern up-to-date sugar factory ever constructed. This promise, it is claimed by The Dresden Sugar Co., Limited, has been fullfilled in every particular. It now remains for the farmer, the grocer, and the Dominion Government to make the sugar industry one of the best enterprises of Canada.

MACHINERY OF THE LATEST TYPE.

The machinery of the plants is of the most modern and effective description. All the latest labor-saving machinery has been installed. Even yet the labor required to run this plant will be enormous. At least 250 men will be required to run the factory every day of 24 hours, working in 12-hour shifts. Before a wheel is turned, or a grain of sugar produced, the outlay by The Dresden Sugar Co., Limited, for its 600-ton fireproof factory, its immense amount of machinery and for real estate, will be over $600,000.

The contractors purchased in Canada all the machinery that could be bought, and the town of Dresden for the past eight months has seen over 200 high-priced mechanics working and spending their money with the merchants.

THE FACTORY.

The factory is of brick, cement floors and steel constructed, making it fireproof. The crystallizing mill is five storeys in height, another section is four storeys high, the sugar storehouse is two storeys high, and in another part of the vast grounds is a handsome two-storey brick and stone office building.

The sugar plant is a little city by itself, containing its own limekilns, where it manufactures from crude lime rock the material used in the clearification of sugar syrups; its own electric-lighting plant; its own machine and tool and blacksmith shops, where the tools used in the factory are manufactured and the repairs made to the vast amount of machinery used in connection with the manufacture of sugar. Everything about the manufacture of sugar is mechanical. From the time the ripe beets are dumped into huge hopper bins in the beet sheds at one end of the grounds of the sugar factory until the white cyrstal product is carried out of the storage house in barrels the hand of man never touches it.

THE BEET SHEDS.

These are of the most modern and approved pattern with a capacity of 15,000 to 18,000 tons of beets. The sheds are 500 ft. long by 250 ft. wide. They are fitted up with improved hopper bins built V shaped at the bottom to prevent the packing of the beets and to facilitate their discharge into the flumes below which will carry them to the slicing machines. The floors of the bins are of wooden slabs with interstices for the passage of air through the beets to prevent the overheating and fermenting.

BOILERS AND ENGINES.

A battery of eight Hicks boilers will furnish power for two immense Corliss engines. One hundred tons of coal daily will be required to feed this immense plant.

Capt. James Davidson, the president of the company, is a self-made man. Every dollar he made was by hard work, lots of energy and good business judgment. He has made a success of everything he ever undertook, and the sugar company, it is to be hoped, will be no exception. He has spent considerable time in Dresden inspecting the installation of the steam pumps, boilers and engines, as he is an expert in that line as well. He is in the prime of life and just celebrated building his one-hundredth boat for the great lakes.

S. J. Fitzsimons, the vice-president, was formerly in the wholesale grocery business in Detroit, Mich., and has had years of experience handling sugars. He will make his headquarters in Dresden and will have charge of selling the sugar to the wholesale grocers of Canada.

James E. Davidson, the treasurer, is a son of Capt. James Davidson, and is associated with him in the shipbuilding business in Bay City.

J. H. Walsh, the secretary, is manager for J. & T. Hurly, of Detroit and Windsor, coal merchants.

The man who should get a good deal of credit for getting this enterprise to Dresden is Mayor Asa Ribble. The company has given him charge of the agricultural department. As that deals directly with the farmer the company feel that they will get good treatment at his hands, for he has the confidence of everybody in his vicinity.

The factory is in charge of Rudolph Stock, an eminent German student of chemistry, who has been connected with the manufacture of sugar for some time both in Germany and the United States. Under his supervision The Dresden Sugar Company, Limited, feel they will be able to turn out as fine granulated sugar as any made in Canada.

TRADING IN FURS TO-DAY.

First of all, when an Indian arrives to trade at a Hudson Bay post, then, furs in the pack must be sorted, silver fox worth $500 separated from cross fox and blue and white worth from $10 down, according to quality, and from common red fox worth less. Twenty years ago it was no unusual thing for the Hudson's Bay Co. to send to England yearly 10,000 cross fox skins, 7,000 blue, 100,000 red, half-a-dozen silver. Few wolf skins are in the trapper's pack, unless particularly fine specimens of brown Arctic and white Arctic, bought as a curiosity, and not for value as skins. Against the wolf the trapper wages war as against a pest that destroys other game, and not for its skin. Next to muskrat, the most plentiful fur will be that of the rabbit or varying hare. Buffalo was once the staple of the hunter. What the buffalo was, the white rabbit is to-day. From it the Indian gets clothing, tepee covers, blankets, thongs, food. From it the white man, who is a manufacturer of furs, gets grey fox, and chinchilla, and seal in imitation. Except one year in seven, when a rabbit plague spares the land by cutting down their prolific numbers, the varying hare is plentiful enough to sustain the Indian.

STARTING.

Ezra Kendall tells a story about riding on a country railroad where the stations were so near together that the train had to begin to stop before it had commenced to start. As a result, the passengers never got anywhere. It was a continual case of coal-up, pull-up, puff-up and back-up.

A great deal depends upon getting well started. Not necessarily after the fashion of a "grand opening" with cigars and drinks all around, and, hic 'round again. Rather not. It can be said of very few successful enterprises that they started with a working majority.

A good start is simply a step forward, with a knowledge of what you are going after and a determination to win at all hazards. Following an upright course with this end in view will win success.

TOBACCO AND CIGARS IN THE GROCERY STORE.

TOBACCOS in a grocery or general store are not difficult lines to handle. By building up a business in them of fair proportions the dealer can always realize a fair profit from their sale, and also bring in many new customers whom, perhaps, he would never see if it were not for the cigars and tobaccos he handled. Besides, the tobacco counter in his store may be made a means of greatly increasing the sales of his other lines of goods. A man coming to buy tobacco will look around, see other things that he wants, and, before leaving, may buy a lot of other goods besides the tobacco.

A COUNTRY MERCHANT

found his experience to be that the farmers would first order tobacco and then proceed to buy their sugars, teas, and other articles required. If they could not get their smoking mixture in one place they would go elsewhere for it, and leave their order where they went.

As a rule, the average grocer or general merchant in the country or small town makes little or no effort to build up a trade in tobaccos and cigars. He is satisfied with the small business he does with his regular customers and perhaps half recognizes the means of drawing custom for other goods. He sees that departmental stores make a success of handling a little of everything, thus centralizing trade, but does not apply it to his business. He fails to recognize the fact that methods that have contributed to the success of other businesses can be adopted by him in a modified way, perhaps to build up his own business. He ought to realize that, by successfully pushing one line in his store, trade in other goods will be always much increased.

TAKE UP LITTLE SPACE.

Tobaccos, cigars and pipes in a store take up little space and are easily looked after as a general rule. The larger the quantities of them handled the greater will be the profit realized in their handling. Thus every man dealing in these articles will find it advantageous to build up his trade in them and study the most successful methods to do so.

A QUESTION OF STOCKS.

A big stock of tobacco and cigars it would not be advisable for a retailer to put in his store when he commences to handle them. He will find it necessary to know what kinds of cigars and tobacco are mostly in demand by the people of the community in which he is doing business. A small stock of smoking and chewing tobaccos, some cigars and a few low-priced pipes would be a good stock to start with.

Having thus made a beginning, the merchant should then build up his trade in them by at the public through the local newspapers, window displays, bulletins, circulars, etc.

A SPECIAL PRICE

on certain lines of tobacco and cigars, well advertised, will attract attention to your store and bring in trade. Thus, many new customers may be brought in, and so the business is made to grow.

A showcase should be set apart in some prominent part of the store with the tobaccos, cigars, etc., that are being pushed. A customer, on going in, sees what he requires and buys. In a few months, by energy and push, a good trade might be built up in any fairly prosperous community.

In handling tobaccos, it is wise to buy just enough to supply current wants. Chewing varieties dry out in a short time, especially in frosty weather if exposed to the cold.

EDUCATE CUSTOMERS.

When a merchant has created a good demand for his smoking material he can, if he likes, educate the tastes of his customers for high-priced tobaccos, smoking mixtures and cigars generally. By inducing his customers to try some new and more expensive brand this can be effected. But, of course, it depends upon the financial position of his customers as to the quality of goods he can induee them to buy. Really high-class cigars are expensive things to stock, and the average country merchant would hardly be able to build up a sufficiently large trade in them to enable him to carry them with profit.

ASSORTMENT OF PIPES.

A storekeeper should not forget to keep on hand an assortment of pipes with his tobaccos. He need not buy many expensive ones. If his stock of tobaccos is not large, a few cheap and medium-priced goods will be found the most suitable for his trade Never run out of pipes, and always keep a fair assortment on hand. With the tobaccos, keep them always before the public, and your business ought to succeed.

CIGARETTES IN HALIFAX.

"Despite the efforts of various societies whose object is to reform, the obliquity of the clergy and the derisive disdain of those who speak from behind pipes or know not the solace of the nicotian weed, the use of cigarettes in Halifax is steadily on the increase." A Herald representative called upon one of the principal tobacco dealers of the city one afternoon recently and made inquiries as to the exact condition of the cigarette trade. The firm's representative said that he thought no person could successfully contradict the fact that the use of cigarettes is decidedly on the increase. In other cities some dealers are of the opinion that people who used to smoke pipes exclusively are now asking for cigarettes—not boys or young fellows, but old smokers. They contend that they have not time to smoke a cigar or pipe after lunch during the day, and the cigarette gives just the short smoke they want. It was merely a matter of convenience. This is not the case in Halifax. The demand for good smoking tobacco is steadily growing.

"Who ever heard of a person who had been in the habit of using a pipe adopting the cigarette?" said the merchant talked with. "It is all nonsense; the consumption of cigarettes has increased within the last 12 months 15 or 20 per cent., and the old smokers are using their pipe all the same, with the only difference that there is more tobacco of a better quality being used today than ever."—Herald, Halifax.

INCREASE IN TOBACCO CULTURE.

Tobacco culture is increasing everywhere, not only in the area of land under tobacco cultivation, but in the actual number of countries which can fairly lay claim to the title of tobacco-producing States. Formerly Cuba, the Southern States of America, and the Philippines were responsible—at all events in name—for practically all the tobacco consumed in the British Isles, the Eastern products grouped under the name of Turkish having then no great vogue with us. Then India joined the list, Sumatra began producing her "wrappers," and Borneo, Burma, the Canaries, and other countries soon made their appearance in the price catalogues. Development has since taken place all along the line, and it would be interesting to compare the present output of Egyptian cigarettes—chiefly made of Greek tobacco, it may be remarked en parenthese—with that of a score of years ago. The production of Mexican tobacco, according to a recently-issued consular report, has lately increased to a very large extent, owing to the starting of new plantations in the States of Vera Cruz, Oaxaca, and elsewhere, and the amount of leaf estimated for this year's gathering is not less than 17,000,000 lb. Last year Mexico produced 307,000,000 packets of cigarettes and 120,000,000 cigars, and the manufacturers and planters claim that the quality has so greatly improved that it is almost, if not quite, equal to the best products of Cuba. Nor are our colonies unrepresented in the record of this expansion of a world-wide industry. Queensland, we learn from the official reports, is now both a producer and manufacturer of tobacco on a quite respectable scale. Her farmers cured nearly 500,000 lb. of leaf last season, and her six tobacco factories manufrctured 612,350 lb. of tobacco, 28,857 of cigarettes, and 1,463 lb. of cigars.—Home and Colonial Mail.

MARGUERITE CIGARS

You'll never find the quality to vary from the standard that has made them famous, and if you send for a trial order, it will represent that standard.

A lot of Grocers have taken the hint since we commenced using this space, and have added "Marguerites" to their stock. There are others however who are skipping lots of profit by not handling them. We want to do business with those "others."

Are you one of them ?

WHERE YEAST IS MADE.

BEAUTY will give pleasure forever. This fact has been recognized everywhere and business men are now realizing more than ever before the power of beauty over the human mind. So in equipping their offices and places of business, these businessmen have consulted very often and to a great extent their æsthetic tastes. Numerous examples of this can be given, but we will endeavor at present to describe one establishment where care has been taken in its equipment to make things harmonize and look handsome. The accompanying illustration shows the office and factory of the E. W. Gillett Company Limited, 32-34 Front street west, Toronto. THE CANADIAN GROCER had the pleasure of being shown over these premises a few days ago by Mr. W. H. Seyler, sales-manager of this company, and found everything conducted on a convenient and handsome scale.

The offices of the company are finished with polished quarter-cut oak, and the desks, sample cabinets, telephone and speaking-tube appliances are modern and in perfect condition, everything being kept clean and neat. The office of the manager, Mr. Wm. Dobie, is connected with the rest of the building by a complete system of telephone tubes. The entry office and salesroom is presided over by Mr. W. H. Seyler (who was with The Eby, Blain Company, Limited, for many years), and is equipped with handsome showcases of up-to-date pattern. Mr. George Hepburn, the secretary of the company, presides over the general business offices, which comprise correspondence, stationery and private dictation rooms, and the entire affair is lighted at night by hundreds of incandescent electric lights which produce a very brilliant effect, and show the place off to great advantage.

Back of the offices on the ground floor is the general stock-room and shipping-room. In the basement are the engine-room and storerooms for the raw material, caustic soda, cream of tartar, etc. The fifth story is where Gillett's perfumed and powdered lye is made. In a large room, the caustic soda room, the soda which comes in 750 to 800 lb. drums, is taken out, prepared, run into tins, sealed and heaped in a large pile for several days. On this floor are the laboratory and the baking powder mixing-room where a revolving cylinder mixes 1,000 lb. of baking powder at a time. Cartons for the yeast cake here are turned out 10 at a time by a machine which makes 60 per minute.

On the floor beneath are the large mash tub and mixing machinery for preparing "Royal" yeast. After the yeast is prepared, it is carted to the floor above on trucks and fed into the yeast machine which presses it into cakes, and stamps each with the name "Royal." No less than 1,400 cakes are made with every revolution of the machine, which drops them on trays to be carted to the drying-room, which has a capacity of 15,000,000 yeast cakes and covers two floors, extending the length of the building. Three batches of yeast a week are turned out and each batch, taking six loaves of bread as the minimum amount which can be produced from one cake (the maximum is 14), can produce 2,600,000 loaves of bread, an almost incredible number. Where does it all go? In the packing and labelling room the cartons are filled with six cakes each of "Royal" yeast, and labelled by expert young women. In this room also the baking powder and cream of tartar are weighed out by an automatic weighing machine into cans, labelled and boxed for shipment. Some 60 hands are employed in this room and carefully arranged is every detail looking to the speedy preparation of the goods. Equipped with up-to-date weighing machines and packing and labelling apparatus, a very large quantity of goods is put up every day.

In 1886, Mr. Wm. Dobie, general manager and treasurer of the company, opened up the Canadian factory for E. W. Gillett, of Chicago, and it was through his consistent hard work that the business has grown to the enormous proportions it has reached to-day.

On May 1 of this year the present company purchased the business from Mr. Gillett and was formed into a limited liability company with a capital of $350,000. Since then the development of the concern has been rapid. There are more than 300 shareholders, scattered all over the Dominion, and everyone is either a wholesale or retail merchant, all of whom, it is needless to say, work hard for the firm. The organization of this company was due entirely to the efforts of Mr. Dobie and reflects great credit on him for his business foresight. In him the shareholders may rest assured that their interests will be faithfully and properly looked after.

Altogether, the visit to this factory was of especial pleasure to THE GROCER and it can do nothing better than suggest to its readers that it would be to them of great advantage to visit the birthplace of "Royal" yeast whenever they are in Toronto.

QUIETNESS IN BUSINESS.

By E. H. O.

BLUSTER and success are business antitheses. As the still streams runs deep, the calm equipoise of a mind well-balanced finds expression in no gurgling bustle. Quietness of demeanor is essential to that perfect grasp of situation which masters great endeavors.

The best machinery runs smoothly. The noiseless revolutions of mighty drive-wheels, not the wheezy old steam-whistles, propel the great manufacturing enterprise. It is the quiet, yet alert, not the gas-escaping, steam-exploding character, who will succeed. That perfect self-possession, not disturbed by chance interruptions, is capital more valuable than dollars and cents.

Quietness is not opposed to enthusiasm. Quietness, in its true business sense, is enthusiasm guided and controlled — a mighty mastery of energy that will not be subdued.

Quietness will succeed because it is universally sympathetic. Never unduly elated, never excessively depressed, cool and collected, every situation that may arise is not a master, but a slave. The quiet man is too strong, and too broad in outlook, to be biased. Prejudices arise through a disturbed perspective. Quietness adjusts the essential relationship of things.

In quietness, in the preservation of that calculative balance lies the greatest advantage of experience. Maturity means self-knowledge, the proper adjustment of self to environment means a quiet, orderly behavior that is invaluable.

The weakness of armies lies in being surprised, in being taken off guard. A business man cannot maintain a close watch on himself and on his business unless he preserves a constancy of guard against surprises. The mental equipoise means conservation of business interests as well as preservation of energy.

The even, orderly, well-filled tire will bear the rider's weight — a sudden expansion of one portion produces the blow-out prejudicial to the whole wheel. The loss of a man's whole business may be produced by an explosion at a critical moment, by the failure to maintain a business reticence, by an undue excitement at a juncture of supreme importance.

Uneasiness, restlessness, nervous excitement do not inspire confidence. I'll trust the quiet man ; he is more apt to be the honest man ; one thing is sure, he is the sane man. A man who is ever the same will not miss the chance to advance my interests, nor will he plunge me into adversity by a feverish recklessness, yes, he will get my patronage.

The quiet man is not the blind man, but the wide-awake, not the offensive, but the courteous. I had occasion the other day to go into two large manufactvring establishments in a large city. I wished to inquire after the state of trade in their branches of business. I repeated what was essentially the same question in each case. Were I to go into business now as a retailer, I know which should have my patronage.

"Yes," said one, "I'm busy, but I can spare five minutes. Do you know I often learn little things from you papermen—thoughts suggested, and then, again, it helps the trade."

The other was quite perturbed at first, even inclined to the irascible, at my presumption in interrupting him—him the general manager. Then, with a sarcasm which might have been effective had it not been so stale, he said :

"Life is so short, you know"—I don't like these short-lived men—"I haven't got time," they say. Well, I'd like to know if they haven't all the time there is. I know business men are pestered. I am not pleading for an open sesame to general managers, but what I do say is "keep cool." Even from unexpected sources you may learn a great deal. You can never tell when you may hear something to your advantage. With a sober judgment, and a cool head you can size up a man in half the time it takes you to recover from that flustering excitement which avails not, but rather weakens.

Quietness is not synonymous with laziness. One doesn't need to make a noise to be busy. An uproar impedes rather than helps progress. The business man should have people's attention directed to his business, not to himself. As much as possible the business should speak for itself, and he, as a factor, should be eliminated. Let him mould the business by his individuality, let him stamp the character of his goods with his own worth and personality, but do not let him put himself forward as a rival attraction to the general public. The more he is noticed, the less are his goods noted, the less is the volume of his business. No public can watch two things at once. Either the manager must show his ability by sinking himself into the business, by making the best that is within him a portion of the business also, or the manager, by noisy business methods, by clumsy and disturbing manners, must divert attention from the business to himself to the detriment of the business and to his own shame.

To the repining it may be sad, but to the active, quiet business man it is time that he who seeks his own advancement must lose his own identity, or better still, express his own identity through the impetus and encouragement given the business.

CONFECTIONERY IN THE GROCERY STORE.

AMONG the grocery trade there has been a very noticable improvement in facilities for the selling of confectionery, and much more attention is now paid to this end than formerly, by grocers generally.

There is no line of goods which will quicker respond in additional sales or show more profitable results for care and attention to the keeping of the right kind of stock and the proper displaying and facilities for selling the goods, such as a candy scale, and proper packages to hand the goods out to the customer.

Chocolate creams and soft candy should not be put in paper bags—a regular candy package should always be used. The glass jars must always be bright and clean, and should always be kept well filled. Some lines of goods are perishable and all are better for being fresh made, therefore it requires careful and frequent buying in order to receive the best results. Grocers have always sold some candy, and the additional trade they are now securing does not detract from the regular trade of confectionery stores, for in many cases if their customers did not see the goods and buy them when purchasing their groceries they would have probably not have had their attention drawn to them and consequently no sweet goods would have been bought.

A prominent confectioner said he attributed the growth of the candy trade to this fact, the grocers were undoubtedly selling much more goods than heretofore.

MERCHANTS SHOULD ORGANIZE.

BY A WELL-WISHER.

THERE is no guide to the value of any service except that put upon it by the purchaser.

The reward of a merchant or commercial traveller must depend upon the value put upon his services by those willing to pay for them. Where there are artificial obstructions they affect such valuations, but seldem to a great extent.

The natural force of competition is certain to triumph ultimately.

Time has fully arrived for the seller to realize that his merchandise equalizes the buyer's cash.

An independent buyer does not expect to get something for nothing, but he strenuously objects being taxed with a bad debt that he was in no wise instrumental in creating.

The day is not far distant when exchanges will be conducted strictly upon cash basis, with the removal of many of today's charges upon costs. If a man obtains a livelihood without producing it, some other man or set of men must produce it for him.

Merchants are now beginning to recognize that they have too long allowed a spirit of petty jealousy and rivalry to dominate their actions, which provoked unhealthy competition, whilst the various sections of trade only fought for their own hand.

Traders' associations and organizations are now, however, rising up on every hand, and the benefits of united action and continued effort are becoming more recognized and appreciated every day.

If merchants would fraternize more freely with each other they would create a bond of union and sympathy which would cement them together and would tend to strengthen the position of both without losing their individuality or independence of thought or action.

A GOOD FOLLOW-UP SYSTEM.

The follow-up system of the retail store is wholly dependent upon its attendants, but where these are men or women of intelligence, personality and tact it is possible to give the establishment individuality and link it with the customer in relations more closely than those usually existing between clerk and patron. Rogers, Peet & Co., New York, according to Printers' Ink, provide their salesmen with personal cards bearing their own names and those of the firm, and where possible to do so without giving offence the salesmen give the customers their cards and endeavor to obtain their names and addresses. At certain seasons of the year these customers are followed up with personal letters:

New York, September, 19, 1902.

Mr. THEODORE AUGUSTUS, 10 Spruce street City.

Dear Sir,—Summer is gone, and you begin to look up your old friends again. Rogers, Peet & Co.'s fall clothing, fall furnishings, fall hats and shoes are worth looking at. Won't you have a look? Yours truly,

A. D. SANDER.

These letters are all faultless imitations of typewriter, and are personally addressed and signed by the salesman. They can hardly fail of making an impression upon the man who receives one.

A TRIUMPH IN CONDENSED FOOD.

WE are apt to look upon that excellent fluid beef, "Bovril," as an English invention altogether, but the fact is, as many are aware, that it is of Canadian origin, being discovered by the late Mr. J. Lawson Johnston, the inventor of the once famous Johnston's "Fluid Beef." The latter gradually disappeared from the market when Mr. Johnston, after much experimenting, found a way to improve upon it, and "Bovril" took its place. Mr. Johnston, however, seeing that in the new preparation he had the ideal concentrated food, sold out his business in Canada and moved to London, where a company was formed with a capital of £2,000,000. Its merits were recognized immediately by the people in the British Isles, and, as the demand increased and branches were to be established in various parts of the Empire, the Canadian business was again taken over, and is now one of the most important and prosperous of all these branches.

The head office and factory is in London, a magnificent building, and "one of the most beautifully appointed in that city," to quote a returned Canadian visitor. In this London factory one whole floor is devoted entirely to the manufacture of "Bovril" and compressed rations for the British Government. During the South-African war an immense quantity of "Bovril" was used by the army, its wonderful strength-giving properties having called forth the heartiest recommendations from one of the leading surgeons.

It has been ascertained by many scientific tests that "Bovril" contains all the valuable principles to be found in the primest beef; it is, indeed, the beef itself in a finely divided state, but so condensed that no less than 40 lb. of the primest ox beef is used in the manufacture of 1 lb. of "Bovril" extract. Microscopical analysis reveals the absence from beef extracts and beef teas of the vital principle of nourishing flesh foods, viz., the albumenoids; whereas in "Bovril" their presence in maximum quantity is demonstrated.

The company has recently been appointed, by special warrant, as purveyors to His Majesty King Edward VII.

The grocery trade can stock no line for the coming cold weather season which can so readily be turned into money as "Bovril." Its warmth-giving qualities render it especially acceptable. It imparts a natural glow of warmth and health without which the system is always an easy prey to colds and chills, not to speak of the germs of disease ever present in the atmosphere, in damp, unwholesome places, in badly ventilated offices and workrooms. The clever and extensive advertising done by the company have brought "Bovril" to the notice of all possible customers, and, unlike some other goods, it requires no "pushing" to effect sales.

STONEWARE SPECIALTIES FOR RETAILERS.

The Toronto Pottery Co., 75-81 Cottingham street, Toronto, started business a little over three years ago, and for the first time marketed a full line of first-class stoneware and stoneware specialties at popular prices. How well they are succeeding in gaining the confidence of the general trade is evidenced by the fact that during this year they have nearly doubled their output over the corresponding period of 1901. The stock is the largest as well as the best assorted in the Dominion, enabling them to give orders reasonably prompt and careful attention.

In this issue the attention of dealers is directed more particularly to stoneware meat tubs for preserving meats and vegetables. These tubs are strong and perfectly sanitary. They are not affected by salt, brine or acids, and, with ordinary care, will last a lifetime. The price quoted is a trifle higher than the cost of a wooden barrel, but when purity and cleanliness are taken into consideration, the tubs are much the cheaper article.

Aside from stoneware, this concern offers a complete line of vitrified sewer and culvert pipe, flue linings, chimney tops, fire brick and fire clay.

CANNED GOODS { Historically and Practically Considered.

CANNED goods at the present time are largely handled in the grocery store, and information as to their buying, keeping and selling should interest every grocer in the land, whether he be wholesaler or only the keeper of a "corner" store in a country village.

ANCIENT CANNED GOODS.

It is curious that the great modern canning industry is the outcome of discoveries at Pompeii, where a short time after the excavations were started someone found in the pantry of a house many jars of preserved figs. These were opened and the fruit was found after a lapse of 1,700 or 1,800 years to be in excellent condition. It was noticed that the fruit had been put in the jars in a heated state, the jars being partly closed with an opening left in the top for the steam to escape and then sealed with wax. A party of Americans made the discovery and the year after started the canning industry in the United States, where since it has grown to immense proportions. The process is similar to that employed 20 centuries ago.

Strange, isn't it, that we should be so much benefited by the discovery of the old ruins of Pompeii?

CANNED GOODS IN CANADA.

Under the term canned goods come fruits, vegetables, fish and meats preserved in tins. The canning of fruits and vegetables is a big Canadian industry, and the yearly pack of salmon on the Coast of British Columbia is watched with interest throughout the civilized world. Large quantities of salmon are exported from there to the British market and thence distributed to many lands. The annual sales of the product on the market of London set the price for the British Empire that is to prevail throughout the year. Quite a fleet of vessels are utilized for the conveyance of salmon to the Old Country.

BUYING CANNED GOODS.

The majority of grocers buy their year's supply of fish, fruits or vegetables at one time. Early in the year, sometimes before the seed is sown, or the salmon have commenced to run up the rivers of the Pacific Coast, the canneries take orders from their customers for the year's supply of the article. If the crop or catch falls short of the estimates the orders thus taken are filled first and the balance are put on the market. If the shortage is very great only a percentage of the orders are filled. As when it was apparent that there would be a large shortage in the tomato crop this season, the canneries notified their customers that they would only be able to fill part of their orders, about 20 per cent. in some cases.

So the orders in general are booked before the product has reached its full growth and then the grocer generally makes his contracts at a low figure for his year's stock of the article. Sometimes the dealer prefers buying after the crop has been harvested, taking his chances as to whether he will be able to procure the goods when he wants them that the price will be all right.

In buying from samples, for instance, tomatoes, a good way to choose the goods is to select those that are solidly packed with not too much liquid. They should be sweet to the taste and be of good red color. Corn, to be good, should be white, tender and of fine flavor. Peas of good quality are tender, without softness, and the can should be well filled.

THE BRANDS TO BUY.

The buyer of salmon and other fish usually selects those brands which are well known and have been tested and found to be meritorious. In buying the goods in advance, the purchasers as a rule follow this latter method, as they of course are unable to see samples of the product before it is fully grown in the gardens or orchards. let alone being preserved in the cans.

All new brands should be well tested and only those that are of proved merit placed on the shelves of the store. The good brands should be stood by and the poorer ones weeded out. It is easy to find out the most satisfactory brands, and in making purchases only those should be bought again at the end of the year. New lines generally can be bought cheaper than the old ones that have earned a good reputation for themselves. If they are good the man who tries them is safe, if bad, he has to bear the loss, both in the value of the goods, and in his trade.

KEEP IN A COOL, DRY PLACE.

After they are bought and delivered the dealer should keep his canned goods in a cool, dry place. Too much moisture is a bad thing for them and frost damages them very much, rendering them unfit for sale. A good deal of poisoning has in past years resulted from the use of canned goods, and in opening the cases the grocer should be very careful and reject all those that appear in any way bad. If anything is wrong with the goods the can will be bulged out. This is a sign that the contents have fermented. It is easily detected by placing a lead pencil across the head of the can, whereby any bulge in it may be perceived.

In fish, meats, etc., fermentation spoils the goods completely and they should never be sold. Fruits may often be restored by being reboiled, but it is generally not safe to sell them to customers as they might not understand how to treat them and trouble might follow.

WEIGHT AND QUALITY.

Complaints sometimes are made that the goods are light in weight or that the quality is not up to the mark. The dealer should weigh the cans of the different brands when they come in and see that their weight holds out. In case the quality of the goods is poor four or five complaints ought to make the grocer investigate, and if found poor the articles should be sold off at a reduced rate as damaged or inferior goods. The grocer should endeavor to earn the reputation of selling his goods just as they are represented to be, and no inferior stuff, through carelessness, should be sent out as superior goods.

CANNED GOODS ON THE SHELF.

The grocer usually keeps the shelves of his store well filled with his canned goods and well dusted. As soon as any are sold off the shelves they should be replaced. Many grocers make a nice display of their canned goods along the top shelf of their store. The labels should be kept clean and the cans well dusted.

WINDOW AND INTERIOR DISPLAYS.

To push canned goods, the dealer generally has recourse to window displays, interior displays, bulletin boards, dodgers distributed liberally amongst the public, and sometimes by cutting the prices of some line and advertising it extensively. Canned goods are well adapted for display purposes by reason of their easieness in handling, bright labels and shape and size. Windows may be dressed in a great variety of ways, and price tickets ought to be put in the windows with the goods, which, if they are as they ought to be, should increase in popularity with the consumer. An increased trade in canned goods means to the grocer an increased number of customers generally, and many customers mean many sales of other goods besides.

Canned goods may be made a good drawing card to a grocery store, and that without cutting their prices too much either, and demoralizing the market.

EFFECT OF HIGH PRICES ON SALES.

A question that naturally arises to every dealer is to what extent the high prices affect their sales. Tomatoes will be very dear all this season and scarce. Will this curtail their consumption to a greater extent than the shortage in the crop should warrant? The opinion of the majority of the grocers interviewed by THE CANADIAN GROCER was that their sale would be slower than usual, but to what extent it was deemed impossible to estimate. The fall is the season when the demand for canned goods is lighest, and so no reliable means of determining what their sales would likely average during the year exist. Everyone expects that he will have no difficulty in selling at a fair profit any tomatoes he may have in stock.

Of course, owing to the shortage of supplies, the margin of profit ought to be larger than usual, but as to how much it should be there were many different opinions. A well-known retailer was going to sell goods that cost him 8 at 10c., another expected to get 12c. and a third even talked of 14c. for the same article. As to that, the dealer will have to exercise his own judgment, and be guided by the demand for the article at the prices at which he was selling it.

THE WRONG LABEL.

Canned goods are not always what they seem. Sometimes the labels promise one kind of fruit but when the tins are opened another kind is found inside. A case of this kind happened lately. Albert Harris, a general merchant at Woodbridge, ordered a lot of canned peas of a well known and popular brand. They came labeled peas all right, but when some of the tins were opened they were found to contain excellent strawberries. As canned strawberries are worth much more than peas there was no complaint from the purchasers who were not slow to order more "peas." The lot was not long in selling and everyone was satisfied.

It is an easy matter in a canning factory to make a mistake of this kind and in this case it is very likely some other merchant got peas instead of strawberries. His customers would make complaints to him and he would not feel very well disposed towards the manufacturer whose employes made the mistake.

SIMPLE PROCESS FOR CANNING CORN.

A simple process for canning corn, according to an exchange, is as follows: "Green corn is easily canned. If the ears are purchased in the husks these should be carefully removed so as to break the corn grain as little as possible, as the loss of the milk will depreciate the product in the market. After the husking has been completed the ears should be laid out on an extended table for convenient handling. The imperfect ears should be removed. The grains are then quickly cut from the cob with a sharp blade. After being so cut the corn should then be put through a fan which blows away the silks and the small pieces of husks which lie between the rows of grains on the cob. Take the cleaned grains from the fan and pour them into a hopper having its mouth opening into a room below. Below the mouth of this hopper have a wide sheet iron perforated with holes about three inches in diameter or size of the cans to be used. Place a can under each of these holes. With a clean strip of wood rake the falling corn into the cans. After filling the cans, dip them in a solution of salt and water. Then cap them. Having done this immerse the capped cans in boiling water for 40 minutes. Then solder the pin hole shut and boil again for a shorter time. After this let the cans cool. The goods are then ready for labeling and packing."

Trade Marks and the Laws Governing Them.

BY EDGERTON R. CASE, Patent Solicitor, Toronto.

THE subject of trade marks is a most interesting, and, to manufacturers and merchants, a vital question. All persons engaged in trade have a desire to conserve unto themselves the fruits of their legitimate efforts. From very early times men have made use of seals and other emblems to indicate ownership. In fact, the use of these devices is coeval with the birth of traffic. Without a recognized and well-established law by means of which men are guaranteed the exclusive use of marks or devices to distinguish their goods from those of another manufacturer, there would be no guarantee of a manufacturer receiving adequate returns for money he would invest in his business. When a trade mark has been used for many years by a manufacturer or a merchant, and indicates to the the public that the article it is attached to is of first-class quality, this trade mark is a valuable asset. Not only have men from early ages marked the fruits of their toil with their own paricalar device, or mark, but they also have marked, or branded, whole flocks and herds, so as to indicate to whom the animals belonged. As is well known, this custom is very common on our sheep ranches and among the Indians in the Northwest.

Among the ancient Egyptians, Greeks and Romans sign boards were extensively used, which became distinctive proprietary marks. In Herculaneum and Pompeii have been discovered many different signs to indicate the occupation of different persons who lived in those cities. Thus there have been found a goat, the sign of a dairy; a mule driving a mill, the sign of a baker; and, at the door of a school, the not very seductive sign of a boy undergoing a birching at the hand of the master. In the former of these cities, at the door of a shoemaker was painted a Cupid carrying a pair of ladies' shoes, one on his head, the other in his hand. As is well-known, 1,000 years or so ago very few people could read; at least, this was an accomplishment that the common people did not possess, and, as a merchant sold more goods to illiterate people than he did to educated people, he had to avail himself of rebuses by means of which he made his name known. For instance, a hare and a bottle stood for Harebottle, and two cocks for Cox. As it is well known, Luther was generally represented by the symbol of a swan, and hence "The Bible and Swan" was the characteristic sign of an inn in honor of Luther.

Watermarks on paper are also used as proprietary signs. It may not be generally known, but a sort of watermark is that shown in the securities issued by the United States in which threads of various-colored floss silk are incorporated into paper during the process of its manufacture. Such threads constitute proprietary marks of the Government, and it is a highly penal offence for any person to have such paper, illegally, in his control or possession. A very curious case was tried many years ago, relative to a will. It was believed that the will was false, but, as it was so well executed, this belief could not be substantiated. While the counsel for the plaintiff was studying the document carefully one night, he happened to hold it between his eyes and a candle, and immediately discovered that the date the paper of the will was manufactured in was shown by a watermark. As this date was subsequent to the execution of the alleged will, its illegality was easily proven.

It is curious that the Chinese excel in the institution of commercial guarantee by means of trade marks. Nearly all the goods exported from China are sealed by bands of paper bearing the particular mark of the exporter. Some time ago a cargo of tea arrived at London from Canton, but what was the amazement of the purchasers to find that the boxes were filled with rice straw! The vessel and cargo were forthwith sent back to China. Upon the arrival of the ship at that port, the Hongs were immediately assembled and each one recognized his own mark. It appears that the men who were engaged to load the tea were thieves, and, in place of loading the proper chests on to the vessel, they shipped same to a nearby island and substituted the chests filled with rice-straw in place thereof. Notwithstanding the loss, and in order to maintain their reputation for integrity, the Chinese merchants made it good.

The world-wide importance of trade marks has been recognized by the leading countries in the world from the fact that they joined together, and, on March 20, 1883, at Paris, France, formed what is well known as the International Union for the Protection of Industrial Property.

Manufacturers, and those who use trade marks, would save themselves a great deal of unnecessary trouble and expense if they were to make diligent inquiry as to the appositeness of a particular device they wish to adopt as distinctive of articles in which they deal. It is not every word or name that can be registered as a valid trade mark. The device used must not be descriptive of the goods. For instance, in ex. p. Kenyon decided September 9, 1902, the words "Catarrhal Jelly" as a trade mark for a jelly-like remedy for catarrh were held to be descriptive and not registerable. In case an application is made to register a trade mark that resembles one already registered, this application would be rejected. This was the case in ex. p. Grossmith decided September 2, 1902. Grossmith wished to register the word "Florodora" for a particular class of goods, but was refused registration in view of the prior registered mark "Floridena." It is well to point out here that before a device can exist as a trade mark, it must be attached to a vendible commodity.

The protection afforded a manufacturer by a valid trade mark does not extend only to prohibiting the use by any person of the same mark in connection with the same class of goods, but it also protects him from unfair competition, as is set forth in the following case: Fuller v. Huff, et al, decided August 21, 1900.

1. Term "Health Food" means healthy food or health-producing food, is therefore descriptive of quality, and cannot be a technical trade mark, either with or without the word "Company" any more than the words "Nutritious Wine" could be a valid trade mark.

2. The law of unfair competition is that when a mark, name, or phrase has been so used by a person in connection with his business or articles of merchandise as to become identified therewith, and indicate to the public that such articles emanate from him, the law will prohibit others from so using it as to lead purchasers to believe that the articles they sell are his, or as to obtain the benefit of the market he has built up thereunder.

3. The courts in considering the use by competitors of the name under which a rival has previously gained a business reputation, although the name is not strictly a trade-mark, have attached great importance to long-continued and exclusive use, and have demanded a higher order of commercial integrity, and have frowned upon all filching attempts to obtain the reputation of another.

4. If a trade-name has been so identified with the business of a manufacturer as to inform the public that the name upon goods means that they are the product of that person, and another adopts and displays the name, it is not material that he has not also adopted the particular dress in which his predecessor has presented his goods.

AN ADVOCATE OF COMMERCIAL RETALIATION.

ANDREW CARNEGIE, the multi-millionaire, has a penchant for saying things which attract world-wide attention. None of his contemporaries possibly has it to a higher degree. Like a few other men whose words are eagerly gathered up and scattered broadcast by the daily press, Mr. Carnegie, no doubt, essays to pose as an authority on subjects upon which he is less qualified to speak or write than a good many others who, however, would attract no attention did they give public expression to them. Money, we are told, talks. At any rate, he who possesses great wealth will certainly be listened to when he talks. And this is the explanation of the readiness with which nearly everything Mr. Carnegie says, no matter upon what subject, is flashed from one continent to another.

But whatever subjects upon which he may not be qualified to speak, it is certain that he is entitled to attention when he gives publicity to his views on business matters.

A good many may question the methods by which he has accumulated his millions, but the fact that the measure of his commercial success transcends that of most men in any age stamps him as a great business man. On business matters he is therefore an authority. And when he dwells upon them, it is better that we should turn a listening and not a deaf ear towards him.

A few days ago, when delivering his installation address as Chancellor of St. Andrew's University, he startled the political as well as the commercial world by calling upon the Emperor of Germany to undertake the formation of an United States of Europe in order to meet the competition of the United States of America. He meant, of course, a commercial and not a political union.

It is not the first time such an union has been proposed in recent years, but it is the first time that the head of a great State has been, publicly at any rate, requested to take up the burden. And certainly not by anyone who is to all intents and purposes a citizen of the American Union. A couple of years ago Count Goluchowski, the Austro-Hungarian Minister of Foreign Affairs, pleaded for such an union. Whether or not the appeal of Mr. Carnegie will be more successful than that of the Austro-Hungarian Minister remains to be seen. But one thing is certain, it will give added interest to a subject which already has a good many advocates in Europe.

It is quite possible that the consummation of an United States of Europe, within the confines of which low tariffs or free trade toward each other may rule, and high tariffs against the United States of America dominate, will never be realized; but at the same time its realiztion is not impossible. Whether or not, therefore, Mr. Carnegie's remarks stir up the countries of Europe to take common action against the United States of America, they should further open the eyes of the latter to the fact that their present policy of industrial exclusiveness threatens to array their European customers against them. And it is, of course, to Europe that the United States exports the greater part of their surplus products.

To the European continental countries to which Mr. Carnegie made his appeal, the United States export more than $500,000,000 worth of products, while their export trade with Europe, taking into account what they send to Great Britain, aggregates over $1,000,000,000. What is termed the favorable balance of trade is nearly $250,000,000 with continental Europe, and nearly $500,000,000 including Great Britain in the valuation.

It is a well-known economic law that "when the produce of any particular branch of industry exceeds what the demand of the country requires, the surplus must be sent abroad and exchanged for something for which there is a demand at home."

The United States ignore this law. The more they develop industrially the more they need foreign markets for their surplus. They recognize this, but they do not want to buy anything in return. And they frame their tariff with that end in view. The consequence is that on the continent of Europe, in Great Britain and in Canada a spirit of retaliation is developing. And now Mr. Carnegie, who has profited as much as anyone by the policy of exclusiveness, is giving the nations lessons in the art of retaliation and industrial exclusiveness.

EXPORTS OF JAPAN TEA.

THERE has been a considerable falling off in the shipments of Japan tea from Yokohama and Higo to Canada during the past year. For the present season, 1902-3, the shipments to Canada were 1,681,629 from Yokohama, and 579,792 from Hiogo, or a total of 2,261,421 lb. from the two ports, as against 4,514,056 lb. for 1901-2, of which 876,765 lb. were from Hiogo, and 3,637,291 from Yokohama. The decrease in this case is 2,252,635 lb., or about 50 per cent.

For the season of 1900-01 the exports of tea to Canada from Yokohama were 3,254,981 lb., in 1899-1900 4,874,731 lb. From Hiogo there came to this country 658,347 lb. in 1900-1, and 2,512,854 lb. in 1899-1900. The total Canadian imports of tea in 1899-1900 from these two ports amounted to 7,387,585 lb., and the falling off since 1899 1900 has been 5,126,164 lb., or about 69 per cent.

The total exports from Yokohama and Hiogo to America this season to date were 28,348,626 lb., against 29,439,116 for 1901-1902, 30,851,709 for 1900-1901, and 32,359,362 for 1899-1900, or a decrease for the four years of 4,010,736 lb., or a little over 12⅓ per cent.

INDIA'S TEA EXPORTS TO CANADA.

IN its issue of a recent date, The Indian Planter's Gazette comments not altogether unfavorably on an article whieh appeared in THE CANADIAN GROCER regarding the cessation of advertising and its effect on the imports of Indian tea into Canada and the United States. At the first glance the article in question appears to be critical in its remarks, but on examination it will be seen that the views of both journals are in harmony on many points. We agree with the remark made in The Indian Planter's Gazette that, "Money can more easily be spent in injudicious advertising than in judicious advertising: In the one case money is ill, in the other well, spent."

There are certain passages in the article under notice, however, to which we take exception. The first one reads; "It appears to us that the procedure followed by our Canadian contemporary, in comparing one year's figures with another, and then trying to trace effects down to a cause which has been marked out beforehand for disapproval, is not justifiable; it is in any case questionable."

While such methods might justly be criticized, we are not concerned to defend them. Let us state the facts, examine the figures and let readers draw their own conclusions.

Our argument is that advertising has increased the consumption of Ceylon and Indian tea, and we prove it by the following figures: In 1893, for the first time, concerted measures were taken to bring the, now well-known, teas of India and Ceylon before the public by advertising. Previous to that time the importations of these teas into North America had been trifling. India ceased active work in 1899, whereas Ceylon has continued in the field to this day. After a campagin of two years the growth of demand was such that the exports to North America were:

| | Indian. Lb. | Ceylon. Lb. |
|---|---|---|

and they continued to grow until in 1899 they were as follows:

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 1899 | 8,487,443 | 8,192,832 |
| Increase | 4,415,712 | 5,448,646 |

In other words, there was an increase of 108 per cent. in Indian tea and 145 per cent. increase in Ceylon tea.

For the five years, 1895 to 1899, inclusive, the imports were: Indian, 29,452,892 lb., and Ceylon, 29,637,699 lb., practically the same for each country. In 1901 and 1902, two years, they were: Indian, 13,985,143 lb.; Ceylon, 19,104,354 lb. Take the average for two periods, of five years and two years:

|---|---|---|
| 1895-9, average | 5,890,578 | 5,927,540 |
| 1901-2 " | 6,992,572 | 7,552,177 |
| Average annual gain | 1,091,994 | 3,624,637 |

The average annual gain was 18 per cent. in Indian tea and 61 per cent. in Ceylon tea; or, putting it another way, Ceylon in the second period, during which they advertised and India ceased, thus gained 43 per cent. more rapidly than its rival.

Finally, let us take the years 1899 and 1901:

| | Indian. lb. | Ceylon. lb. |
|---|---|---|
| 1899 | 8,487,443 | 8,192,832 |
| 1901 | 7,026,773 | 10,211,142 |
| Loss | 1,460,670 | Gain 2,018,310 |

Here was a loss of 17 per cent. in Indian and a gain of 24 per cent. in Ceylon. In the words of The Indian Planter's Gazette: "There is no gainsaying the fact that Ceylon forged considerably ahead of us (India) during the years 1901 and 1902, whilst we fell behind to an alarming extent."

To what are these facts due? Not to markets, as the fall in the price of tea affected Ceylon and Indian equally in the years mentioned. Further, no such marked difference resulted from market fluctuations in previous years. We gave a solution, and that must hold good till it is controverted, or a better one produced.

We will not follow The Indian Planter's Gazette through its "mass of statistics," as all the figures have been published at one time or another in THE CANADIAN GROCER in a digested form and in proper relation to each other.

There is one other inaccuracy, though, we would like to dispose of. "The consumption of Japan teas in Canada," says our contemporary, "has been falling off during the last three years, according to figures obtained from the Statistical Department of the Dominion Government. This fact helps to point a moral. Japan has been a most persistent advertiser, keenly competing with Ceylon in this matter, yet is apparently going to the wall, so that advertising alone, however extensive, is not everything."

In the first place, The Indian Planter's Gazette is much mistaken. Japan is not by any means a large or "persistent advertiser keenly competing with Ceylon." Japan advertises with discrimination in a very few selected trade journals only.

APPLE TRADE SITUATION.

THE apple crop of Ontario is a larger one than was estimated a couple of weeks ago. Nearly all the fall apples are now off the trees and are being marketed. In about three weeks at the latest all the winter apples will be gathered. It was feared a short time ago that of the latter a great quantity would be of inferior quality, but they are turning out well in the majority of cases.

Jobbers and exporters have received numerous inquiries from people desiring to sell in all parts of the Province, who all report an extra heavy yield.

The only thing that at present is a handicap to the exporters is the scarcity of labor. Packers are particularly hard to get, as the strictness of the Fruit Marks Act makes it necessary to employ expert hands. But, notwithstanding these drawbacks, the crop will be handled before the frost sets in.

The yield in the Maritime Provinces has not been even as great as last year, if we are to judge from the export figures to date and the few reports that have come forward from that locality. But across the line in the United States there has been a heavy crop, and the exports so far have been much ahead of those for the same period the two years previous. The State of Missouri is said to have beaten all its previous records, and the orchards of the New England States have produced a fairly good crop.

As to the Old Country market, the demand so far for apples has been fairly well sustained. The English crop has almost amounted to nothing, but the receipts from Canada and the United States have been extra heavy, as may be seen from the tables below. On the other hand, there seems to be more money than usual in circulation there, as the fruit arriving, and especially the choicer grades, have been readily absorbed. The British public seems to be inspired with greater confidence in regard to the Canadian fruit that they are buying being just as represented, and, consequently, they are purchasing Canadian apples with greater freedom.

Reports from Great Britain under date of October 22 say: "25,000 bbls. selling. The market is active for good fruit, but the poor stuff is neglected. The general quality of the arrivals is better. Quotations: Culverts, 13s. to 15s. 6d.; Kings, 19s. to 24s. 6d.; greenings, 12s, to 14s. 6d.; Baldwins, 13s. to 16s. 9d.; pippins, 16s. to 19s. 9d.; snows, 5s. to 9s.; seconds were 6s. less."

The total shipments during the week ending October 18 were as follows:

A NEEDED POSTAL REMEDY.

AMERICANS visiting Canada on business or pleasure frequently inadvertently use postage stamps of their own country instead of those issued by the postal authorities of the Dominion. Canadians visiting the United States frequently make the same mistake when mailing letters to their homes. Letters thus improperly stamped are sent to the dead letter offices of their respective countries. That a great deal of inconvenience and loss, particularly to business men, is caused thereby is evident.

The methods of dead letter offices have lost a great deal of the crudeness that characterized them a few years ago; but there is still room for further improvement. And one of them is in regard to international mail matter.

Mistakes of all kinds we usually have to pay for, but it is unreasonable that letters, no matter how important they may be, should be consigned to the dead letter office because of a mistake which anyone in an absent-minded moment is liable to make.

It seems to us that the proper thing to do would be to forward to destination the letter that bears the stamp of the country to which it is sent instead of that of the country in which it is mailed, and there collect from the receiver, say, double postage. It ought not to give the postal authorities any more trouble, while it would, at the same time, be a much more business-like method.

Sir William Mulock, the Canadian Postmaster-General, has always shown a readiness to adopt newer and more modern methods in the administration of his Department. And here is another opportunity for him to exercise this faculty by entering into negotiations with the postal authorities in the United States for the purpose of remedying the present unsatisfactory and inconvenient state of affairs.

AGAINST UNFAIR COMPETITION.

BETWEEN the honest and the out-and-out dishonest conducting of a business a good deal of pretty questionable work is carried on. The quality of goods is oftentimes said to be better than it really is, trade marks are unlawfully appropriated, opponents' businesses are disparaged, and in a thousand little ways unfair advantages are taken. In this country and in most countries none of these acts are criminally liable. Only in a few cases is a criminal procedure made possible by special law. The only protection afforded to the trade is through a civil action, and the inconvenience and expense of bringing such actions makes recourse to them unusual. The evil is winked at and allowed to continue.

In Germany, the most progressive nation on the face of the earth, so far as the handling of commercial problems is concerned, the difficulty is being faced in no uncertain manner. The criminal law has been called into operation by legislation of July 1, 1896. It strikes in the main at five evils:

1. Fraudulent advertising, i.e., false declarations concerning methods of production; make-up or prices of wares; source of supply; reason for selling; possession or ownership of trade marks. In the above cases, every business man or group of business men has the right to bring suit against the offending party, calling for the suppression of the above practices, also for damages. A fine not exceeding 1,500 marks ($357) can be imposed: repitition of such an offence is punishable with imprisonment not exceeding six months.

2. Detraction of a competitor, i.e., spreading false reports concerning the trade of another, his person, the manager of his business, or his wares. Offences of this nature are punishable with a fine not exceeding 1,500 marks ($357), or imprisonment not exceeding one year.

3. Misusing another's name in such a way that an unfair advantage is gained. Offending parties must pay damages, and are compelled to discontinue such practices.

4. Disclosing business secrets during time of employment. A fine not exceeding 3,000 marks ($714) or imprisonment not exceeding one year can be imposed, and, in addition, judgment of damages sustained. Any competitor using information gained in this way, as well as any third person disclosing such information to him, is liable to a similar punishment.

5. Deception as to the quality of goods. The Federal Diet has been empowered to prescribe that certain articles are to be sold at retail only in certain quantities, lengths, according to certain numbers, etc., etc., or with declarations as to number, weight, etc. The punishment for every infringement shall not exceed 150 marks ($35.70),

COMPETITION OF CITY STORES.

A renewed effort to capture the trade of the towns and country is said to be on foot by the departmental stores. These businesses have grown both in the cities and in the country, but they have extended more proportionately in the cities. The reason for this has been due to the increased vigor shown by the suburban stores which has enabled them to successfully oppose the departmental stores. To reach this country population the city businesses are calling on the services of the press and requiring the city dailies to extend their circulations throughout the country. By this means they hope to build up a huge mail-order business. It remains to be seen how the country merchants are going to meet the difficulty.

A VISIT TO A WHOLESALE GROCERY HOUSE.

TORONTO is becoming famous as a commercial centre, as well as an educational one. Her commercial houses are rapidly increasing their business, by extending and building up a large trade in every part of the Dominion. One successful wholesale house is The Eby, Blain Co., Limited, Front Street East. This firm started business in 1880, by Messrs. J. F. Eby and Hugh Blain forming a partnership under the style Eby, Blain & Co. In 1894 the concern was formed into a limited liability company, and by the summer of this year, 1902, the business of the firm had grown to such an extent that they had to enlarge their warehouse, adding two and a half storeys. The building now, including basement, has six floors, each 50 x 185 feet, and gives them floor space of 55,500 square feet.

THE CANADIAN GROCER had the pleasure of being shown through their spacious premises by Mr. W. P. Eby, of the sales department of the company.

On entering, one is impressed with the elegant suite of sample-rooms and offices. The place presents the appearance of thorough business activity. The shipping-room is attached to these departments to the south, on the Scott street side, and is provided with two elevators, one for taking up and the other for bringing down merchandise, and for the delivery of goods is divided into two subdivisions, one for goods for the city and the other for goods for the country. The basement is used for the storing of sugars, syrups, molasses, canned goods, etc. It has a concrete floor, and the street sloping at the rear allows the goods to be run easily into the wagons. The baking powders, spices, etc., are packed on the second floor. On the same floor are two patented new process currant cleaning machines, improved by Mr. J. F. Eby. The fruit is run into the cleaners from the floor above through chutes, passed on through the machines and to the first floor, where it is packed in cases all ready for shipment. The tea-packing department on the third floor is where the tea is weighed and put up in packages. The coffee department is at present on the same floor, on which are in operation several machines—separators, cleaners, polishers, etc. This firm is becoming celebrated for its coffees, and its trade in these during the year has increased over 100 per cent. The demand for its teas has also much increased. On the fourth floor is a huge tea blender, into which the tea comes from a hopper on the top floor, passing through the blender into a car, on which it is conveyed to the required place and dropped, by means of openings in the floor over which the car passes, into bins below, where the packing is done. The airy and well-lighted fifth floor is where the coffee roasting department will be finally located. There will be installed large separators, grinders, etc.

Altogether The Eby, Blain Co., Limited, are to be congratulated on their having so fine and up-to-date a warehouse. Everything is convenient, lavatories on every floor, and all departments connected by telephone, the switch-board system being operated by an employe of The Bell Telephone Co. The business is an excellent example of the most successful ones and promises to keep on increasing for many years to come.

MILLERS TO HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS.

CANADA is one of the most important wheat-growing countries in the world. Every Canadian believes that before long it will be altogether the most important. Then the greatest flour milling industry in such a country is indeed a subject of interest. And the Ogilvie Milling Co., or to give them their proper name, The Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., is decidedly of interest. Most Canadians are familiar with the famous Ogilvie's Glenora Patent and Ogilvie's Hungarian Patent brands. These are sold throughout the length and breadth of the Dominion, and to call them the standard of all flours is but moderate praise. Lately the trade mark has been changed, the three feathers of the Prince of Wales being added, in consequence of the company's having been appointed by royal warrant millers to His Royal Highness. This appointment followed upon the visit of the Duchess of York to the Winnipeg mills.

The Ogilvie Flour Mills Co. has ninety elevators in Western Canada, in which is received the great bulk of the wheat in the Northwest. These have had a great deal to do with the development of the Northwest, providing farmers with a market where they can sell their grain at a fair price at all times. The company's mills which grind this wheat into flour have an aggregate capacity of 7,500 barrels per day, which, with the addition of the new mill about to be erected, will be increased to over 10,000 barrels per day.

The system and cleanliness about these great mills strikes every visitor. Floors and walls are alike spotless, and not a particle of flour dust floats in the air.

At the present time we are deluged with a multitude of breakfast foods, and many of uncertain origin and still more uncertain value. A great many of these are imported so that the item of duty is added to the original cost, and consumers in Canada pay fancy figures for them. The basis of a breakfast food is the quality of its constituent parts. This is supplemented by the true process it undergoes. Ogilvie's Royal Breakfast Food is produced from the best selected wheat, carefully and scientifically prepared to retain its nutriment and present it in a most palatable and digestible form.

Ogilvie's Royal Breakfast Food has all the good qualities claimed for the best of them, and the fact that it is Ogilvie's is the best guarantee of its purity, its value and its excellence. Amongst breakfast foods this one has a value on a par with the value of Ogilvie's flour amongst other flours.

"Ogilvie's Oats" is an old-time favorite of the breakfast table, and is known throughout Canada. It is simply a preparation in which the best qualities of the grain are preserved and which has stood the test for years.

GLASS CASES FOR CONFECTIONERY.

A neat counter showcase for the display of confectionery, cigars, notions, etc., is an acquisition to any grocery store. Glass cases for bread, butter, cheese, etc., also look well, while being useful for keeping off flies in summer time, etc. Clatworthy & Co. have an advertisement on another page which will be found of interest to merchants wanting anything in this line.

COUNTER CHECK BOOKS.

The demand for counter check books and kindred lines during the past year or so has been a remarkable one. Every establishment for the manufacture of this class of goods reports an immense increase in business. Asked as to the cause they reply that "good times" has something to do with it, but on the other hand there is a growing demand for neat counter check books by merchants who a short time ago were content to send out goods with almost any sort of invoice or address card. The carbon check book has done a large share towards increasing this demand. Its neatness and despatch are easily recognized by any merchant who has used it. The enterprise is one which has evidently come to stay.

PICKLES IN THE RETAIL STORE.

By W. H. S.

SOME HINTS ON THEIR CARE AND SALE.

CANADIANS are not such lovers of pickles as their brethren across the line. Whether this is due to the fact that Canadian grocers do not endeavor to create in this country a taste for pickles by constant advertising and introduction of new lines and methods in their handling, or that the people here have other articles that take their place as a food or a luxury it is difficult to determine. But it is yet to be proved that the pickle business in the Dominion cannot be much increased by judicious efforts on the part of the grocer to bring the pickles before the public. By cleanliness and carefulness in their handling and judicious advertising in the press, in the window, by bulletin boards around the store and by circulars distributed among the public a large trade may be built up if the grocer perseveres.

BULK PICKLES

In handling pickles in bulk it is necessary to know what tastes your customers have, if they have any. Whether they like sweet, mustard, saurkraut, or any of the other varieties the grocer should try and ascertain before going to work to educate the taste of the public for certain lines which he finds most advantageous for himself to handle. Large stocks of pickles cannot be carried with advantage by the dealer, for to sell well pickles should always be fresh. For this reason it is generally best for the smaller grocer, at any rate, to educate the taste of his customers as far as possible for one or two lines of pickles exclusively. Thus he will not need to carry so many different varieties in stock and so be less liable to sustain loss through keeping pickles in stock until they become aged.

CARE IN THE HANDLING

Pickles are an article that require care in their handling. Those coming in bulk are usually delivered in wooden buckets. The best way to keep them fresh is to put them in a large earthenware jar with a tightly-fitting cover. Put them away out of sight and covered; not open and near the door where the dust and dirt may get at them to their injury. The fresher they are the better, and care should be required to keep them fresh as long as possible. Do not, when you are taking them out of the jar, dig into the centre of them and leave those around the edge clear of the vinegar, and never take too much vinegar out of the jar when removing the pickles. If they are left out of the vinegar they dry out quickly, become mouldy, and have to be thrown away and thus wasted. As they sometimes are lighter than the vinegar in which they are preserved and often persist in floating to the top, a plate about the diameter of the jar might be placed over them with a weight on top. This serves to keep them under the liquid and preserves them well.

DELIVERING PICKLES.

A paper pail with a close fitting lid, similar to the small oyster pails, is a good package to deliver them in to the customers. These pails are not as expensive as jars and are less liable to be broken. They are light and easy to handle and can easily be procured.

WINDOW DISPLAYS.

For window display purposes, pickles are not extra well adapted. If kept in the sun for any length of time they lose their color and are thus rendered sometimes unsalable. But a day or so's exposure in a well shaded window will not hurt them very much if proper care is taken to exclude the flies and other insects. A large glass jar or pail with a tight-fitting cover is about as good a thing as any to keep the bulk pickles in when they are used for display purposes.

BEST TIME TO PUSH PICKLES.

The best time of the year to push pickles is generally in the spring. That also is the season when it is most difficult to keep them properly, as a small fly does much damage to them then, particularly to the mustard varieties. So the spring is the time of the year in which many grocers find it best to push their bottle pickles which, though more expensive, can be handled with profit, as they are always wanted by a certain class of customers. In putting in a stock of these select some of the best selling lines and stick to them. Advertise them well, and, if you can, give a trial to anything new and meritorious. Be up to date in the pickles as well as in every other business.

"NABOB" SAUCE.

"Hunger" gets the name of being the "best sauce," but we think Batty & Co. would beat it hollow with their delicious "Nabob" sauce. This sauce is formed of Indian condiments prepared from the vegetable world, chiefly procured in the tropics, and makes the most delicious relish for all kinds of fried or boiled fish, steaks, hashes, stews, game, etc. Messrs. Batty have received numbers of prize medals at Paris, etc., Exhibitions, for the excellence of their "Nabob" sauce and pickles.

THIRTY-FIVE YEARS IN THE PICKLE TRADE.

The attention of our readers is directed to the advertisement of Gillard & Co., Limited, London, Eng., celebrated for nearly 35 years for their sauces and pickles, which have been on the English market for that period, and are to be found in even remote parts of the British Empire, having large sales in Canada, South Africa and Australasia. They can be had in almost every part of the inhabited globe wherever goods of the highest quality can be sold. Ten gold medals they have been awarded for their pickles at various pure food exhibitions in England. The Canadian business is increasing and this firm are about to introduce to the Canadian market other varieties of their pickles.

A REORGANIZED PICKLE FIRM.

Batty's pickles, which have been on the market for so many years have taken a new lease of life, and with younger blood at the head of affairs, these famous sauces and pickles are to be pushed in every section of the world.

On November 13, 1901, the late proprietor sold out his interests to a limited company, and the new firm has appointed entirely new management. New premises were secured on Brayard Road, London, S.E., and all the latest appliances in the business were installed with the view of maintaining the reputation of their goods and at the same time securing larger output.

The new firm which is known as W. Batty & Co., Limited, are anxious to secure reputable agents for Canada and are open to correspond with parties who would handle their well-known lines of "Nabob" pickles and "Nabob" sauces.

AND COLD STORAGE NEWS.

AUTO-CURE BACON.

FOLLOWING is a description of auto-cure bacon as given in The Douglass Encyclopedia: After the hogs are killed and handled in the usual manner as well as chilled, the sides of pork are laid in rows on a sort of trunk which exactly fits into a large cylinder of steel, 32 ft. long, 6 ft. in diameter, and which will hold altogether 210 sides. The cylinder having been filled, the lid or shield, weighing 3½ tons, is slid into its place and is hermetically closed by means of hydraulic pumps at a pressure of three tons to the square inch. As soon as this is done all the air is pumped out by means of a vacuum of 28 inches. To give some little idea how high this pressure is, the Westinghouse vacuum brake on a passenger train afford a good example as a contrast — it only requires a vacuum of 6 inches to stop it dead. Thus one can easily understand how completely the air must be pumped out when the vacuum is raised four and one-half times as much. Of course, by this means the air is also pumped out of the pork, the pores of which open. This pumping out of the air lasts about one hour, and then the brine channel, leading from the brine reservoir holding 6,000 gallons of brine is opened, and the brine rushes into the cylinder of its own account, since there is no air there, and fills what is not taken up by the trucks and pork in a few minutes. But now a quantity of air has again penetrated into the cylinder with the brine, and when this has also been exhausted, the real auto-cure begins. This is effected by the following means: The brine is pumped into the cylinder at a pressure of 120 lb. per square inch until no more can be pumped in. By this means the pork, every pore of which was thoroughly opened while the air was being pumped out, becomes entirely saturated with the brine, and remains under the same pressure from four to five hours. The pickle runs back into the reservoir, and, after having been filtered and strengthened, can be used over and over again. The bacon can then be shipped at once. There is nothing to hinder the pigs being killed one day, salted the next and packed and shipped on the third day. In the machine-room is the hydraulic pump with an accumulator used to close the shield or lid of the cylinder, a vacuum pump to suck the air out of the cylinder, and a force pump to pump the brine into the cylinder. There are two reservoirs for the brine and two cylinders, and the bacon is pricked with a needle before being put into the latter. The auto-cure claims to be a great improvement in the curing of bacon, inasmuch as the bacon can be got ready for market much quicker, but whether or not the keeping qualities of the bacon are improved is a question on which opinion varies.

FRESH MEAT FOR THE NAVY.

A correspondent asks us to state the terms of contract for the supply of fresh meat to the navy. The conditions, uniform throughout the United Kingdom, are: "The whole of the beef to be delivered under this contract is to be good, fat, well-fed, freshly-killed ox or maiden heifer beef, sweet, wholesome, and free from bruises, such as shall be approved by the commanding officer of the vessel, supplied as in all respects fit for His Majesty's service, to the entire exclusion of the flesh of any bull, bull stag, cow, or any beast whatever that may have dropped on the road. No refrigerated or frozen beef to be supplied." There is no further stipulation as to the origin of the meat.—Cold Storage.

CONDENSED EGGS.

Condensed eggs are among the novelties in foodstuffs recently placed on the market. They are really eggs—not any chemical substitute—with some of the moisture removed and sugar added. It cannot be said that the tinned eggs look particularly appetizing, having the appearance of syrup of a brownish color. When they are beaten, however, they look and taste exactly like the fresh article. The War Office have made a large purchase of condensed eggs, which are warranted to keep for two years. The average lodger, however, will probably continue to try his luck with the landlady's provision.

PHILADELPHIA SCRAPPLE.

Philadelphia scrapple is made of all the scraps of pork not needed for sausage, lard, or for salting. Split the head between the jaws, remove the tongue, which is also used, cut off the end of the snout, remove the jaw-bone, eyes and nasal cavities. The ears may be used, if carefully cleaned, and the cartilage removed after boiling. Put the head meat and the skin, which have been removed from parts intended for lard and sausage, to boil in water to cover them; 15 minutes after add the other meat, which may include the feet, nicely scraped, the trimmings of the hams and shoulders, the heart, a small part of the liver, and, if desired, the spleen, cacklings and the kidneys with the white part all cut out, but these are not generally used. The meat must be boiled until it will separate from bones, then taken out of the liquid and chopped fine. Strain the liquid to remove the small bones, and add to it enough water to make five parts liquid to three of meat. Set it boiling, then stir in the meat, with an equal amount of cornmeal, made of new corn, well dried before grinding, and ground fine. Stir while boiling, then season with salt, black and red pepper, and either sage, sweet marjoram, thyme or pennyroyal, whichever you prefer. Boil for about 15 or 20 minutes. Put away in pans in a cold place, when it will keep two or three weeks if the weather is cold. Cut it in slices about an inch thick, lay it in a very hot pan, fry only until brown on both sides.—Butchers' Advocate.

THE PRICE OF LARD IN CANADA.

Editor CANADIAN GROCER,—Exceptional conditions by which the Chicago lard market is higher than the Canadian markets puts an entirely new phase on the lard situation in Canada, and one which should result in higher prices.

Cash lard to-day at Chicago is $10.80 cwt. tierce basis, as against $9.87½ for a higher grade of goods quoted by the Canadian packers, delivered at the principal jobbing points.

The foreign market dependent upon the United States for their lard supply is paying about one cent per pound more for a poorer grade of goods in the United States than can be secured in Canada under the present quotations. Apparently there is only one result following this unusual situation. The Canadian packers undoubtedly will take advantage of the foreign market and export their lard, unless they can obtain as good figures at home. This means an advance of anywhere from one-half to one cent per pound, and wise buyers should consider these facts very carefully, as there is strong evidence that they will pay more for all cooking grease, including the product of the swine, "Boar's Head" Refined Lard Compound and Cottolene.

Many of those who witnessed the success of the method employed by Mr. Chapman expressed wonder that it had not been adopted in London. ### HOW TO MAKE MINCE MEAT.

A formula for making mince meat is given as follows by a New York firm: 450 lb. peeled apples, 75 lb seeded raisins, 75 lb. currants, 4 lb. citron, 4 lb. orange or lemon peel, 60 lb. boiled beef (75 lb. raw beef), 50 lb. suet, 10 lb. mince meat spice, 12 lb. salt, 8 gals. whiskey or spirits. Cook the meat until it is thoroughly done and let it get cold before it is chopped. Chop the beef with the spice and the suet with salt. Put all in a mixing trough and mix well, then add the whiskey, and lastly add the mince meat liquor which is made by taking 150 lb. C sugar, 8 gals. New Orleans molasses, 10 gals. sweet cider, 5 gals. water. Cook to 28 degs. on Baumes' saccharometer. This liquid should be made at least a day before it is wanted for use, so as to give it time to cool off. If used hot it will melt the suet and make the mince meat have a bad appearance. Use 1½ lb. "MM" preservaline to one ton, dissolving it in the cider.

THE PROVISION MARKETS.

TORONTO.

There has been a considerable increase in the arrivals of western dressed hogs. The prices have declined 50c.. and are now $7 per 100 lb. There is a good local demand for pork, but trade in beef is on the quiet side Lambs have declined ½ to ¾c. per lb. Quotations follow: Dressed hogs, $8.00 to $8.25; beef carcasses, $5.25 to $8.00 per 100 lb.; hind quarters, $7.00 to $9.00 per 100 lb.: front quarters, $4.00 to $5.50 per 100 lb.; veal, 7 to 9c., and lambs, 6 to 6¼c. Select live hogs are worth $6.00 to $6 10 and fat and lights, $5.50 to $5 85 per 100 lb. Choice export cattle are worth $5.25 to $5.75 per 100 lb., and lights, $4 25 to $5.00.

The demand for provisions has been well maintained and prices are steady and unchanged. The local packers of dressed hogs have commenced their operations for the season. We quote as follows: Long clear bacon, 11 to 11½c.; smoked breakfast bacon, 14½ to 15c.; roll, 12 to 12½c.: medium hams, 13½ to 14c.; large hams, 12½ to 13c.; shoulder hams, 11 to 11½c., and backs, 14½ to 15c; Canadian heavy mess pork, $21.50; short cut, $23 50 to $24.00; lard, in tierces, 10¾ to 11c. per lb. tubs, 11 to 11¼c., and pails 11¼ to 11½c.; compounds, 8¾ to 10c.; plate beef, $15.00 per 200-lb. bbl.

MONTREAL.

A good business has been done in all hog products during the past week, and in nearly all lines prices have have ruled steady. Jones' pork is at present practically unobtainable among jobbers, and there is also a marked scarcity of Armour's brands. This scarcity is likely to continue for a couple of weeks yet, if not more. The price of Canadian short cut mess pork is firm, in sympathy with the small offerings of fat hogs. Supplies are expected to increase, however, very soon.

Fresh killed abattoir dressed hogs are somewhat firmer at present, and the price is about 25c. per 100 lb. higher, being now $8.75 to $9 per 100 lb. There is a fair demand. It is thought that as the killing season approaches prices will rule lower, as there is plenty of feed.

In lard there is a moderate inquiry, and prices are steady and unchanged. Hams and bacon are still in active movement. Bacon continues to be scarce on this market. Our quotations are: Pure Canadian lard, $2.37½ to $2.40 per pail; Fairbank's "Boar's Head" lard compound, 9⅝c. tierce basis, with extras as follows: 60-lb. tubs, ¼c. over tierce; 20-lb. tin pails, ¼c.; 20-lb. wood pails, ½c; 10-lb. tins, ¾c.; 5-lb. tins, ⅞c.; 3-lb. tins, 1c. Snow White and Globe compound, $1.80 to $1.90 per pail; Cottolene, 11¼c. for 20-lb. pails, and 11⅛c. for 60-lb. tubs, for Quebec and Ontario; hams, 12 to 14c.; heavy Canadian short cut mess pork, $24.50 to $25; Canadian short cut clear pork, $23.50 to $24; American short cut clear pork, $24 to $24.50; American fat back, $24.50 to $25; bacon, Wiltshire, 14 to 15c. per lb; extra plate beef, $14.50 to $15 per bbl.

ST. JOHN, N.B.

In barrelled pork very full prices rule. Some satisfactory mess pork is being received from Ontario. Quantity of domestic offering is still light. In beef, prices continue high and sales in this line have shown a falling off from year to year. Fresh beef is being used in the woods. In domestic fresh beef, prices are quite low. Beef runs quite light. Western beef is still high. Pork is scarce. Lamb is plentiful. We quote as follows: Mess pork, $23 to $23.50; clear pork, $23 to $26; plate beef, $15 to $16; pure lard, tubs, 11¾ to 12c.; pure lard, pails, 12 to 12¼c.; compound, 9 to 10c.; Fairbank's refined, 10 to 10½c.; domestic beef, 5 to 7c.; Ontario beef, 7 to 9c.; pork, 8c.; mutton, 5c.; lamb, 6 to 6½c.; veal, 5 to 7c. per lb.

Mr. Potter, representing The N. K. Fairbank Co., is in the city this week. This is the season of large sales for "Boar's Head" lard and "Gold Dust" washing powder.

King Edward receives 1,000 letters and 30,000 newspapers daily; the German Emperor, 600 to 700 letters; the King of Italy, about 500; the Queen of Holland, 100 to 150. The Pope's daily receipt of letters and papers amounts to from 22,000 to 23,000, and he requires the services of 35 secretaries.

TRADE IN COUNTRIES OTHER THAN OUR OWN.

LARGE PRUNES SCARCE.

A TELEGRAM from the Coast withdrew an offering of 40-50's prunes, Santa Clara, made by wire several days ago on a 3¼c. four-size basis f.o.b. in bags. The advices stated that this size at the moment is practically unobtainable, packers experiencing the greatest difficulty in securing sufficient stock to fill their obligations at a cost above the figures mentioned. A letter stated that the proportion of 40-50's in the Santa Clara crop would fall below the lowest estimates yet made. "Sizes 50-60's," the advices say, "are also bringing a premium over the 2½c. four-size basis, and it looks as though there would be considerable short selling in this section."

CANNED SALMON ON THE U. S. COAST.

Mail advices from Portland, Ore., say of salmon: "The market continues strong, although business at present is not heavy. The shortage this year is variously estimated at from 1,000,000 to 1,500,000 cases, but no definite statement can be made as the canneries have not yet sent in full reports and the fall run is a matter of guesswork. The demand for salmon has increased more than 100 per cent. since 1898, due to the increased consumption in the Orient, Australia, South Africa and the United Kingdom. Fall packing is under way on the Columbia River, the Oregon coast and Puget Sound. The pack on the Columbia will probably exceed that of last year, but in the other two districts it is too early to determine the results. The total Coast pack is placed at nearly 1,000,000 cases."

VALENCIA RAISINS IN ENGLAND.

The supplies of Valencia raisins this week proving unequal to the demand, a very strong market has been experienced, and prices have advanced 2s. per cwt. on lower quality, and 3 to 5s. on medium and best. A considerable amount of dissatisfaction with the values has been evident this season on all hands, and it is, therefore, interesting in this connection to observe by comparison of the duty-paid clearances of this season and last, that in point of quantity this year's trade marks an increase on that of the previous season. The clearances from the commencement of the season up to and including October 1 total 811 tons against 673 tons for the corresponding period of last year, whilst the arrivals this year up to date are about 1,000 tons less. The shipments afloat and available for the next two weeks are on a small scale and firm markets are therefore anticipated, but it is hoped that the prices realized of late will attract fuller supplies, at least sufficient to obviate any possibility of prices reaching a dangerous limit. The market for muscatels remains firm at the moderate prices established a week ago, and with a good demand nearly all that were offered for sale changed hands.—Produce Markets' Review, October 11.

NEW PERSIAN DATES IN NEW YORK.

The first arrival of the 1902 crop Persian dates reached New York on the ss. Tabaristan a week ago, and consisted of 109,000 boxes of Persian dates and a shipment of Fard dates from Muscat. The Persian dates included 73,000 boxes of Hallowees, 11,000 boxes of Khadrawees, and 25,000 boxes of Sairs. The prices made by the importers on October 11, and which still obtain, were 4c. for Hallowees, 3⅝c. for Khadrawees, 3⅝c. for Sairs, 4½c. to 4¾c. for Fards in boxes and 5¼ to 5½c. in cases as to brand. Of the Persian dates it is reported that two-thirds of the cargo has been sold to arrive. Of the Khadrawees, all are reported sold, and one importer states that he is sold out of Sairs. The buying out of this cargo is said, by The N. Y. Journal of Commerce, to have been very liberal, and a considerable portion of the quantity sold is reported to be destined for interior points.

CANNED SALMON IN ENGLAND.

A British trade paper says: "Very large deliveries have been made of salmon from both London and Liverpool for the month of September, again proving how consumption increases when prices are popular. Advice has been received by cable that the steamer Kambyses, which had on board about 40,000 cases of Alaska salmon, has been wrecked at Punta Guionos, and her cargo lost. The market for forward Alaska in consequence is decidedly firmer, and holders are inclined to withdraw their lowest quotations until further news is received."

SITUATION IN CURRANTS.

Later arrivals of currants indicate that the reports of damage to the crop by rain, while not of the disastrous character and extent reported, were true to some extent. Also, that while on the whole this year's production is most excellent, still there is a considerable portion of harsh, badly harvested and carelessly graded fruit in all qualities, and an unfortunate deficiency of those really fine parcels of Vostizza and Panariti which are so highly appreciated by the more fortunate class of grocers who possess a clientele willing to pay full prices for a fine article. The force and bearing of these remarks will be strengthened as the season progresses, and as the stock is picked over. It can hardly be too strongly urged this year, when for so many reasons the demand for currants is exceptional, that those buyers, who make early and full provision for their requirements will reap many advantages. They will certainly be able to get good and suitable fruit, which at present is still plentiful, and when the universal rate of distribution is considered, they may at least expect to do more advantageously in the matter of price, than if they wait until stocks become depleted. The attention of speculators is already being turned towards this article, and although it may be hoped that these gentlemen will do the trade the favor of deferring their operations until the Christmas business of this year is done, still, when the relative position of the various staples of dried fruit is considered, it must be confessed that currants towards the turn of the year will offer a great temptation for an operation for the rise. In the meantime clearances continue large and prices without change, and stocks are now as plentiful and well assorted as they can well be at any period of the season.—Produce Markets' Review.

CANNED TOMATOES EASIER IN BALTIMORE.

Tomatoes are slightly easier at present writing, quotations being about 92½ to 95c. for standard 3s. A general belief has been propogated throughout the country that a vast pack of tomatoes has been put up in Baltimore, and jobbers and their agents are doing their best to use this as a bear argument. The fact is overlooked that the counties rushed their goods to this market as fast as packed for the sake of getting in at the good prices, and the country seems inclined to disbelieve the reports that the West has drawn very heavily upon Baltimore for supplies. But the amount of business still being done here in tomatoes will soon have a beneficial influence on the situation, although we believe all parties in interest as far as growers and packers are concerned should be satisfied with the present quotations. It is a fact that every packer in this city has had one of the busiest seasons of his experience, for not only corn and tomatoes have been in extraordinary demand but beans of all kinds, peaches, and even pumpkin have been in request from all parts of the country. This has resulted in a very heavy demand for cans, cases and solder, and the year 1902 will stand as a red letter year in the industry.—The Trade, Baltimore, Md., October 24.

N. Y. Journal of Commerce, October 25.—"It was stated to-day that considerable rejections of Southern pack tomatoes have taken place in the last few days on account of quality of stock being delivered. Some of these rejections are being offered at material concessions from the present market. One carload is reported sold after rejection at 90c. regular terms here, the quality of the goods being, it is stated, fair standard."

FLOUR IN THE GROCERY STORE.

IN giving hints on window dressing Inland Grocer has the following to say: You would never guess from the rough, brown, shaggy shell of the cocoanut what a delicious and beautiful white meat lay within. It is so with many things. A crude exterior often hides an attractive interior. No less true is it of the grocer's wares nowadays when nearly everything is put up in some kind of a package. The packages are often things of beauty themselves, as witness the nicely lithographed labels on the canned goods and the pretty cartons in which various products pass through the grocer's hands unopened. But while these are pretty to the eye often, you could hardly call them appetizing. They do not make the mouth water nor the tongue to roll at the very sight.

There is a hint in all this for the grocer. It will pay him to break open a package occasionally and show the passer-by what good things are within. It will pay him to go still farther. What good do you suppose a food show would do a manufacturer if he simply piled up his flour in sacks or his baking powder in pretty cans or his cereal breakfast food in colored cartons? He would soon find the fellow across the way who was showing what these things would make was getting all the orders and the advertising.

People do not eat tin cans and flour sacks. They do not even eat flour and baking powder. They eat bread. The housewife is interested to know what these things will do when it comes to the test of bread-baking and cake-making. A fine appetizing loaf of bread will attract her attention mighty quick and if she is at once told that such-and-such flour was used and, if used according to directions, always brought similar results, she would be interested.

It is with the notion that a window display can be made to cause desire that the accompanying display was designed. And it would be a splendid thing if grocers could be gotten into the habit of utilizing this idea frequently in their displays, both in the window and inside the store. Show as much goods as you can in the form in which it is to appear upon the table. It will not only attract attention by its novelty but will make customers because it will appeal more quickly and surely to the appetite.

A flour display may be arranged by placing in the rear for a background a row of large sacks of flour. In front place dishes containing some of the loose flour so that spectators can see what it looks like outside the sack. On a plate place a loaf of the finest bread you can secure from the flour, cut the loaf and let the slices remain on the same plate, together with a bread knife.

On another plate have some biscuit, also the finest you can secure, and on the other side a pan of rolls or rusk. Set off the display with a couple of rolling pins or anything else of that nature which your fancy may suggest. Do not crowd the window too full at any time.

WHERE "KKOVAH" GOODS ARE FOUND.

The accompanying cut gives a faint idea of the great "Kkovah" works, of Manchester, England, where the world-renowned food specialties are manufactured. The factory is certainly one of the largest and best equipped in Great Britain, and the output of the firm's many specialties is enormous. They comprise such articles as jellies, ginger brandy, cherry brandy, baking and egg powders, health salt, custard and blanc-mange powders, etc., and are all labelled with the brand "Kkovah." This name is a household word throughout Great Britain, and we expect it will soon gain the same distinction in Canada, as the "Kkovah" specialties are now being introduced to our grocers by Greig Mfg. Co., of Montreal, and once the customers get a taste of these lines repeat orders are sure to follow.

TRIED AND PROVEN.

"Globe" Metal Polish is a well-known line to all the grocery stores of Great Britain, where it has had for years a phenomenal sale due to the merits of the goods, and bright advertising. It is put up in an attractive tin and sells at a popular price. Is a convenient and handy package for a grocer to handle. These goods will undoubtedly have a large sale in Canada, for in the short time they have been on this market their success has been remarkable. Repeat orders have constantly been coming in from wherever the goods have been introduced. This company are assisting and furthering the efforts of the retailers to place their goods on the market by some very catchy novelties for advertising. Grocers should try a sample lot of "Globe" Metal Polish and permanent trade will surely be established. This article is not an experiment, its merits have been thoroughly tested and proven, and unquestionably it is a safe and satisfactory line for every dealer to stock, for the demand for good metal polish, easily handled and quickly sold, has been for some time apparent to the trade. Success to "Globe" is assured.

1776 SOAP POWDER.

"1776" soap powder has experienced during the last few months a great increase in sales in Canada. This company are backing the grocers' efforts with a fine line of premium pictures and etchings, the originals of which were executed by some of the world's greatest artists, as Paul de Longpre, Virginia James, Percy Morgan and J. L. G. Ferris. These premiums are eagerly sought for by the public. Their potash or lye (ready soap maker) is also a good salable line, and finding great favor with the trade.

B. T. Babbitt's goods have been on the market for over half-a-century, and enjoy a world-wide reputation for quality. They have a branch office and warehouse in Montreal, where all orders or inquiries will be promptly attended to. The merchant can make no mistake in stocking these lines.

GROCERY DELIVERY WAGONS.

ONE of the best advertisements which a grocer can have is his delivery wagon. It goes everywhere with his name upon it, and if it is dingy in appearance his business is set down accordingly. On the other hand, if he drives up for morning orders in a smart rig, it is certain to inspire confidence.

Many of the largest and most successful business men to-day have their delivery wagon built upon very attractive lines—even gaudy. It is not necessary to have a gaudy wagon, but a neat and attractive outfit is undoubtedly good policy on the part of any merchant.

Many lines might be suggested for the building of a delivery wagon, but all are not suited alike. Perhaps the easiest and best way out of the difficulty is to consult a man experienced in this line. Many firms, especially in the cities, make a specialty of this class of trade, and visitors to the Toronto Industrial Fair were enabled to inspect several very attractive vehicles of this sort. We herewith present an illustration of an up-to-date delivery wagon suitable for groceries and built upon neat and attractive lines, also combining the substantial. It can be made either three-spring or platform gear as desired, with either leather or wooden dash, and with plate glass sides. It may be built in size and weight to suit the customer, and, when neatly lettered, cannot fail to be a good advertisement for the owner. In addition to its other good qualities, it can be manufactured at a very reasonable outlay. Firms making a specialty of this class of work have the advantage over the average local dealer, whose wagon, though it may be substantial, lacks the finish. This difference is more than made up in the advertisement to be derived from a vehicle with a city finish.

PROPOSED GROCERY COMBINE.

A despatch from Philadelphia says: "The Merchants' Wholesale Grocery Co., which is trying to orgnize all the retail grocers into one body, is sending out a circular from its headquarters, 25 South Water street, saying that it will open a branch concern in Pittsburg on January 1. In this branch a complete list of all goods handled in a first-class grocery store will be carried under a thoroughly competent manager, and the company says it expects to have 1,200 members of the retail trade in that territory."

Referring to the foregoing, we might say Canada is none behind her American neighbor in this respect, for it is now more than a year ago when a company obtained a charter under the title of Grocers' Wholesale Co., Limited, Hamilton, the stock being largely subscribed for by active retail grocers throughout Western Ontario, and a successful statement for the year ending June 30 has been issued, proving that, with proper support and management, dividends can be declared to shareholders.

As business is conducted through the issue of weekly circulars, it must necessarily follow that a heavy item of expense can thus be saved. In addition to that, it is possible to buy to avoid carrying surplus stock, being able to know almost actual requirements. It is an economical method of conducting a wholesale business, and a system that should appeal to the independent cash buyer.

WIARTON BEET-SUGAR FACTORY.

The plant of The Wiarton Beet Sugar Manufacturing Co., Limited, Wiarton, Ontario, is now nearly completed, and will be in operation by November 10. This plant is located in one of the best beet-growing districts in Ontario, and is situated on the banks of Colpoy's Bay, where it gets its supply of good clear spring water, which is very essential in making beet-sugar.

The beet crop in this district is very good, although the weather has been unusually wet, and the beets are not ripening as early as they would in a dry season. The capacity of the plant this year is 400 tons, the buildings being large enough to increase it to 700 tons, which the company plans to do if a sufficient quantity of beets can be secured another year. This plant, together with the other large concerns that are being located at Wiarton, will make this town one of the best in Northern Ontario.

A FAVORABLY SITUATED FACTORY.

Situated in the beautiful Bay of Quinte district the Belleville Canning Co., of Belleville, Ont., possess great facilities for turning out goods of the first quality. The climatic conditions of that section of the country are highly advantageous for the growing of peas and other vegetables of excellent quality. The products of this factory comprise corn, peas, beans, tomatoes, fruits, jams, jellies, and boned chicken, turkey and duck. Every grocer would do well to give this product a trial in his store.

SHIPPING FACILITIES AT HAMILTON.

The Grand Trunk Railway improvements at Hamilton for handling freight will be very complete when finished. The company has purchased the property on Ferguson avenue, extending from Robert to Barton streets, and intend erecting buildings to meet the demand of the "Ambitious City's" steady increase as a distributing centre. This will save a long haul to and from wholesale houses, and will allow loading and unloading to be done promptly.

CO-OPERATIVE DELIVERY.

IN different places of the United States pense, have inaugurated a co-operathe grocers, to save time and extive delivery system which has so far been quite successful. Particulars might be of interest to some of our readers, and so we publish an answer from Bowlby & Hall, Wellington, O., a place where the system is in operation, to a letter of inquiry from The Inland Grocer. The letter follows:

The co-operative delivery system as in operation in Wellington is more than meetiag our expectations. When we inaugurated the system we expected it would save us dollars, nerve force, etc., but after so many years of the go-on-the-spot way, we hardly expected the new system to find favor with the consumers generally, until after months of education. In this, however, we have been happily disappointed. We found the public was not slow to see the advantages of a service which is regular, every day, and which can be depended upon for promptness and necessary attention to the filling of orders, that the goods reach them in the best possible condition.

In less than a week words of praise were coming from the source from which we expected complaints. Everybody satisfied with the new way, the public because goods reach them promptly and with fewer errors; the grocer—well, it seems like doing business in a new world. Where with the old plan, everything was hurry and confusion from early morning until night. Now there is system. Every order is carefully put up and placed in a basket by itself, labelled with name, street, and number, so that the driver can see at a glance where it goes. Orders for different parts of town have their place of assembling, so that when the wagons drive up, often 50 to 75 orders are placed in the sequence in which they are to be taken out and they are gone in ten minutes. Then we can begin to put up orders for the next trip.

Our C. O. D. orders are taken care of in a very simple manner. The customer pays the driver, taking his receipt for same. The stub is brought back to us with the money. We O. K. it and this stub the driver keeps.

We see no reason why any town of not more than 25,000 could not adopt this system successfully. We have heard it said that our town, being compact and with all groceries centrally located, is adapted to the co-operative system, where, the place larger and stores more scattered and in greater numbers, the system would not be practicable. This does not look like a serious problem to us, however. Starting a wagon from the store farthest from a central station each way, all meeting at a stated time at the central station, and there reloaded for final delivery is practical, and we understand is being worked successfully in Delaware, Ohio.

We can see no reason why the plan should fail if it is properly started and if every grocer is anxious for its success. And they should all be interested, for by it a decrease in expense is accomplished that is certainly worth the effort.

"IRISH MOSS" BUTTER.

Advices from Indianapolis say: "Butter help" is the name of one of the latest adulterants that the State Board of Health has learned of. The United States Treasury Department requested the board to furnish a sample of it for analysis. "Butter help," Secretary Hurty, of the board says, "is made by mixing water with neutral fat by means of a mucilage made of Irish moss. The 'help' comes in barrels from Chicago and looks and smells like butter. It contains from 35 to 40 per cent water. It is used by mixing the butter in any quantity desired." The mucilage from Irish moss makes it possible for water and fat to coalesce and form a solid. The State Board of Health is informed that there are many persons going about in Indiana teaching people how to use it. Secretary Hurty thinks a law should be passed making such teaching a crime.

THE OFFICE

DEVOTED TO THE OFFICE STAFF OF BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS.

BOOKKEEPING IN THE RETAIL STORE.

(By the Critic.)

MANY merchants owe their inability to succeed in business to a failure to keep a proper system of books. There is not a proper account kept of the cash receipts and disbursements, too often the ledger is not correctly posted, and sometimes no ledger is kept at all. Accounts are not rendered promptly, and often goods are sold without being charged or an entry made in the cash book. Carelessness everywhere is predominant in the bookkeeping part of the business, and carefulness flung to the winds. The business becomes neglected all around, all from the little leak commenced through not being systematic in the keeping of the books. And then we hear of an assignment or compromise.

The merchant should pay strict attention to the keeping of his accounts. Thus he is enabled at all times, quickly and correctly, to ascertain his receipts, his expenditures, the amount of cash he should have on hand, the exact cost of running his business, and the total profits he has made. It gets him into a systematic way of doing things which will much contribute to his financial success. His expenses can better be cut down and economy practised with greater success on all sides. Fewer temptations are presented to the clerks to be dishonest to their employer, and so correctly-kept books may be looked upon as a preventative of fraud.

The excuse of the merchant is that he is not able himself to keep his own books. If that is the case it will pay him to send to a business college his son or a bright clerk in his employ to learn bookkeeping. In a town or city this can be done with little expense to himself, by allowing the clerk an hour or two during the day to receive a lesson, or by sending him to the night classes of the college, where such classes exist. Anybody doing this is sure to be amply repaid for his pains.

WRITING ADVERTISEMENTS.

While there is no particular virtue in writing an advertisement on a milk-and-water plan, neither is there anything gained by giving it so much enthusiasm that it will fairly consume itself. Folks rather like to supply some of the information themselves. It is human nature for the average reader to give a fact, plainly put, a coating of extra strength in his own mind. When a man reads an advertisement that strains and does its level best to convince him, that man generally takes it with a pinch of salt. He would not be human if he were otherwise. But, if the advertisement is laid along dispassionate lines, giving its arguments calmly and truthfully, without undue agitation, the reader does not feel called upon to argue against it, because the feeling does not lay hold of him that that advertisement is working to win him over in spite of himself.

HINTS FOR THE OFFICE.

Encourage your clerks. They get the blues the same as you do. Keep them contented by using them well, and by letting them know you appreciate their efforts.

Keep your office clean. Spend a few dollars for paint and varnish. Make your business appear prosperous and respectable. This is a business drawing policy.

Letter Writing—Be brief. Be interesting.

Delay in answering your correspondence means a loss of business as well as a source of annoyance to all concerned.

A sensible way to do in signing your name is to write so that others can at least make a close guess as to what it is.

An incomplete letter is worse than a sore thumb. Correspondence should be carefully read, and all points of inquiry covered in reply.

SET OF OFFICE RULES.

The office manager of a large manufacturing concern recently handed the following to each of his clerks:

We shall deserve well of the company if we meet for work at 8 30 in the morning, take half an hour for luncheon, and so thoroughly clear up all the pressing affairs of the day that we can quit at 5 o'clock.

Find the easy, the quick and the safe way to do things. By this method study how to accomplish 10 per cent., or even 25 per cent. of results for a given expenditure of strength.

Let nothing go over till to-morrow that ought to be disposed of to-day. Let no customer or possible customer expect to hear from us in the morning, or in the next mail, and be disappointed.

In all our intercourse with customers (each one of whom is almost our employer), with all possible customers (who may become almost our employers), and with the public generally, let us be absolutely polite, accommodating and helpful. In letters a very little of this goes a great way; in personal contact it is intolerable to be anything else.

Over the telephone let us be especially polite, so as to bring ourselves in contrast with many telephone operators, office boys and others, who seem to wish to insult you because they are at a safe distance.

Study your work so as to constantly make it quicker, safer, better. Please go to your chiefs with suggestions for the improvement of our service. Please come to me with them.

We must all work hard and intelligently. I shall work harder and longer than any one of you. See if you cannot work more intelligently than I do.

NOVELTIES FOR THE HOLIDAY TRADE.

The attention of the trade is called to some handsome and artistic calendars which are being placed on the market. One, which is a novel arrangement, when opened out shows four little kittens snugly nestled in pretty little pails decorated with daisies and forget-me-nots. This calendar, which is made to stand, is beautifully embossed. The dates are on the back.

Another is a decided novelty representing a lamp, the bowl and base of which are attractively decorated with rich red poppies and gold ornamentation. The shade is beautifully designed, the calendar months appearing theron in tasteful arrangement.

"Pigs in Clover," is a novel arrangement representing four pigs in various moods, on green heart-shaped cards. In the centre is a four-leaf clover, which opens and reveals the dates.

OFFICE ACCESSORIES.

The Lamson Consolidated Store Service Co. are introducing their new "Ideal" cash carrier. This carrier is entirely new. It is noiselesss, easily operated, material and workmanship of the best.

The Stimpson Credit Register system is proving very popular with its patrons. This system does away with the system of entering sales on blotter, transferring to journal, from journal to ledger, and from ledger to statement. It reduces the transaction to a single entry.

Brown Bros., wholesale manufacturing stationers, are showing 27 new styles of wood-base inkstands with the "Peerless non-scratching rubber feet." This original improvement prevents costly office furniture and library desks from becoming scratched. The designs are in gold, black, mahogany and birds-eye maple.

The Distribution of Selling and Commercial Expenses.

By . . .
Kenneth Falconer,
Montreal.

THE pro-rating of manufacturing expenses on the cost of product is a question which in these days of high shop organization is attracting universal attention amongst manufacturers. With the possible exception of the various methods of compensating labor, whether based on day or piece work, and including all forms of bonus or premium plans, no management problem is being more generally considered nor widely discussed. From the simple plan of providing for all expenses, including both selling and commercial, by a percentage on the cost of labor and material entering into the product, to the separation of the manufacturing expenses and providing for them by the scientific distribution on the cost of each article of only such items of expense as are directly related thereto, the manufacturer of to-day has unlimited opportunity to select that plan which is best suited to existing conditions and surrounding circumstances.

Where a line of distinction is drawn, separating manufacturing expenses, all others are usually classed together and little, or no attempt, is made to distinguish between the selling and the commercial, or administrative, expenses of the business. The manufactured cost of an article being composed of labor, material and manufacturing expenses, one of the following plans is usually adopted as regards what may be termed the selling cost: that is the cost of the article up to the time it is sold and becomes the property of the customer. In one case it is charged to Sales Account at its manufactured cost, and the difference between that value and the price at which it is billed to customer represents the gross profit; for this difference Profit and Loss Account receives credit, and being debited with such expenses of the business as are not included in the manufactured cost sufficient to cover all selling expenses, leaving the commercial or administrative expenses to be wiped out by Profit and Loss; or else to advance the cost at which goods are charged to Sales Account a sufficient percentage to cover all expenses not provided for in the manufactured cost; that is, the cost at which the article is charged and credited to stock. The objection to the two first plans is that they do not allow each individual sale to show the net profit or loss, as the case may be, and thus to stand on its own merits, while the weakness of the last plan is that, no distinction being drawn between the selling and other commercial expenses, it is impossible to hold the selling department responsible for the ultimate result, or to judge whether the efforts of the salesmen are producing from time to time more or less satisfactory results in the shape of profits on sales. Just as where all the expenses of a concern are included in the cost of manufacture it is impossible for an extravagant commercial, or incompetent selling, organization to neutralize the effects of the best of management, so where no distinction is made between selling and administrative expenses it is possible for an extravagant accounting, or commercial, organization to more than offset the efforts of the most efficient selling staff or the most economical administration of the stock room and shipping department.

The point I want to make may be seen more clearly by an examination of Figures I and II. If the selling cost, that is the cost up to the time the sale is made, is taken to include all expenses, as shown on Form I, then an extravagant administrative department or executive may more than offset the results attained by the selling staff, and the cause of a gradual lessening of the percentage of profit on sales remaining undiscovered; whereas, if the selling cost is taken to be as shown in Figure II, the cause of the trouble would be at once indicated. More especially will this be the case if the division between selling and other commercial expenses is so arranged that while the latter are equally borne by all sales the former are distributed in their correct proportion on the cost of goods sold in the various territories or districts of the Company's trade. To obtain this result and, at the same time, have each sale show on its face the net profit or loss is the object for which this plan was designed.

For purposes of illustration we will assume the case of a manufacturing company doing business in three defined districts, known as east, west and city. All manufacturing expenses being provided for by an advance on the price at which goods are charged to stock, a careful analysis of the remaining expenses shows an annual outlay of say $72,000, amounting to 12 per cent. on the cost of the probable sales as based on past records, this sum having to be provided for before any profit is made. Of this amount $42,000 is for such expenditures as may fairly be called selling expenses, such as travellers' salaries and expenses, commissions, advertising, etc., etc., the remaining $30,000 being made up of the general administrative expenses of the concern. The sales are estimated at $800,000, divided equally among the three districts named. The gross profits averaging 33⅓ per cent. on cost, this would mean a cost of goods sold of $600,000. The general administrative expenses bearing no direct relation to the amount of sales in each district, but only to the total of such sales, are to be provided for by a charge of 5 per cent. on the value of the goods sold, without regard to the location of customer.

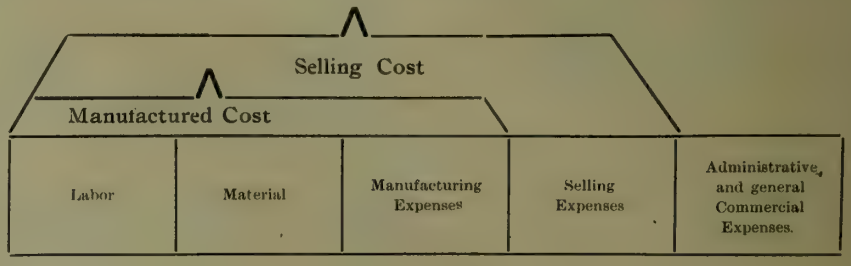

FIG II.

It is very desirable, however, that the charge against Sales Account, made to provide for the selling expenses, should be distributed on the sales in the various districts in exactly the same proportion the selling expenses of each district are expected to bear one to another. The various sums required will be seen by reference to Note A, and are based on past records of sales and expenses and present knowledge of salaries, commissions paid, and of current advertising contracts. For each district shipping slips (Form 1) of a different color are provided ; these are either made out by the shipper, or are the original shipping orders, as may be found best, and are the official advice to the office of shipment having been made, and notification to charge customer.

When the charge has been made in the day book, the invoice number is noted in the space provided and the shipping slip returned to the cost department ; there the costs are filled in, value extended and the total percentage required to cover selling and commercial expenses (in this instance 12 per cent. for goods sold in the east, 16 per cent. in the west and 8 per cent. in the city), added to the cost. At the close of the month the various amounts thus added are listed under their correct headings and the totals ascertained. These totals are then divided in the proportions, as shown on Note A, and the amounts credited to Sales Revenue and Commercial Revenue, respectively, stock being credited at net cost. Sales Revenue Account thus gets credit for 7 per cent. on the cost of sales in the east, 11 per cent. in the west and 3 per cent. in the city, while 5 per cent. on all sales goes to the credit of Commercial Revenue to provide for the general expenses other than the selling. Sales Account having been debited with the net cost of goods sold, plus the percentage as shown in Note A, the difference in each instance between the amount so charged and the selling price will represent the net profit and show on each individual sale ; a most important point in the eyes of most managements.

All accounts properly coming under the head of selling expenses are each month closed out to Sales Revenue, and the other commercial expenses to Commercial Revenue. The manufacturing expenses having been charged out to the account provided for that purpose, it will thus be seen from month to month if the amounts provided for all the expenses of the business are too small, or are in excess of the requirements, and in either case whether it is the provision for the manufacturing, the selling or the administrative expenses that require readjusting. Should any of these expenses reach an abnormal figure, instant attention will thus be called to it.

In connection with the general ledger a sub-ledger is kept, showing the distribution of the selling expenses as well as the provision for same amongst the various districts, east, west and city.

Assuming annual sales, for two different years, at $600,000, with a gross profit of 33⅓ per cent., Note B. shows the total of the Sales Account and the Sales Revenue as taken from this sub-ledger, B1 being a summary of the result. Note C. contains exactly the same information as far as totals are concerned, and is based upon the plan of crediting profit and loss with the gross profit on sales, and charging the selling and commercial expenses to that account, the ultimate result in the shape of net profit shows an increase over 1902 and a decrease in the expenses of the business for that year—a most satisfactory showing, on the face of it, until the details are examined. These details, as shown on Note B., however, indicate a very serious condition of affairs in the west, where the selling expenses, though legitimately high, have reached an altogether unreasonable figure as compared with the previous year. In 1901 the sales in that district amounted to $200,000, the cost and expenses of selling to $21,850; in the following year the sales fell to $100,000, a decrease of 50 per cent., while the selling expenses only show a decrease of $2,850, or, roughly speaking, 13 per cent. The fact that this disproportion between the falling off of sales and the lessening of expenses did not cause a serious shrinkage in the profits is owing to the city trade having increased 50 per cent., with a very slight increase of the selling expenses for that district. The total sales expenses and profits for each year being practically the same, the management might easily fail to see that their hold in one of the districts covered by their salesmen was fast being lost; but the expenses in that district being kept up to a high figure, possibly on account of injudicious advertising contracts. If the sales in the west had been equal in 1902 to what they were in 1901 the net result would have been a very substantial increase in the business done and profits realized. It must be understood that the figures used are purposely such as to show extremes. The results, however, are improbable in degree only, and not in their nature, and under these circumstances the trend of affairs would, of course, have been seen long before the results were so serious or the amounts involved so large. It is a truism to state that accurate knowledge of details is essential to the best success of the productive departments of industrial concerns. Equally full knowledge of details, if not so essential, may yet well be a strong factor towards the success of the selling department, and the admitted necessity of careful distribution of all manufacturing expenses is a strong plea for equal care in the distribution of the selling and commercial.

MONEY IN PATENTS.

Brown—What puts you in such good humor this morning?

Robinson—I've just got a patent for my new ink eraser. I wouldn't take $50,000 for it.

Brown—Didn't you get a patent last year for inventing an indelible ink?

Robinson—I did and I sold it for $30,000, and now I've invented an eraser that will even remove writing done by my own indelible ink.

Brown—What are you going to do next?

Robinson—I'm going to invent another indelible ink that cannot be erased by my eraser. I tell you there is money in this patent business if you only get about it in the right way.

THE STATE OF TRADE.

The feeling in commercial circles was never better or more encouraging than it is to-day. Everywhere one goes he finds the best of conditions existing. The city stationers are preparing to show a richer and more varied line of holiday goods than has hitherto been their wont. They have given liberal orders for the best manufactured in this country, and not a few of them will have an ample display of foreign makes. Seldom has there been a time when the manufacturing departments of stationers were more busy than now. Every house reports a full complement of orders. Society stationers have all the work they can turn out with their present force. The book trade is keeping well up with the other branches of trade.

During the past few weeks there has been a decided improvement in the paper trade here, and it is claimed by a number of our leading jobbing houses that the improvement will continue throughout the season. This increase in the paper trade may be attributed to a rising market and the coal strike.

SIGN PRINTERS.

A series of these handy articles is being shown by Warwick Bros. & Rutter, consisting of a number of different sizes and styles, to retail at any price desired. The value offered in popular price sets is exceptional, and the margin of profit to the dealer, which is a most important item, is all that could be desired.

OFFICE CHAT.

Never wait until the last minute to get things in shape for the fall campaign—it is time for all plans to be matured now, and all stocks to be ordered for immediate shipment.

Correspondents who consider themselves thoroughly competent to write upon the topic of bank advertising, either from observation or experience, are invited to correspond upon this subject with the editor of The Office. State, short and sweet, what you actually know.

The average man or woman is the best judge of what he or she wants to purchase, and, naturally, they want articles that are extensively advertised. Good business judgment suggests that the proper thing to do is to meet the demand by supplying the articles that are wanted.

There are all sorts of people in the world, and we suppose there are some who admire sensationalism and vulgarity in ads. But people of this sort bear about the same relation to the great mass of the public as the riff-raff in the top gallery of a theatre bear to the rest of the audience. As a rule, they have little money to spend, and are, therefore, not worth catering to.

OUR FRIENDS The Japan Central Tea Traders' Association

Ask "Why is it that the demand for Japan Tea from the trade in every section of Canada is continuously on the increase?"

We fancy that this is a very difficult question for anyone to answer, in the face of the Canadian Government figures which show a very heavy decrease in importations into Canada during the past four years. Here are the figures:

| | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| In 1899 | the | Imports | of | Japan | Tea | were 11,667,757 lbs. |
| In 1900 | " | " | " | " | " | 9,762,032 lbs. |

If the demand for Japan Tea is increasing, will the Japan people kindly explain the above?

We say without fear of contradiction that the demand for Japan Tea has decreased just as the demand for "SALADA" Ceylon Green Tea has increased since its introduction into Canada in 1898. If you are interested in a popular article drop us a post card for samples and information.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, October 30, 1902.

GROCERIES.

WHOLESALE groceries have been active in nearly all lines this week. The feature of the trade of this year is the big business that is being done with Manitoba and the West. As compared with previous years it shows a considerable increase. The prosperity resulting from the large crops of the the country is now only just beginning to be felt and merchants are confidently looking forward to a big increase in their business over past years. New Ontario is now playing no insignificant part in the trade of this fall and from now on there promises to be a steady expansion of business throughout the country that will never stop for years to come. The market this week is steady all round. Late last week sugars were advanced another 5c. and this appreciation has been maintained firmly. A fairly active demand is reported for coffees and quite a lot of syrups and molasses continue to go out. This season's figs are commencing to come on the market and the prices are much higher than last year as the crop has not been nearly up to the average. The prices of Patras currants have advanced ¼c. Valencia raisins are firm and active. Californian prunes are due to arrive in a few days and quite an active business is being done in Californian evaporated fruits.

CANNED GOODS.

Quietness is still prevalent in canned goods and the jobbers are speculating as to how much of their orders of vegetables they will receive. The prices of corn, peas and beans are likely to be high all the year round on account of the firmness in tomatoes, which will be scarce this year. No further advances have been made in the prices of salmon, but there are no spot lots offering from the Coast, the deliveries being only on outstanding contracts. Latest advices from France and Portugal report that the sardine fishing season is about over and that the catch has been much smaller than usual. It is not expected that there will be many French or Portuguese sardines on the Canadian market this year, consequently the sardine trade will be mostly confined to the domestic product. Our quotations follow: Salmon, Fraser River, sockeye, $1.50 to $1.52½; "Horseshoe," $1.50 to $1.52½ and Northern, $1.40 to $1.45.

COFFEES.

There continues to be done a fair volume of business in coffees, principally of the better grades. The prices of coffee abroad have advanced a little during the week owing to a falling off in the crop movement, receipts dropping considerably at Rio and Santos. We quote as follows: Green Rio, No. 7, 7¾c.; No. 6, 8c.; No. 5, 8¼c.; No. 4, 9c.; No. 3, 10 to 12c. per lb.

NUTS.

Trade in nuts is still quiet. The prices here are very firm owing to the strong tone of the primary markets. Reports from Grenoble state that a most disastrous cyclone has visited that district, with the result that the new crop of walnuts, which, under ordinary circumstances, would have been small, is now almost wiped out entirely. The crop of other grades of French walnuts is also short and late besides and as the high prices will rule this summer no doubt many disappointments will result from the late arrivals of these on the markets.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

A moderate business keeps up in rice and in tapioca without any special features to report. The Southern rice markets have been fairly active. We quote B rice, 3½c.; Japan, 5½ to 6c.; sago, 3¾ to 4c.; tapioca, 3¼ to 3¾c.

See pages 148 and 149 for Toronto, Montreal, St. John and Halifax prices current.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrups are moving with increased freedom and molasses are also in good demand. The first receipts of the season of new crop open kettle molasses has just been put on the New Orleans market.

SPICES

A good demand is reported for most lines of spices with the prices steady and unchanged. The advices from the primary pepper markets are of an encouraging character and prices will likely be well maintained.

SUGAR.

The advance of 5 points in sugars on the local market last week was followed by another appreciation of 5c. just as we went to press. This advance was stimulated by the growing strength of the market in Europe. The quotations for 88 per cent. beet sugar advancing to 8c. per 100 lb. f.o.b. Hamburg, owing to unfavorable crop prospects but since then have reacted a little and have now settled to 7s. 6¾d. at which price the market remains strong. This is equal to the parity of $3.83 for 96 deg. centrifugals in New York, where, for the week, cane sugars have advanced 1-16c., and quotations are now: Centrifugals, 3⅝c.; muscavados, 3 1-16c. and molasses sugar, 2 13-16c. These prices are 1-16 to ⅛c. below the prices of last January and fully 3-16c. below the prices of beet for the same time last year. The receipts of sugar at the four United States ports have been 64,713 tons, as against 35,984 tons last week, and the meltings have been 45,000 tons, leaving a surplus of 19,713 tons and bringing the total stocks up to 173,940 tons, as against 173,305 tons last year. These large receipts are accounted for by the large arrivals of Java sugars.

TEAS.

Indian and Ceylon blacks and green teas are still arriving on the local market and also a few Chinas and Japans. The Indian market will close inside of two or three weeks. The stocks of low-grade teas are very light and are of the very cheap grades, and nothing merchantable can be had for import. A good many grades of Indian and Ceylon greens are being offered and sold. These grades of teas seem to be becoming popular in Canada. The Shanghai and Foochow markets for China teas have closed for the season.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

CURRANTS.—There is a fair local trade doing in currants, principally in small lots. The market in Patras advanced about ⅛c. three days ago, but this has not created as much interest as an advance earlier in the season would have done, for jobbers are now displaying more interest in the selling than in the buying of their currants. The total arrivals at the port of Montreal for the season have been a little over 2,000 tons. We quote: Fine Filiatras, 5½c. up; Patras, 6¼ to 6¾c. and Vostizzas, 7 to 8c. per lb.

VALENCIA RAISINS.—A good deal of Valencia raisins are moving out. The crop in Spain is nearly exhausted and prices for exportation have advanced over 1c. per lb. We quote: Fine off-stalk, 7¾ to 9c.; selected, 8½ to 9c. and selected layers, 9c. per lb.

DATES.—There is as yet little call for dates. The new fruit will be on the market here in about ten days. Prices are steady at 4½c. for dates in bulk and 6¼ to 6½c. for those in packages.

PRUNES.—New crop prunes will be on the market in ten days or two weeks. We quote as follows: Californian prunes, 100-110, 5c.; 90-100, 5½ to 6¼c.; 80-90, 6½ to 7c.; 70-80, 6¾ to 7¼c.; 60-70, 7¼ to 8c.; 50-60, 8 to 8½c.; 40-50, 8¾ to 10c.

FIGS.—New crop Elemes and naturals have come forward and the prices show a considerable advance oder those of last year. We quote: Elemes, 7-crown, 15c.; 3-crown, 12c. and Star, 11c. per lb.; Naturals, 8c.

CALIFORNIAN EVAPORATED FRUITS—There has been an improvement in the demand for these. We quote: Peaches, 9 to 11c. and apricots, 9 to 13c.

GREEN FRUITS.

Trade in all lines of fruit is fair. There is a good demand for oranges, with lots coming forward and the prices are 50c. lower than last week. Lemons are moving out fairly well, and peaches, grapes and apples are plentiful. Something unusual was the arrival and sale of ripe Canadian strawberries last week. These were grown at Clarkson, Ont., and were sold by The Dawson Commission Company at 10c. per quart. Quotations are as follows: Tomatoes, 20 to 30c. per basket; peaches, 30 to 50c. and pears, 20 to 40c.; grapes, 15 to 20c. for small baskets and 25 to 30c. for large; apples, 10 to 25c. per basket and $1 to $2 per barrel; crabapples, 25c. per basket; watermelons, 10 to 20c. each; lemons, $4.50 to $5.50 per box; onions, ordinary, 75c.; Spanish, 90c. per case; peppers, green, 15 to 30c. per basket; ripe, 60 to 75c.; oranges, Jamaica, $2.50 per box and $5 to $5.25 per barrel; Jersey sweet potatoes, $2.50 per barrel; cocoanuts, $3.50 per sack; quinces, 20 to 35c. per basket; cranberries, $9 to $9.50 per barrel; bananas, $1.25 to $1.75 per bunch.

VEGETABLES.

There is a fair demand for vegetables of all kinds and the prices are steady and unchanged. Potatoes are much wanted as numbers of people are now stocking up for their winter's supply. We quote: Lettuce, 30 to 40c. per dozen; radishes, 20 to 25c. per dozen; mint and parsley, cauliflower, 50c. to $1.50 per dozen; cabbage, 30 to 50c. per doz.; pickling cabbage, 25 to 50c. per doz.; carrots, 40 to 50c. per bag; beets, 40 to 50c. per bag; potatoes, 85 to 95c. per bag; celery, 50 to 75c. per dozen; corn, 8 to 15c. per doz.; squashes, $1 to $1.50 per doz; pickling onions, 75c. per basket; pumpkins, 50c. per dozen; citrons, 50 to 75c. per doz.; artichokes, 50c. per bushel; spinach, 40c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EGGS.—The receipts of eggs continue moderate and there is a good healthy demand for all choice grades. Packers are now placing on the market their cold storage eggs which are meeting with a fair demand. We quote: Strictly new laid, 18 to 19c. and store gathered, 16 to 17c. per dozen.

BEANS.—There have been freer offerings of beans during the week at the following prices: $2 to $2.20 per bushel.

DRIED AND EVAPORATED APPLES.—Some evaporated apples are being offered at 6½ to 7c. per lb. in large quantities, but few sales have been made at these figures, owing to the market at present being liberally supplied with green fruits.

HONEY.—The market is unchanged from last week. We quote as follows: Extracted, 8 to 8½c. for large quantities and 9 to 9½c. per lb. in small lots. Combs, $1.50 to $1.75.

POTATOES.—There have been larger offerings of potatoes this week, but the demand also has increased with the approach of the colder weather and this combined with the advance in the freight rates of the railways, which goes into effect on November 1, has stiffened the prices, resulting in an appreciation of from 3 to 5c. per bag. Quotations are now 75c. per bag in carlots.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

BUTTER.—The make keeps large and the butter keeps being freely marketed. Choice grades are quickly bought up on arrival and the others are meeting with a fair demand. Latest advices from Great Britain state that the market there has weakened a little and this will have the effect of easing the market here somewhat. Quotations are as follows: Finest 1-lb. rolls, 17 to 18c.; selected dairy tubs, 15½ to 16c.; store packed, uniform color, 13½ to 14½c.; low grades, 12 to 13c. Creamery prints, 19 to 20c.; solids, 19 to 19½c. per lb.

CHEESE.—The English cheese market continues to stiffen and is now up to 56 to 58s. The prices here are firmly maintained, at the quotations of last week. The tone of the market is buoyant and not many responses are being made to the English cables. We quote: Finest cheese, 11½ to 12c. per lb.

POULTRY AND GAME.

POULTRY.—The receipts of poultry, both live and dressed, are still small and the prices are firm. The demand is brisk and keeps the market bare of supplies. We quote: Chickens, young, 55 to 65c.; old, 45 to 50c.; ducks, 60 to 80c.; geese, 7 to 8c. per lb.; turkeys, young, dry picked, 13 to 14c. per lb.

GAME.—A few black ducks are coming on the market, but there have so far been small receipts of game of all kinds. Prices are nominal and unchanged. We quote: Teal, 20c. per pair; pin tails, 30 to 35c. and black ducks, 70 to 75c. per pair.

FISH.

There has been an improvement in the demand for fish this week and the arrival of a shipment of whitefish has relieved the scarcity in that line. Quite a few oysters are now going out. Quotations are: Fresh fish—Lake Erie herring, 4 to 5c.; perch, 4 to 5c.; trout, 7 to 9c.; pike, 6c.; British-Columbian salmon, 15 to 20c.; whitefish, 7 to 9c.; mackerel, 15 to 20c.; rock bass, 4c.; halibut, 15c. blue pike, 4c.; live lobsters, 25c. per lb.; oysters, $1.25 to $1.35 per wine gallon; smoked ciscoes, $1.25 per basket; Digby herring, 50c. per bundle of six baskets; finnan haddies, 7½ to 8c. per lb. in 15-lb. boxes; codfish, $4.50 for 25-lb. boxes; quail on toast, 5½c. in boxes.

GRAIN, FLOUR AND BREAKFAST FOODS.

GRAIN.—The tone of this market is strong and the prices are fully maintained. The deliveries on the local street market have been light. We quote prices on the street as follows: Red wheat, 69 to 70c.; white wheat, 69 to 70c.; goose wheat, 61 to 65c.; barley, 44 to 48c.; oats, 36 to 36½c.; rye, 50c. and buckwheat, 54c. per bushel.

FLOUR.—There is a firm feeling in this article and the buying on the market has been active. Prices are firm and unchanged. We now quote: Ontario patents, in bags, $3.60 to $3.70; Hungarian patents, $4.10 to $4.15; Manitoba bakers', $3.85 to $3.90; straight roller, $3.40 to $3.50 per barrel.

BREAKFAST FOODS.—There is a heavy demand from all points for oat meal and rolled oats, and the millers are crowded with orders, some being several days behind with their deliveries. The approaching of the close of navigation is causing a rush among shippers to fill orders for points on the lakes accessible by water, and our quotations are as follows: Oatmeal, standard and granulated, in carlots on track here, $4.20; standard rolled oats in carlots on track here, $4.00 per barrel; in wood, 15c. extra; broken lots are 25c. per bbl. extra; rolled wheat, $2.25 in 100-lb. bbl.; corn meal, $4; split peas, $4.75; pot barley, $4.25 in 196-lb. bags, or $4 in bags.

HIDES, SKINS AND WOOL.

HIDES.—There is a steady demand for these and the prices are unchanged. We quote: No. 1 green, 8c.; No. 2 green, 7c.; No. 1 green, steers, 8½c.; No. 2 green, steers, 7½c.; cured, 8½ to 9c.

SKINS.—Calfskins sell readily and sheepskins have advanced 5 to 10c. We quote: Veal skins, 6 to 14 lb. inclusive, No. 1, 10c.; No. 2, 8c.; do, 15 to 20 lb. inclusive, No. 1, 9c.; No. 2, 7c.; deacons (dairies), 60 to 70c. each; shearlings and lambskins, 50 to 55c.

WOOL.—There is little or nothing doing in Canadian fleece wools. Foreign and pulled wools are in fair demand. Quotations are as follows: Fleece, 13½c. and unwashed, 7½c. per lb.

TALLOW.—Prices of tallow are still weak at 6¼ to 7c. per lb.

SEEDS.

The good export demand for alsike is still a feature. Prices are unchanged. We quote: Alsike, $6.25 to $7.25 for choice seed; red clover, $5.50 to $6 and timothy, $1.10 to $1.60 aboard at outside points.

---

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, October 30, 1902.

GROCERIES.

WHOLESALE houses have been very busy during the past week and shipments have been heavy. Among the items of interest have been tomato catsups, in bottles, the market for which is excited on account of the strong position of tomatoes, and brands of all sorts and descriptions have been advancing. Cotton twines, three and four-ply, have advanced about 1c., now being and 21c. respectively. Labrador salmon, in bbls. and ½ bbls., are almost unprocurable. Small cheese has advanced steadily and is now quoted at 12¼c. Green cod is now quoted at $6.50 per barrel and $3.25 per half barrel. It is very scarce. New buckwheat flour is on the market and sells at $2.40 per bag of 98 lb. Dry white beans keep high. The selling price is now $2.30 per bushel, with some holders asking $2.40. Evaporated apples are stiffening. Seven cents is considered a low price. Armour's pork is practically unprocurable, and what little is held here is offered at the unprecedented price of $28.75 for 30-40s. Other brands, however, are on the market. Swift's 41-50s are quoted at $28 and Franklin's 35-40s sell at $27.50. Second brands run as low as $26.25.

SUGAR.

On October 23 a further advance of 5c. per 100 lb. was made in Montreal refined sugar in sympathy with the continued strengthening of the raw sugar market. This brings the price of granulated to $3.80 and yellows to $3.15 for No. 1 up to $3.65 for extra bright. Should the present strong feeling and upward tendency of raw beet continue, the refined article may go still higher. The demand for sugar is good, a heavy business having been done with western buyers, who consider sugar just now a very good investment, and are somewhat inclined to speculate.

TEAS.

The movement in Ceylon and Indian teas on the local market, while not specially active, is yet on the increase, and dealers look for an unusually good demand, owing to the continued high price of Japans. The latter are still firm, but there is not much demand. On the London market advices state that although the supply of Indian teas is large, as is usual at this time of the year, yet the demand for fine teas has been so good that the supply of higher grades will not be at all excessive. Ceylons were improved in quality, but offerings were no more than moderate. China greens were firm in spite of the increasing importation. Gunpowders were in short supply

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

A slight improvement is reported in the market for Barbados molasses this week and the tone of the market is steadier. Business in a jobbing way has been fair, with prices at 23 to 24c. for small lots. New Orleans molasses is quoted at 16½ to 17c.; Antigua, 21c. and Porto Rico at 38c. In corn syrups there is practically no change. A light demand continues at the following prices: In bbls., 3c.; in half bbls., 3½c.; ¼ bbls., 3¾c.; 38½-lb. pails, at $1.10 and 25-lb. pails, $1.10.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

There is a good steady movement in both these lines. Prices are unchanged. We quote: B rice, in bags, $3.02½; in ½ bags, $3.07½; in ¼ bags, $3.12½; in pockets, $3.17½. In 10-bag lots an allowance of 10c. is made. CC rice, $2.92½ in bags; $2.97½ in ½ bags; $3.02½ in ¼ bags and $3.07½ in pockets. In the open territory prices are about 10c. less. Patna rice is worth 4 to 5c. per lb. and tapioca, 3½c.

SPICES.

There is an active movement in all lines of spices and the tone of the market is firm. No change in prices has been made. We quote: Nutmegs, 35 to 55c. per lb., as to size; penang mace, 45 to 50c. per lb., as to quality; pimento, ground, 12½ to 15c.; cloves, 15 to 25c.; pepper, ground, black, 17 to 22c., according to grade; white, 25 to 27c.; ginger, whole Cochin, 15 to 17c.; Japan, 13 to 14c.; Jamaica, 16 to 20c.; Afghan, 12 to 13c.; ground, Japan, 15c.; Cochin, 16 to 17c.; Jamaica, 20 to 22c.; and Afghan, 13 to 14c.

CANNED GOODS.

The situation in several lines of canned goods is becoming more interesting as the season advances. Tomatoes are now quoted at $1.75, and most dealers are confident that considerably higher figures will be reached. There is a report to the effect that one wholesale house bought 1,000 cases or so for which they paid $1.75 per dozen. These prices will no doubt check consumption, but with the very limited supply dealers are prepared for a smaller demand and expect to maintain prices throughout the season. So far as can be learned only one large firm has been able to fill all its orders. Blueberries remain at $1.15 at which figure they are firm. Pumpkins have become somewhat scarce and the price is now quoted at $1 per dozen. Our quotations are as follows: Tomatoes, $1.75 corn, 82½ to 85c.; peas, 82½c. to $1.20; string beans, 82½c. to 85c.; strawberries, $1.45 to $1.60; blueberries, $1.15; raspberries, $1.45 to $1.60; gooseberries, $1.45 to $1.60; pears, 2's, $1.60 to $1.70; 3's, $2.10 to $2.15; peaches, 2's, $1.65 to $1.70; 3's, $2.50 to $2.75; 3 lb. apples, 85 to 90c.; gallon apples, $2.10 to $2.20; 2-lb. sliced pineapples, $2.20 to $2.30; grated pineapples, $2.50; pumpkins, $1 per doz.; spinach, $1.50; sugar beets, 95c. to $1.00; salmon, pink, 92 to 95c.; spring, $1.25; Rivers Inlet red sockeye, $1.30; Fraser River red sockeye, $1.40.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

CURRANTS.—The primary market is commencing to show signs of an upward movement. On October 21, fine Filiatras were quoted at 12s. c.i.f., via New York. Locally, there is a good demand and the prices are firm. We quote: Fine Filiatras, 5⅛ to 5½c. in cases; cleaned, 5⅝ to 5¾c.; in 1-lb. cartons, 6½ to 7c.; finest Vostizzas, 6¾ to 7c.

SULTANA RAISINS.—There is no change in this market. Sultanas are still quoted at 9½c. per lb.

VALENCIA RAISINS.—The Valencia market is again higher. Any goods purchased now would cost as much laid down here as raisins are now being quoted on this market. As yet no change in local prices has been made. We now quote: Finest off-stalk, 6½ to 7½c.; selected, 7¼ to 8c. and layers, 7½c. to 8¼c., according to brands.

CANDIED PEELS.—A moderate inquiry prevails and prices rule steady. We quote as follows: Citron peel, 15c.; orange peel, 11½c. and lemon peel, 10½c. per lb.

MALAGA RAISINS.—A good demand continues for Malaga raisins and no changes have been made in the prices. We quote: London layers, $1.50 to $1.60; "Connoisseur Clusters," $2.15 to $2.25; ½'s, 65 to 70c.; "Royal Buckingham Clusters," $3.30 to $3.35; ½'s, $1.05 to $1.10; "Excelsior Windsor Clusters," $4.50 to $4.60; ¼'s, $1.30 to $1.40.

FIGS.—There is an active business reported in this fruit. Cooking figs have steadily advanced, and they are now good value at $1.20 per tapnet.

DATES.—A shipment of new-crop fruit arrived in New York on the 25th inst., 10,000 boxes of which were destined for Canada. This will be in retail hands by November 1. Hallowees, for November delivery, are quoted at 4½c. per lb.

CALIFORNIAN RAISINS.—The demand for seeded raisins has been active and the price is steady at 4½c. per lb.

PRUNES.—Prices are firm, notwithstanding the large crop in California, which is offset to a certain extent by the great scarcity in Europe. No quotable change has occurred on this market. We quote: 8½c. for 40-50's; 8c. for 50-60's; 7¾c. for 60-70's; 7½c. for 70-80's; 6¾c. for 80-90's; 6½c. for 90-100's.

NUTS.

The market continues strong and the prices are stiffening in nearly all lines. No actual change in prices, however, has occurred. The demand for Grenobles is very light for the new crop on account of the high prices and the late date at which the crop will mature. Shippers in Bordeaux and Marseilles, as well as those from the Grenoble district, all show a disposition to shade prices. Tarragona almonds are firm. Brazil nuts show a further tendency upwards. Our quotations are now as follows: Walnuts, 14c.; Tarragona almonds, 12 to 13c.; shelled walnuts, 24 to 26c.; shelled almonds, 29 to 30c.; filberts, 9½c.; Pecans, 17 to 17½c.; Brazil nuts, 11 to 15c. per lb.

GREEN FRUITS.

Boston lettuce is now on the market in fair supply and is selling at $2.15 per dozen. Wax beans and green beans are now offering, both at $2.50 per basket. The demand for green fruits and vegetables has been fairly good during the week. Prices are steady and unchanged in all lines. Quotations are as follows: Jamaica oranges, in barrels, $5 to $5.50, boxes, $3.25; Messina lemons, $4.00 per box; cocoanuts, $3.50 per bag of 100; bananas, No. 1, $1 to $1.50 and 8-hands, $1; Canadian cabbage, 25 to 40c. per dozen; potatoes, $1.15 to $1.30 per barrel; peaches, $1.25; plums, $1.25 to $1.50; pears, $3.25 and limes, $1.50 per box; Canadian apples, in barrels, $1.50 to $3 and in baskets, 20c. to 30c.; egg plant, 50c. per basket; Canadian pears, 40c. per basket; Spanish onions, 55c. per crate and $2.10 per case; sweet potatoes, $3.00 per barrel; Canadian blue and white grapes, 20c. to 22c. per basket; Delawares, 35c. per basket, and Malaga grapes, $5.50 to $7 per keg; red grapes, 25c. per basket; cranberries, $8 to $9.50 per barrel; red onions, $2.25 per bbl.; chestnuts, 11c. per lb.; Boston lettuce, $2.15 per doz.; wax beans, $2.50 per basket; green beans, $2.50 per basket, and cucumbers, $2.25 per doz.

FISH.

Business in fish continues fairly active and all lines in season are moving well. There has been no quotable change to report during the past week. Green cod continues very scarce and Labrador salmon, in barrels and half barrels, are almost unprocurable. We quote as follows: Haddies, 6 to 7c.; smoked herring, 9c. per box; fresh haddock and cod, 4½c. per lb.; whitefish, 7½c.; dore, 7 to 7½c. per lb.; pike, 6c.; halibut, 12c.; salmon, 15c.; No. 1 herring, Nova-Scotian, $5.25 to $5.50 per barrel and $3 per half barrel; No. 1 Holland herring, $6.50 per half barrel; No. 1 Scotch herring, $6.50 per half barrel and 95c. per keg; Holland herring, 70 to 80c. per keg; No. 1 green codfish, $5.50 to $5.75 and mackerel, $16 per barrel; boneless cod, 1 and 2-lb. blocks, 6c. per lb.; loose boneless cod, 5c. per lb. in 40-lb. boxes; dried codfish, $5 per 100-lb. bundle; No. 1 Labrador salmon, $20 in tierces and in barrels, $14; standard bulk oysters, $1.40 per gallon; Marshall's kippered herring, $1.45 per dozen; Canadian kippered, $1 per doz.; Canadian ¼ sardines, $4.00 per 100; canned Cove oysters, No. 1 size, $1.30 per doz.; canned Cove oysters, No. 2 size, $2.20 per doz.; Malpeque shell oysters, $4.50 to $6 per barrel.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

BUTTER.—Quebec creamery butter has advanced about ½c. all round, and the tone of the market is somewhat firmer. Ontario butter is ½c. higher. We do not hear of any saltless butter on the market now. A fair volume of business is being done, but buyers are not taking any more than enough for immediate requirements. We quote as follows: Finest Townships creamery, 20½ to 20¾c.; finest Quebec do, 20¼ to 20½c.; finest Ontario do, 19 to 19½c.; dairy, 15 to 16c. per lb.

CHEESE.—No change in prices has been made during the week. The market, however, appears to be a little unsettled, some dealers being uncertain as to what price to quote. A lot of cheese is going forward, but these are goods that have been held here on account of English buyers. We quote as follows: Finest Townships, white and colored, 11¼ to 11⅜c.; finest Quebec, 11⅛ to 11¼c.; finest Ontario, 11⅜ to 11½c. per lb. Seconds sell at 10¼ to 10⅜c.

stock. The market is firm under a good demand both for home and foreign consumption. We quote: Selected, 19½ to 20c.; candled stock, 18 to 18½c.; Montreal limed, 17½ to 18c.; straight receipts, 17½c.; cold storage stock, 17½c.

BEANS.—Contrary to the expectations of several dealers the market has not weakened and the price of beans is still firm at $2.05 to $2.10 in carlots and $2.15 to $2.25 in a jobbing way. Business, however, is quiet, owing to the light offerings.

HONEY.—There has been no change in prices, white clover in comb selling at 11 to 11½c. and white strained at 8½ to 9c. per lb. A fair trade is doing.

ASHES.—There is little doing in potash this week and the market is dull. Prices are as follows: First pots, $4.35 to $4.40; second pots, $3.60 and pearls, $6.25 per 100 lb.

POTATOES.—The market for potatoes has become steadier and the prices this week are somewhat higher, carlots of choice stock being quoted at 61 to 63c. per bag and 70 to 75c. in a jobbing way. Business is brisk.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.—Sugar has advanced in price about 2c. per lb. In syrup there is no quotable change and trade is quiet. We quote: Syrup, in large tins, 70 to 80c.; in small tins, 50 to 60c.; in wood, 5 to 5½c. per lb. Sugar, 8½ to 10c. per lb.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

FLOUR.—An advance of 10c. has taken place in choice Manitoba spring wheat patents and in strong bakers' flour. Straight rollers are 5c. lower. There is a good inquiry for export, and locally a fair volume of business is doing. We quote: Choice Manitoba spring wheat patents, $4.10; seconds, $3.80; strong bakers', $3.40; straight rollers, $3.50 to $3.60; winter wheat patents, $3.75 to $4.

GRAIN.—A general advance in prices has taken place during the past week in the grain market, all lines, except corn, being more or less affected. Oats are ½c. higher. The market is firm on account of the light offerings. We quote: Rye, 55c.; peas, 77½c.; corn, 72c.; buckwheat, 57½c.; barley, 48½ to 49c.; oats, 35½c. ex-store.

FEED.—A further advance has been made in Manitoba bran, and the market is firm under a good demand. Shorts are somewhat lower. Ontario bran is steady and unchanged in price. We quote as follows: Manitoba bran, $16 to $17; Ontario bran, $15; shorts, $18 to $19, in bulk; mouillie, $23 to $30, as to quality.

OATMEAL.—Business in rolled oats continues fair. Prices are firmer, but no quotable changes are reported and in small lots jobbers are quoting $4.50 per barrel and $2.25 per bag.

BALED HAY.—There has been some irregularity on this market, but the feeling is now firmer and the tone of the market steadier. An active inquiry prevails. We quote: No. 1 timothy, $9 to $9.50; No. 2, $8 to $8.75; clover, $7 to $7.50 per ton, in carlots.

MONTREAL NOTES.

Sugar is 5c. higher.

Eggs have gone up slightly.

Butter has advanced ¼ to ½c. for creamery.

Tomato catsups are commencing to advance.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, N.B., October 27, 1902.

FALL business is in full swing and dealers are well satisfied with the outlook. There is much of interest. There are continued arrivals of new dried fruits, a line of business of special interest at this season. The shortage of tomatoes is placing some houses who had sold largely to arrive in a very unpleasant position. The position in beans has been somewhat relieved. In sugar prices have been advanced. In teas our dealers are buying Indians for direct shipment quite freely and prices are quite low. In Ceylons a rather firmer market rules.

OILS.—In burning oils, for which there is a very large demand at this season, prices have been advanced a half cent. The greater quantity, however, for fall shipment has been booked at the old figures. In paint oils, the sale is light. Linseeds hold at the lower figures. Turpentine, on the other hand, is held firm at the advance. Lubricating oils show a fair business. In cod oil the receipts are not as large as last year, but though the prices have been showing some advance no such figures as last fall are expected.

SALT.—In Liverpool coarse salt a large cargo is daily expected. Owing to the large cargo being delayed, the market is not as largely stocked as was expected. Prices are firm. In Canadian fine salt, through free arrivals the market is now fully supplied. Our quotations are as follows: Liverpool coarse, 55 to 60c.; English factory-filled, 95c. to $1.00; Canadian fine, $1 per bag; cheese and butter salt, bulk, $2.40 per bbl.; 5-lb. bags, $2.75 to $2.85 per bbl.; 10-lb. bags, $2.60 to $2.65 per bbl.; 20-lb. wood boxes, 22-23c. each; 10-lb. wood boxes, 14c. each; cartons, $2 per case of two dozen; English bottled salt, $1.25 to $1.30 per doz.; mineral rock salt, 60c. per 100 lb. (Selected lumps.)

CANNED GOODS.—The shortage in tomatoes is proving a great source of trouble, one involving much explanation to many of our dealers. Prices are held firm at the advanced figures. Corn is also held firm. The pack in our own Province was quite large. Peas are unchanged. In fruits, gallon apples are rather firmer. Blueberries are scarce and the demand cannot be supplied. In salmon, the prices are unchanged. In Canadian meats, some Canadian packers are already making contracts for the coming season. Domestic sardines are a short pack, but as yet prices are unchanged. Haddies and herring rule quite easy.

GREEN FRUITS.—Dealers are busy. Canadian grapes are large sellers at this season. Prices are rather lower. Apples, New Brunswick stock, still largely supply the market. We have, however, no late fruit. Gravensteins are scarce. Oranges have a fair sale, chiefly Jamaicas. In lemons, prices are still high. Cranberries show a good sale. There is a wide range in prices, because of the native berry, which runs uneven in quality. There are still some pears. Quinces have a fair sale. Sweet potatoes are quiet. Bananas, while quite freely offered, are not in the fore front. In keg grapes, there is a rather better sale, but the season is still early.

DRIED FRUITS.—The free arrivals of Malaga layers and loose muscatels have caused quite a stir. Californian fruit is daily expected. Were it not for the seeded the quantity of Californian fruit coming in would have been light. Valencia raisins are still held at high prices. Layers are about the only line sold. In currants, new are daily expected. The Oregon market is rather higher. In figs, the prices are firm. The quality this year is good. New Californian prunes are daily expected. Prices are low and the sale is expected to be large. Very few apricots and peaches are sold. New peels have not been generally received. Onions are freely sold at lower prices. Much of the Montreal stock received is poor. In evaporated apples prices are somewhat higher.

DAIRY PRODUCE.—In butter, prices are unchanged. Best stock moves freely. The supply of cooking butter is light. Cheese holds firm at full figures and the stocks are not large. Eggs show better movement and the prices are unchanged.

SUGAR.—In this line the prices have been advanced ten cents, and the market is firm. Sales are very large. Very limited quantities of paris lump sugar are sold here.

MOLASSES.—There is a good, steady sale at quite full figures. So far stock arriving has moved off quite freely, so that stocks held are not large.

FISH.—In dry cod the market is steady. Pollock are in light receipt, but our market is not a large one for this line. Pickled herring keep firm with the outside demand getting well supplied. In smoked, herring are in light supply and prices are rather higher. Finnan haddies are moving west freely. At present the full demand is not being met. Boneless fish are unchanged. Alewives are particularly dull this season. Our quotations are as follows: Haddies, 4½ to 5c.; smoked herring, 7 to 8c.; fresh haddock and cod, 2 to 2½c.; boneless fish, 4 to 5c.; pollock, $1.65 to $1.75 per 100 lb.; pickled herring, $2.00 to $2.25 per ½ bbl.; dry cod, $3.50 to $3.60; pickled shad, $6 per ½ bbl.

FLOUR, FEED AND MEAL.—In flour there is a steady business. Demand for Manitoba is very large. Ontario flours are quoted rather higher. Oats and oatmeal are both quoted higher, and are not freely offered. Cornmeal is steady. Beans are more freely offered, and the market has settled from the extreme figures. Feed is unchanged. Barley is in light demand. Split and whole peas are scarce with prices high. We quote: Manitoba flour, $4.60 to $4.70; best Ontario, $4.20 to $4.25; medium, $3.75 to $4; oatmeal, $4.40 to $4.50; cornmeal, $3.25 to $3.30; middlings, $26.00 to $28.00; oats, 42 to 43c.; handpicked beans, $2.25 to $2.30; prime, $2.10 to $2.20; yellow eye beans, $2.80 to $3; split peas, $5.15 to $5.25; barley, $4.25 to $4.35; hay, $9 to $10.

ST. JOHN NOTES.

E. E. McMichael has added "Swiss Milk" chocolate to his line of specialties.

The Imperial Oil Co. received this week by steamer and barge, 750,000 gallons of oil.

E. T. Sturdee is offering a consigned cargo of choice Porto Rico molasses to the trade.

Two cars of "Red Rose" tea were shipped west this week—one to Toronto and one to Winnipeg.

Some Malaga raisins of especially fine quality were received by the trade this week, shipped by Jose Segalerva, Malaga.

The Conlay Foil Co., represented by J. Hunter White, are supplying a tea lead which is giving particularly good satisfaction to the trade.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

WINNIPEG, October 27.

THE trade of the week has been steady and heavy. Jobbers have difficulty in getting goods forward in sufficient quantities to fill some of their orders.

The canned goods situation continues to occupy the attention of both jobber and consumer. The normal consumption of canned tomatoes in the West is about 170 cars, or, say, 60,000 cases. This season, one firm, who last year handled 23 cars, will not get more than 500 or 600 cases. There were practically no stocks left over from last season, so that the tomato situation may be said to be strained. Corn and peas are, in consequence, very firm, and jobbers are not keen to take orders.

BEANS—The price has not advanced here in proportion to the east, but jobbers are instructing their men through the country not to take orders below a certain figure; $2.25 Winnipeg is about a fair quotation, but they must go higher, as no stocks can now be laid down here at that figure. All other cereals are in nominal demand and without change of prices. Owing to the small quantities of oats coming in the supplies of rolled oats on hand are small, but prices are still quoted on the basis of $1.90 for the 80-lb. sack.

EVAPORATED AND DRIED FRUITS—Raisins and currants are at last week's prices, but advices from California as to the advance in the apricot market are tending to stiffen prices here and choice are quoted at 9¼c. and standard at 8¾., and they may go higher. Peaches are unchanged at 8½ to 9c.

GREEN FRUITS—The market is principally devoted to apples at the present time and there are large sales at from $3 to $3.50 per bbl., according to variety. Snow apples are nearly done and the few remaining on the market are quoted at $5. Cranberries remain at $9 per bbl. in spite of anticipated advances. Tokay grapes are $3 per case. Rogers and Concords are in fair supply at 30 to 40c.

BUTTER—The creameries throughout the country are closing, and after this week prices of creamery butter will be the jobber's price to the retailer. The remaining stocks are being cleared up at 21c. factories. Dairy—There is a slight increase in supply this week, but it is rather of inferior grade, for which there is practically no demand. First grade of fresh dairy is worth 15c., Winnipeg, for round lots. Seconds bring from 12 to 13c.

CHEESE—Market is steady, with a good demand, and jobbers are selling at 13½ to 13¾c.

EGGS—The market is no better furnished than it has been for the past few weeks, and the price is now 17c., Winnipeg, for freshly gathered.

DRESSED AND CURED MEATS—The dressed meat market presents no new features this week. Beef is quoted at 5½ to 6¼c. per lb.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, October 27, 1902.

THERE is remarkable activity in the autumn grocery trade, and both wholesalers and retailers are kept very busy, having all the business they can possibly attend to. Travellers on the road are sending in large orders, and especially good reports of the state of trade generally. Payments are being met with exceptional promptness, and a healthy tone prevails in this line of business. The retailers report their weekly and monthly bills paid on time. They give as a reason for this that work is plentiful and wages are paid regularly.

There have been a number of minor changes in the market, but none of serious enough character to affect trade. Beans are still quoted high, but the opinion prevails that the high price will soon bring enough stock into the market to ease prices. Some grades of pickles are advancing, the reason given being the smaller production of onions and cucumbers. The advance is 25c. per doz. for bottled and 50c. per gal. for bulk. Flour remains firm and the tendency is to advance.

There is now a large trade in molasses. A good many of the retailers bought only short supplies during the summer, and now that the season for a greater use of this article has come in, they are stocking up more largely. Sugar remains unchanged. The demand is lighter than a month ago. The new sugar put on the market by the Redpath sugar refinery, at 20c. per 100 lb. below other quotations, is listed as "granulated." It is meeting with fairly good favor. It is coarser in grain and slightly off color, being slightly more yellow than extra granulated. The reason assigned for the new grade is to meet the competition of foreign granulated and beet sugars.

There is an improvement in the fish business. Good quantities are being taken in by the exporters, but the prices are abnormally low. Considerable codfish is still coming forward from Newfoundland. The markets in the South have not improved. That in Brazil especially is said to have reached the lowest point ever before known. The pack of the lobster canneries is said to be up to the average this season, but there is considerable complaint with reference to the Prince Edward Island pack, where the catch was large, and due care was not taken in packing.

The butter and cheese markets are both firm on account of favorable reports coming from England, where Canadian butter and cheese is in great demand, and has recently advanced considerably.

Farm produce is coming in steadily, and good prices are being realized. Potatoes are quoted at 40 to 45c.; oats at 38c.

JAVA TEA.

As foreshadowed in the British Consular report for 1900, the season's production of Java tea in 1901 exceeded any of its predecessors. The bulk was almost entirely shipped to Holland and London, though regular small parcels of specially prepared tea were forwarded to ports in the Persian Gulf. Overproduction reached a climax in the 1900 crop, both in India and Ceylon, and far more tea was produced than consumption required. The low prices, however, stimulated demand for the article. Attempts are being made by Java planters to prepare their tea in tabloid form, which is considered in some quarters to be most suitable for the markets in Russia. Statistics of exports for the last four years are as follows:

| | Lb. |
| 1898 | 12,110,724 |
| 1899 | 12,841,702 |
| 1900 | 15,406,984 |

NEW PEPPER FROM AFRICA.

There has just been laid before the French Academy of Medicine the result of an analysis made by Dr. Barille of a new pepper of African origin, recently imported from Kissi, on the Liberian frontier of Guinea. This product, which has already been given the name of Kissine pepper, grows abundantly in this region in a wild state. It is not akin to any known species, and, being very rich in piperine and volatile oil, can be used both as a spice and as a condiment. Its grains, generally very small, are characterized by a pedicule at their base. They give a reddish-brown powder, highly perfumed, and of a peculiar aromatic savor. French journals speak of this article as another interesting and valuable addition to the already long list of French colonial products.

CHANGES IN STRATFORD.

W. L. Scott, grocer, Stratford, Ont., has sold out to J. C. Jones, formerly of Jones Bros., of the same town. Mr. Scott intends going to Vancouver. Jones Bros. have dissolved partnership; R. S. Jones continuing.

CANNING OF CANADIAN OYSTERS.

IN the past the canning of oysters in Canada has been an unprofitable business owing to Baltimore packers being able to can at a very much less cost. Two years ago N. & M. Rattenbury, of Charlottetown, commenced the canning of Island oysters, and it is understood that they are the only firm competing with the American packers in Canada. Recently there has been an advance in bulk oysters and it is announced that a further advance must occur in the near future. It is thought that this will enable Canadian packers to go into canning more largely and will help them to get a footing in the market. A Montreal journal, in referring to the matter, says that the advance is owing to scarcity. Dealers in Baltimore, Norfolk and New Haven all report that the beds are becoming limited, and that, as a result, they have been compelled to advance their prices fully 25 per cent. Up to the present, wholesale dealers in Montreal have only advanced their price 20 per cent., quotations to retailers this week being $1.40 per gal. for standards and $1.60 for selects. These prices will shortly be raised to $1.60 and $1.80 respectively.

The propagation of the oyster is becoming a leading feature among growers, and the supply must more and more depend upon the cultivated beds rather than upon the natural growth. Meantime, the consumption is rapidly increasing, and as this will be greatly added to by the demand from the west, it looks as though the day for cheap oysters had passed, at least for the time being.

Malpeque, P.E.I., oysters, however, are very plentiful, and are selling at $3 to $6 per bbl., select hand-picked ones bringing the outside figure. It is expected that these will remain at the present quotations all season unless very stormy or severe weather should set in and continue long enough to interfere with the fishing operations on the coast, which event would, of course, have the effect of stiffening prices.—Mail, Halifax.

THE SECOND STEAMER FOR AFRICA.

The Elder-Dempster steamer Melville, which sails from Montreal for South Africa on November 18, is filling up rapidly with freight. So far, she will carry 2,000 tons of flour, 4,000 cases of butter, 3,000 barrels of apples and 2,000 cases of ham, in addition to cottons and woollens and agricultural machinery. The prospects are that she will go out as well filled up as did the Ontarian. Inquiries are already being received by Jas. Thom, manager of The Furness-Withy Company, for tonnage in their steamer sailing from St. John in December.

We would refer our readers to the advertisement of The Eby, Blain Co., Limited, showing a cut of their handsome warehouse with the recent alterations, claimed to be now the finest in Canada.

PLEASURES OF THE ROAD.

By "Roadster," in an English paper.

IF there were beneath the sun one single trade or profession whose members were unanimous in its praise, what a rush there would be for it! How paterfamilias would sigh with relief; how the "young gentleman just left school" would apply in his best copperplate for admission to its ranks. But there is not, and this side Utopia never will be, such a city of refuge for "our boys." Up and down the social scale, barrister and butcher, sailor and sweep, all sing the same sad song—"My dear sir, make the lad anything but that; a bare living is the most he can hope for. I assure you nowadays the competition," etc. Of all excuses and drawbacks, the universal scapegoat is that same "competition"—a word so welcome as almost to take rank with "that blessed word Mesopotamia!"

So the bagman, who, whatever be his faults, is at least up to date, comes forward with his little "wail." And the intelligent foreigner in the present, or Macaulay's New Zealander in future ages, will see in his mind's eye a feeble remnant of dispirited men trudging their way, repulsed from shop after shop; here by a notice that "Messrs. Penny & Post see no travellers"; there by a firm whose proprietary articles are all "our own make"; leaving town after town orderless and spiritless, and sneaking at night to their frugal meal and hard bed "in the worst inn's worst room."

A painful picture! If only it were attested by the railway carriage, the street, and the commercial-room. But they seem such "jolly companions every one" these poor "wailers." So jovial and hail-fellow-well-met among themselves; so affable and cheerful with any stranger who finds himself a bagman's vis-a-vis. Are they all forced, the cheerful smiles as they swing from customer to customer, or chaff "Boots" as he puts the bags inside the 'bus, and slams the door—three minutes to catch the train half a mile away! They grumble, it is true, as they sit in conclave at the commercial dinner, or over the evening "fish and tea"; but for men who "haven't taken a line to-day, sir," they speak with marvellous smoothness, and, moreover, display a lively interest in the vagaries of the Stock Exchange which one hardly looks for in men on the verge of despair and ruin.

There are undoubtedly many doing badly on the road; some because they deserve to do badly; others, for whose "best" adverse circumstances are too strong. A small number—as in all other trades—are doing superlatively well. And between these opposite extremes, the main body are doing "as well as can be expected."

It may be said of "the road," as the late George Robins once said of a desirable property brought under his hammer, "For any gentleman requiring this sort of thing, this is just the sort of thing he requires." Does a man like change of scene and society? The road will certainly give it him. Does he weary of the same daily walk to business, the same faces week after week behind the counter or the desk? Is it his taste to sleep one night in a city caravansera, and the next to be the only "gentleman in the parlor" of the one hotel in a country town where they study economy and dispense with gas on moonlight nights? And does he find that his appreciation of "home" is kept more lively by being a "week-end" visitor only? Then "the road" is, of all places, the place for him.

He may be so qualified, and yet not succeed as a traveller. For that he must have a genius for perseverance, and many things besides, a persuasive manner and a taking tongue among the number. But for a man with a talent for travelling, what I have hinted at as pleasures of the road will, if they do not actually smooth his path, yet lift him gently over many a rough place. And there are other alleviations of his lot. A "cranky" customer seen at oftenest weekly or monthly, is not so sharp a thorn in the flesh as a bullying manager or an uncongenial fellow-clerk. You pull yourself together, bow before the storm of grumbles or snubs, and 10 minutes later are outside in the sun, and rid of him till next journey. Even the fussiest of firms can only get at you through the medium of the correspondence clerk and the mailbag, and must confine the hourly interviews and complaints to those "inside." The man who stands behind his own counter soon loses, if success comes slowly, the pride of possession which he first felt. Waiting for trade is weary work. The bagman never waits—except for trains. He pushes forward, working shop after shop, street after street, now a small town, now a city, always hoping, and not infrequently finding that things are better "a little bit further on."

Travellers and tradesmen alike will tell you how the road swarms with unsuccessful brothers of the bag. Very likely; there are failures in every business and profession, but the unsuccessful traveller is always en evidence; the publicity of his work and the breadth of his field of action make this unavoidable. When wheat and chaff grow on separate stalks wholesale houses will send out none but successful men, and we shall probably miss the "cheery failures" whom a modern writer has described as the cream of social life. Meanwhile, threshing machines are not yet out of date, and a great army of weary countermen and clerks chorus the song of Capt. Macheath, and cry, "Let us take the road."

A VETERAN SPICE MERCHANT.

The oldest man in the spice business in Canada is Mr. S. H. Ewing, of the firm of S. H. Ewing & Sons, who entered the Montreal Coffee and Spice Co in the year 1848. Ten years later (1858) he, with his father, Mr. S. Ewing, sr., bought out this concern, and the business was then known as S. Ewing & Son. In the 60's Mr. S. H. Ewing's brother was admitted into partnership under the style of S. H. & A. S. Ewing, which continued until the year 1900, when the former severed his connection with the firm, and entered into partnership with his two sons, S. W. & A. H. Ewing, forming the firm of S. H. Ewing & Sons, of which firm the veteran merchant is still an active member. Notwithstanding his years, he is alert on all matters pertaining to the business, and still continues to take a keen interest in the doings of the commercial world.

SATURDAY A HOLIDAY.

As Saturday, November 1, is a holiday throughout Quebec with the members of the Roman Catholic faith, all the French business places will be closed, as well as all others who are required to observe All Saints' Day.

BROOM CORN CROP POOR.

Emil E. Boeckh, of United Factories, Limited, was interviewed by our representative a few days ago on the question of broom corn.

"Yes, the crop is certainly very inferior this year," replied Mr. Boeckh, "but good corn can be bought, and that is the only kind we purchase. We do not intend to raise the price of brooms if we can avoid it, although we would be justified in doing so, owing to the inferior crop and great scarcity of labor. Brooms will certainly be no cheaper, however, for some time to come."

CLOSING AT SEVEN.

For some time past the grocery clerks of Montreal have been endeavoring to get their employers to close the stores early on one night of the week, and at last they have succeeded, at least with a good number of the grocers. Thursday was the day chosen, and all those grocers whose signatures were obtained will hereafter close at 7 o'clock on Thursday nights. At Point St Charles and in the west end all the grocers agreed to the new arrangement. Others of the trade in the city may follow their example shortly.

A LETTER PER CHEESE POST.

The following, signed by Archer Cunningham, Luton, England, recently appeared in the columns of a London trade journal: "When cutting a Canadian cheese last week I came across a small glass bottle, and on opening up found it contained a letter addressed to Mr. George Bradbeer, Clifton, Bristol, to be forwarded on to him. This I did, and had a reply saying that his son was out in Canada having a course of actual cheese-making, and he was glad to get news from him in this very unusual way. I thought perhaps this might interest your numerous readers."

LEAKS IN GROCERY STORES.

COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS, as a rule, are observant of the ways in which a business is conducted, and are quick to notice any leakage in the business. They often come in contact with grocers and know much about the grocery business. One of them, in The Kansas City Journal of Commerce, says something about these leaks.

He is responsible for the statement that there are probably more leaks in the retail grocery business than in any other; leaks which if not stopped will most certainly lead to ruin. In many cases these leaks are visible and can easily be repaired. Some times these leaks are invisible to the grocer, but perfectly plain to all his friends and neighbors.

It is with the hope that what I say in this letter will cause some grocer to find his particular leak and stop it that causes me to write it. There are many kinds of leaks, so many that out of their multiplicity I can only mention a few and then not tell you half.

Carelessness is the principal leak in every business. When I was a boy, my father kept a grocery, and, of course, I worked for him. One cold night, being in a hurry to close up and go home, I opened a door between the storeroom and a back room in which were kept molasses, vinegar, and such like goods, and, without looking, threw a heavy box in, closed the door and went home.

The next morning I was awakened by the rythmic rise and fall of a barrel stave upon my warm and pulsating body. The box, which in my carelessness I had tossed into the warehouse, had alighted directly upon the faucet of a barrel of molasses that sold at $1.25 per gallon, broken it short off and all night in a sweet, dreamy stream that molasses had meandered until it was too tired to meander any longer.

That was carelessness.

At another time I helped to unload a barrel of molasses by sliding it down a plank; the plank was too thin, consequently broke; the barrel descended rapidly, also broke when it struck the ground, one end flying out; the molasses flew, too, in a raging torrent down the street.

That was carelessness, too.

Here is an instance where all your neighbors see the leak.

A grocer rises before the swallows begin to twiter. He starts to market to "lay in" his daily supply of vegetables. He thinks a "swallow" will do him good. He stops at a saloon where the "swallowers" never sleep, and his dime is swallowed by the barkeeper's till—the profit on a dollar's worth of sugar. He gets to the market square and meets a friend. They invest 20 cents each this time and the profit on $4 worth of sugar has gone down the "red lane."

A few more dimes will go the same way before he reaches home. Thank goodness, all grocers don't leak that way. Some grocers allow the sales to go down with a "dull thud" and stay there, being either ashamed to take out the extra weight in the presence of the customer, or he wishes to appear in a generous role.

Keep that kind of leak going and some day his business will go down with a "dull thud" and stay there. Selling at cost and not counting time, twine and paper is a drip that is often overlooked. If you sell a dollar for a dollar you lose money. Holding open on Sunday is a leak in the physical system which should be plugged at once. Holding open late at night waiting for a possible customer, thus wasting gas and the best hours of the night for recuperation is another way to leak.

Some grocers do not check up the orders closely when they are sent out and the driver says something was "short."

Was it, or was it a leak?

The grocer doesn't know; probably the driver does.

Another leak that often becomes a torrent impossible to check is the habit of giving credit without looking closely into the past of your customer. Should this man, just after moving into the neighborhood, ask you to lend him $10 on his simple word to pay, would you let him have it? I don't think you would, yet you'll let him "run a book" and scratch around yourself to get enough money to pay your jobber for the same goods. See the point? Another drip, drip, drip, is the habit some grocers have of displaying their fruits where the passerby can pick at them. He loses lots that way in a day and the picker always picks the ripest and largest, too.

Do you use a No. 4 sack when a No. 2 would do? Some also tear off more paper than necessary and some seem to think that twine is free. Do you always sell the oldest goods first, or do you pile the fresh with the old, thus putting them all, like old dog Tray, in "bad company?"

Forgetting to cover the cans and coffee bins, in consequence of such a negligence the strength leaks out, thus deteriorating both quality and quantity and driving your customers elsewhere to seek better goods. Did you ever think that when you leave the ice chest open one minute longer than necessary it entails a big loss on you in the course of the day? When you buy out of season goods, such as oats, wheats and other cereals in the summer time you are leaking badly, because they become wormy or musty and must be thrown away. Very few of them are guaranteed.

Leaks are occasioned sometimes by buying in too large quantities. An inducement is offered if the merchant will buy so much and he bites. The consequence being that before he has disposed of the lot it has evaporated; mice have made their habitation within his heart; weevils have eaten out the core and his profit has gone drop by drop.

The idea of buying large quantities of anything may work to the merchant's advantage occasionally, but nine times out of ten it only succeeds in tying up a large sum of money when that sum could be used in other ways several times, thereby stopping a leak instead of causing one.

A few cents invested in mosquito netting will keep your shelf goods from becoming fly-blown and dirty and help keep your stock looking bright and attractive.

Trying to transfer oil from one can to another without using a funnel is apt to cause a leak—and a fire. Using a half-gallon measure in place of all measures is a senseless leak. Some grocers argue that it is the same thing if you fill it twice for a gallon and that if you fill it half full it is a quart, etc. It is not the same thing; it is always more.

Do you allow your horse to stand in the sun? That's a leak in his vitality. Always let him stand with his head uphill and the brakes on. Don't wait for his shoe to come off. Have it tightened at once and save a leak in the time when you want him in a hurry.

Do you fail to discount your bills? You have no idea what a broad stream your failure in this particular makes at the end of the year. It will nearly pay your rent.

Allowing your account with the jobber to run behind is a leak on your credit that takes lots of damming to keep it deep enough to prevent its drowning you.

Some grocers always hire cheap help. Cheap help results in cheap service. Pay your help decent wages and take away the temptation of pilfering and you won't have any leak there.

Having leaky measures and faucets, keeping stuff on hand simply to draw trade. It does draw, but draws it to your neighbor.

Count your loaves of bread when the baker's man leaves them. Don't trust him to figure the amount. Weigh your meat. Packing houses are as apt to make mistakes as anybody else. See that you get the amount of ice that you pay for.

When your oil man puts in your oil it doesn't take much time to stay by the can and see it run in. I have heard of oilmen who have carried two buckets back but one of them was always empty, yet the grocer paid for two full ones. Finally take this as it is meant, not as censure, but as advice from one who "has been through the mill."

THE CUT-RATE GROCER.*

His Methods and His End.

A GOOD definition of grocer might be "a person selling food"; that is to say, supplying such articles as the public need for eating, the necessary staples as well as the luxuries of living, which, with perhaps the exception of fresh meat and fish, are supposed to be kept on sale by the modern grocer.

There is an old saying that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach. A certain married lady of long experience once advised her younger sister in the proper treatment of a husband, to simply "feed the brute." Society must be fed, and not only so, but insists on being well fed. Nearly half of the laws on our statute books are for the regulation or protection of articles of food. The great trusts and mergers in transportation derive probably over 60 per cent. of their income from handling the goods a grocer sells. Perhaps fully two-thirds of the world's commerce consists of handling foodstuffs, and nearly all the world's prairies, valleys and hillsides that are cultivated are for its production.

On the other hand, it is stated nine-tenths of our diseases are caused by improper or impure food.

The business of the grocer, then, is quite an important factor in our industrial and economic system, as well as in our social well being and health, and should be conducted on careful principles and with good judgment. The grocer is the last one in the long list engaged in handling food products before they are delivered to the kitchen of the consumer. On his capability, judgment and honesty depends, to a great extent, the physical welfare of society.

To give a few passing thoughts to his qualifications is well worth a few minutes of our time, which so many of us have gathered here in convention to learn and profit by exchange of ideas and gather knowledge by each other's experience.

As I just stated, capability, judgment and honesty are three of the necessary qualifications of a grocer. Capability is the outgrowth of practice, having learned and to some extent mastered the many details of the trade. I remember while clerking in a dry goods store, as a young man, I asked an older clerk how it was one could never get a bolt of Irish linen back again in the original folds after once opening. His answer was: "Because ye never learned." I silently resented the answer at the time, but it stuck to me, and I have since seen its truth, and have tried to apply it to my chosen trade.

Judgment is founded on learning and knowing how, but is a higher qualification; it seems to be inborn with some, while to others it seems unattainable. For instance, when a boy just out of school I, with others, had an opportunity of competing for a position in a large wholesale importing house, by writing an answer to a question. A house in a rival coast city had sent a consignment of sugar to this house, and the question was: What should be done with it? Only one boy wrote an answer: "Ship it back," which secured him the position. Business judgment.

The other day a firm of Seattle brokers, one that didn't deal in smaller matters than carloads, found it necessary to dispose of a consignment of "Royal" baking powder in small 10-cent lots to retail dealers at about 20 per cent. below cost, in order, it was stated, to save storage. Some lots were bought, while to others a slim bank account came to their assistance in the place af good judgment.

But above capability and above good judgment is that last qualification— honesty, without which no grocer will or should succeed. Honest to his customers to give them full value, and honest enough with himself to make a fair profit without recourse to tricks. We laugh at the drummer's story of the deacon who asked his apprentice if the floor had been swept, if the sugar had been sanded and the vinegar watered before having family prayer in the back room where the grocer lived. But the deacon grocer of our day sells a 75 per cent. glucose syrup labelled "Pure Candy Drips," and no one is any wiser. The pure jelly contains more potato starch than either fruit or sugar—but the public want cheap goods, so the modern grocer stretches his honesty as far as the law and the manufacturer lets him. But there is a limit which no honest man will overstep.

The insane clamor of the public for bargains and cheap goods is met by the so-called cut-rate grocer, the subject of our discussion.

The cut-rate grocer is usually a man who "never learned" the grocer's trade, who couldn't tell a Santos coffee from a Salvador, or a Ceylon tea from young hyson if the label were off; nor a piece of breakfast bacon from English belly—he has gone into the business to make money, and in order to attract the public to his store he usually advertises some one or more leading staples, well known and fully labelled, at a little below cost. The bargain hunter is attracted and not only buys but tells his neighbor—your customer—how cheap Arbuckle's coffee, for instance, is sold at Mr. Green's new grocery. They are nearly always new grocers. Your friend, the customer, doesn't go there to buy. She wouldn't leave her old place, but she tells you how very queer it is you can't sell goods as cheap as Mr. Green does, and she enumerates his prices. You try to show her that you cannot possibly sell those goods at cost, but that your new competitor probably intends making it up on something else, and she says: "Oh, no-o; why he gives one pound of sugar more for $1 than you do—and flour, why Mrs. Jones, my next-door neighbor, bought a sack at 90c., while you have been charging me $1 right straight along, and——" What's the use of arguing. You heave a sigh and get kind of nervous (if you are just a small concern), as you dare not get mad, for fear of losing a good customer. But if you are bigger, you don't care so much, and perhaps get a little huffy and tell her those are your prices and if she thinks she can do better she better try Green—and she doesn't. In nine cases out of ten she will stay right with you; maybe kick a little, but she likes you, and that is the reason she stays.

But others, who are not your regular customers will drop in and ask: "How do you sell Arbuckle's coffee?" "How many pounds of sugar for a dollar?" And when you tell them, they turn around and walk out—and you begin to wonder if it's epidemic and you the only high-priced store in town. Some clerk suggests that maybe we better give an extra pound of sugar on the dollar, and you frown and wait awhile. You have all been there. What makes people who are not your customers come to you if they can get the low rates at Green's? Well, I will tell you. As a rule, they don't like Green. They don't like the appearance of the goods in his store, but the price is an attraction; and the people would rather it was some other store.

Now, as to Mr. Green. He is usually a man who has tried several vocations. He has dealt in real estate, been a contractor, a speculator, done some teaming and is now trying his hand at groceries. He has had a tip from a friend where he can buy cheap, and he has a little money. He can undersell anybody; why, he can get canned goods, for instance, from 30 to 50c. per dozen cheaper than a jobber would sell you by the carload. He doesn't know that the extra vent in the can top means a "do-over," and if he knows it he doesn't care. The same with his dried fruit. If it has been steamed once or twice to kill the sugar weavil and grubs, what's the odds? He makes larger margin with his cut-rate price than you, the honest grocer, can possibly do on straight goods. Well, yes, he hurts trade some. I suppose I am about up to my subject—that's his influence. Customers get dissatisfied, and either you will meet his prices—and fail, or you will stick to the association price—which good business judgment has dictated—and lose trade. "Oh, I don't know!" Your best trade will stay with you. They have learned to trust you and they like you. Some who leave will come back again. Those who stay with him and trade—well, I don't know what influence he will have on them. He may assist the physician, the health officer, the coroner, and the undertaker in their line of business. I know not, merely hint at it, as I have no authority for such statement. As a rule, he doesn't last long; he doesn't get rich fast, and it's but a passing wonder when his store closes or changes hands. If we were to imagine him to remain with us, it would naturally demoralize the grocery trade.

NO SMOKING.

What appears to us to be a very sensible request on the part of Wm. Metcalfe & Co., retail grocers, Berlin, Ont., is this placard, posted in a conspicuous place in their neatly-arranged and highly-creditable store:

> NOTICE.
> This is not a smoking car. Please leave your pipe and cigars on the gate-post. Tobacco smoke injures our goods.

It is not roughly put to the men customers, and yet it conveys the intended meaning and impresses it upon the minds of those who read perhaps in a greater degree than would the cold "no smoking" notice.

The men folk who carelessly smoke in grocery stores do not know how readily groceries absorb odors.

It is a merchant's duty to his customers to make a study of the little things that help to protect his goods.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. George Hepburn, secretary E. W. Gillett Co. Limited, is taking a few weeks vacation and occupying himself in the Lindsay district duck and partridge shooting.

An important change has been made in The Hudson's Bay Co. Mr. George E. Sharpe, manager of the Calgary branch, has been appointed assistant general-manager, and Mr. J. G. Edgar, for some time bookkeeper at this branch, has been appointed manager of the Calgary branch. The employes of The Hudson's Bay Co. waited upon the retiring manager at Calgary recently and presented him with an address and a beautiful fur coat. The presentation was made by Mr. T. T. Bowes, the oldest employe in the store.

OUR GOODS IN GREAT BRITAIN.

AN interesting letter has been received at the office of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association from J. H. Moore, who is connected with the Canadian exhibit at the Wolverhampton Art and Industrial Exhibition, in which he indicates very clearly the standing which Canadian goods already have in the Mother Country.

Mr. Moore writes in part:

"I have been very busy since May with our Exhibition, introducing our Canadian products in the Midlands. This is a very densely populated district. We have done some good work in introducing Canadian foodstuffs, hay, cheese, tinned goods, butter. A good deal of stuff is palmed off on the public here as Canadian, when it is really American. On one occasion I asked for Canadian bacon, and was offered Swift's and then Cudahy's, both United States makes, of course. Many of the dealers are ignorant, and some are dishonest, so a lot of missionary work must be done in England and also in other countries, where you will find very shrewd and sharp Yankees always hard at it, quietly working up the American products, which many are led to believe are Canadian.

"My hard work in England and Scotland has led me to the conclusion that Canada does not supply one-quarter as much as she could and should. In London I find United States firms represented by the hundreds, many with large stocks of goods, doing a very large business.

"A directory is published of Americans in London, a book of over 300 pages, nicely bound. When I return to London I am going to arrange if possible for a directory of Canadians in London."

TORONTO RETAILERS.

THE regular monthly meeting of the Grocers' Section of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada was held in their board room, Medical building, on Monday evening, October 27, 1902, F. C. Higgins, the chairman, presiding.

A communication was received from the Grocers' Section of the Toronto Junction Branch endorsing the proposition of having certain makes of soap placed upon the "Price Restrictive Plan."

The trade improvement committee brought in their report regading the agreement with the Wholesale Grocers' Guild, which sets forth those places to whom the retailers have no objection to their selling direct to, but outside of those places they are not to sell at retail.

The question of having a standard for vinegar was still in the hands of the committee, and they were negotiating with the Government regarding it. A full report will be brought down at the next meeting.

Under the head of new business, some complaints were placed before the meeting, stating that certain millers were selling flour direct to the public. The matter was left to the general secretary to correspond and find out if the practice would be discontinued.

Complaints were also brought in regard to the weight of the bags of charcoal, as they range all the way from 6 to 10 lb. in a bag. This matter will also be dealt with by the general secretary.

The scheme recently adopted by a company to place advertisements on the walls and ceiling of the merchant's premises was discussed, and, upon motion, which was unanimously agreed to, a committee was appointed, consisting of Messrs. Good, Coulter, Walker and Nettleton, to consider the agreement that the company desire the merchants to sign, and bring in a report at the next meeting.

A complaint was also made of a certain fruit grower in Port Dalhousie, who has been in the habit of sending fruit to Toronto having large fruit at the top and small fruit underneath. As no notice has been taken by the grower of the letters sent to him the matter was ordered to be handed over to the fruit inspector, and the name of the grower to be made known to all the members.

A committee was then appointed to meet the Fruit Section and discuss the present system of shipping oysters in pails, and the method of selling them by the measure.

A report of this will be brought in at the next meeting.

The membership committee reported a large number of new members during the month.

SUCCESSFUL GROCERS SELL SUCCESSFUL ARTICLES.

Selling successful articles is the most powerful factor in encouraging new trade and maintaining the old. The dealer who overlooks quality in his eager search for profit cannot expect to command a good and profitable trade. It is because have proven a success from the beginning that prosperous dealers enjoy selling them. They are ready sellers—they are not shelve-stickers—they move quickly from dealer to consumer. Why? Because our aim to manufacture extracts of unequalled strength, purity and richness—the three most essential elements in high-class extracts—has been strictly adhered to ever since the first bottle was produced thirty-one years ago.

No better means could possibly be devised for impressing upon the minds of your customers the fact that you are a first-class grocer than by selling JONAS' FLAVORING EXTRACTS. The dealer who trifles with the inferior kind is certain to lose many good customers whose good-will and trade could be secured by selling Jonas' extracts. Successful grocers handle and sell JONAS' FLAVORING EXTRACTS ! !

Two Yorkshire Carcasses.

In this cut it is specially interesting to note the quality of the bacon, as indicated by the general shape. In No. 1 the short thick head and heavy jowl suggest the excessive fat that can be seen over the back; this one is not a prime type of bacon hog. In No. 2 the long tapering ham and head and the light jowl indicate a type that, with proper feeding, will produce a first-class article of bacon.

Good Bacon Needed

The HERBAGEUM fed hog is peculiar in that

He always weighs more than his appearance would indicate.
He never becomes stunted or suffers from weakness in back and legs.
He is as good at five months as other hogs are at seven, and He makes the very choicest of firm, sweet, well-flavored bacon, such as the pork-packers require.
His blood is always pure, and pure blood offers the greatest known resistance to hog cholera.
It is safe and profitable to feed Herbageum every day to every animal on the farm. Lice and ticks cannot live where it is used.

OTTAWA TRADE GOSSIP.

TRADE is still good among retailers. Wholesalers are all busy delivering fall goods, which are coming in every day. New currants arrived this week. Prices in several staple lines have changed. Flour is 10c. per bbl. higher. Beans are worth $2.35. Sugar advanced last week. Cheese is a little lower on this board. Eggs have advanced 1 to 1½c. The price of fine Filiatra currants in ½-boxes is 4½c. Raisins are said to be higher, prices quoted for selected Valencias being 8 to 9c., and fine off-stalk, 7½ to 8½c. Strong bakers' flour has advanced from $3.70 to $3.80, and patent from $4 to $4.10 per bbl. Rolled oats are expectied to go higher. They are selling at $3.60 per bbl., but the price of oats is now 32 to 34c., so that an advance is looked for. Bulk pickles are being sold readily in quantities at $2.50 per gal. Some lines of bottled goods, especially the cheaper ones, are higher. Pickles that were $1 per doz. are now selling at $1.25.

Butter is a good price on the local market, good lots are worth 18 to 20c. Creamerp is scarce at 22c. Eggs are now selling at 18c. by the case. Cheese sold on the Ottawa Board last week for 11⅛c., which was a little lower than last week. There was only about 770 boxes boarded, and only 200 boxes were sold at that price. The buyers would not go higher, as they said the quality made at this season of the year did not warrant it. There will only be about three more meetings this season.

Everyone interested is talking tomatoes. The lowest price mentioned as to their value in round lots is about $1.45, one retail merch- being known to have disposed of 100 cases at that figure. Very few have any extra quantity to sell, and it looks like as if the price will be still higher.

Corn and peas are firm at 85 to 90c. Salmon is now quoted at $1.45 for good brands, such as was bought to arrive for $1.20 and $1.25.

HAS A SORT OF CONVINCING SOUND.

If there is one thing a woman will stop and admire more than any other in a newspaper it is the picture of a strong, heroic, handsome fellow, dressed in a suit of clothes that enhances the strong points in the masculine figure and face. Not only does the woman admire the picture, but ardently longs to associate with a man dressed like the man in the picture.

Every time you make an impression upon a woman by some striking cut used in your newspaper advertisement, you may be sure her men friends are going to hear about it. And if your advertisement cuts are regularly striking and strong you will soon have a reputation among the women that will be worth all the trouble and expense the advertising entails.—Cahn-Wampold's Chat.

FISHING AT THE MAGDALENS.

Reports from the Magdalen Islands state that the fishing there has been excellent this year. Herrings and lobsters have been somewhat scarce, but the cod fishing has been of the best. About 11,000 barrels of mackerel, which are worth about $132,000, have been taken.

FIRE IN A WINE CELLAR.

On Sunday afternoon, October 26, a fire broke out in the establishment of Lawrence A. Wilson & Co., wholesale wine merchants, 87 St. James street, Montreal, and the bottled stock was considerably damaged by fire, and some damage was also caused by water. The fire started in the flooring near the furnace, but did not get beyond the cellar, where it originated.

TRINIDAD COCOA INDUSTRY.

GORDON, GRANT & CO., Trinidad, in their last commercial review, report as follows regarding the cocoa industry of that island: "The first small deliveries of the new crop have appeared within the last few days, and supplies will now gradually increase, but shipments will be unimportant until next month. The crop prospects continue to be favorable, but the bulk of the fruit on the trees will not be ripe until December or January. The small supplies marketed during the fortnight have been eagerly competed for at $12.75 to $13 for ordinary to good red, and $13.25 to $13 50 for estates grades, with an upward tendency notwithstanding the depressing advices from consuming centres. Shipments for the fortnight amount to 1,122 bags, of which 298 bags went to the United States, and for the year ending September 30 exports amount to 169,910 bags, as compared with 137,015 bags for the corresponding period in 1901. Shipments thus show an increase of 32,895 bags as compared with last year, and about 7,000 bags ahead of any previous year. Although this record crop may to some extent be attributed to the exceptionally favorable season following the small crop of 1901, it must be borne in mind that new cultivation is constantly coming into bearing. Every year large tracts of Crown lands are being taken up for cocoa growing, and the output must necessarily increase. In the older districts, however, the general tendency is towards decreasing crops."

ADULTERATED FOODS.

THE result of the series of experiments conducted by Mr. Hersey, the analyst for the city of Montreal, in connection with the adulteration of catsups and other such articles with injurious substances for coloring and preserving purposes, has been that Hon. M. E. Bernier, Minister of Inland Revenue for the Province of Quebec, was notified on October 24 that large quantities of goods containing colorings and preservatives injurious to the health were being imported into this country. As the chief analyst of the Dominion Government is subject to Mr. Bernier's control, it is thought that the matter will thus be given a public exposure, and goods from foreign countries unfit for human consumption will be kept out of the country.

At a meeting of the Hygiene Committee of the Montreal City Council it was pointed out that the medical health officer had power to deal with such cases in the city by confiscating the articles adulterated and prosecuting the offenders. The officer was requested to write to the American Government giving the names of such brands of adulterated catsups as had been sent here. The attention of the Government of the Province of Quebec will also be called to the great quantity of adulterated foods sold in that Province contrary to the law.

Twenty-four samples of tomato catsups were examined by Mr. Hersey, 12 made in Canada and 12 in the United States. All of those of American origin were bad, Of the Canadian 12, 10 were bad, and only 2 found to be free from deleterious substances.

In those which were condemned, the analyst states that not only were dyes used for coloring purposes, but other chemicals were employed as well in order to preserve the goods. As all sorts of tomatoes, good and bad and old and young, are used in making these catsups, it is difficult to prevent them from going to the bad quickly, and the appearance of the casup would be spoiled were it not for the dyes.

A quantity of candy was also examined. The dyes extracted from this were used to color white silk. A quarter of a yard was dyed a rose color from candy of a similar hue, while another quarter of a yard was dyed green from the dye in green candy.

Dr. Laberge, the Medical Health Officer of Montreal, stated that he would take legal action against a couple of Canadian manufacturers, in order to find out what jurisdiction the city has in such cases. He does not intend to injure Montreal manufacturers to the advantage of those in other cities, so will move cautiously.

Jones Bros., of the Maple Leaf Grocery Store, Wellington street, Stratford, have dissolved partnership and the business will e continued by R. S. Jones.

WALNUT CROP OF FRANCE IN 1902.

WRITING from Havre under date of October 2, the American consul says: It is somewhat early to give exact information regarding this year's walnut crop in France, as owing to unfavorable weather conditions it has been retarded. All the advices I have received agree that on account of the inclement weather which prevailed during last spring and the first part of the summer, there will be a reduced production of walnuts, some placing the crop at 30 per cent. below that of a normal year. If the present fine weather will last it is thought that the quality of the nuts will be good.

To form an estimate of this year's walnut crop, in the following tables are given the production of table walnuts in the principal nut-growing departments of France for the past five years, the value of the crops, and the average value per 110.23 lb.

The statistics of 1897 to 1900, inclusive, are official; those for 1901, are estimated.

THE USEFUL APPLE.

A FRUIT, which no matter how many we use, yet we never grow tired of, is the apple. For ages this product has been valuable to man as a food and is to-day preferred by many before the orange, the banana, the pineapple, for eating purposes. In her "Table and Kitchen Talks," Lida Ames Willis thus eulogizes the apple:

In point of usefulness the apple undoubtedly holds the same relation to fruits that wheat holds to grains. While in the South it may have a rival in its sweet sister, the orange, it adapts itself to more variations than the latter, which is more in the nature of a beverage than solid food material.

The apple is firmer than most fruits owing to the greater proportion of cellulose and to this and to the presence of malic acid they owe their laxative properties, properties shared also by cider or apple wine. They are rich in pectin and thus, with few exceptions, form jelly. The ratio of sugar to acid varies in different varieties; that in the sweetest kind of dessert apple may be as high as 22.1, while in cooking apples it is never higher than 8.1.

Few other fruits will flourish so far north as the apple, although it is a fruit of semi-tropical nature. It has the additional advantage of keeping in excellent condition the year round and can be transported and stored for months without loss of flavor.

The dessert apples hold first rank and include quite a number of well-known varieties; the pipkin, which was a frequent and particular luxury at Royal tables in Shakespeare's time and to which he often refers, is perhaps the best example of the dessert apple. The name being derived from the fact that this fruit was raised from the pips of seeds. The dessert apple must be fragrant, delicate in flavor, tender, juicy, and very digestible; for eating uncooked they must also be perfectly ripe, and the very thinnest paring removed, as the more nutritious as well as the aromatic portion of the apples lies near the surface. There is, for this reason, a very noticeable difference in flavor between apples baked or stewed in their skins and those previously pared. While uncooked apples, when well ripened, are a most valuable addition to the diet at any season, they had better precede the meal than follow it, and are, in fact, better eaten alone or with only good wheat or white bread. They must always be thoroughly masticated, especially when eaten by children. In many instances it is advisable to scrape the apple, using a silver knife, and spread the pulp on buttered entire wheat or white bread; then children, or those who do not sufficiently masticate their food, cannot swallow the apple in great lumps, which are sure to cause unpleasant results, and the apple is blamed.

Cooking apples are more acid and less digestible and should never be given raw to children. Cooking, however, often develops in them a flavor finer than the dessert apple possesses. Many apples which would not be the least palatable eaten raw develop a peculiar richness and piquancy cooked in their skins. The thrifty cook gladly welcomes the apple harvest, which provides a delightful addition to her winter store of foods.

LIGHT WEIGHTS AND FALSE MEASURES.

By H. J. Holmes.

An enormous number of London shopkeepers apparently yearn to accumulate wealth quickly by swindling their customers.

This statement receives ample substantiation from last year's report of the Public Control Department of the London County Council. From it we learn that the total number of unjust weight and measure appliances seized during the 12 months reached the imposing figures of 63,950 !

The amount of hard cash of which the public was robbed by such means can only be conjectured, but must have been a small fortune.

The L. C. C. employs a staff of officials whose duty it is to run to earth the perpetrators of this cruel system of fraud—cruel because its victims are mostly of the poorer class, who must feel acutely the loss of even the smallest sum.

As is well known, all weights, measures, and weighing instruments should, before being used in trade, bear the official stamp which records their honesty. Nearly 3,000,000 appliances of the sort were duly marked in the London district last year. But it is one thing that they are correct when they leave the L.C.C. official residence; quite another matter whether they will be allowed to remain so !

It requires the persistent efforts of 91 inspectors to limit the possibilities of the various appliances being tampered with, as the large number of seizures testify. And it must not be concluded that all the shop-keeping rogues are brought to book; some succeed in evading Nemesis for years. If eventually caught, their only punishment for the first two offences is being mulcted in a comparatively small fine—which, considering all things, they can well afford.

The dodges of the dishonest shopkeepers to evade detection are seemingly without limit. Swindling is a paying game, and those who practise such a lucrative profession can afford to devote much time to the study of the art of not being found out.

There is an instructive collection of swindling relics in the possession of Mr. Webb, the chief of the Newington Weights and Measures district office.

The collection of seized appliances includes a specimen of one of the most barefaced devices ever discovered, even in daring London. It is a machine once used for weighing tea. To the customers' side of the scales a string was attached, running down a hollow socket and through a hole in the counter, a weight being fastened to the end of the string. The weight could be supplemented by a pull of the shopman's fingers when considered necessary! A big point about this contrivance was that the string could be detached at a moment's notice on the advent of the L.C.C. inspector.

Mr. Webb's collection also includes several pairs of scales possessing very valuable idiosyncrasies—for the trader. Some have the happy knack of insuring that a purchaser only receives thirteen or fourteen ounces for every pound-weight paid for! The weights used may be genuine enough, but the scales are so constructed that when, say, a one-pound weight is placed in a certain position near the side of the pan, the scale containing the goods descends several ounces short.

A customer could thus be swindled of from one ounce to four ounces in every pound, according to the distance from the centre of the pan that the shopman's conscience allowed him to place his weight.

How regretful must have been the parting between a certain marine-storekeeper and the useful dial-scale which favored him either in buying or in selling. The registering hand was so fitted as to move backward or forward by a touch of the finger. In buying goods, the ingenious proprietor naturally kept the dial register low; in selling he merely, with a casual and unobserved touch of his forefingers upon the back of the dial, pushed the hand on a few points.

As for fraudulent weights, Mr. Webb's collection forms an admirable object lesson of the lengths to which a thorough, enterprising shopkeeper will go.

There are scores of weights, for the most part bearing the official stamp of honesty, but each one in itself yielding ample proof that it has done its part in the art of swindling the public. From the quarter of a pound right up to the half hundredweight we are able to see how fraudulent even an officially stamped weight may become in the hands of unscrupulous traders.

Holes are drilled or cut in the metal, and filled with cork, wood, paper, or other light material. Sometimes a thin coating of lead hides the "faker's" work, but in other cases the cork or wood filling was undisguised when the weights were seized.

As for measures, there are many examples of how these are tampered with in order to defraud the public. False bottoms, dinged sides, drooping spouts, and worn-down tops are constantly used as the means of giving short measure. Costers are habitual offenders in this connection. The economical housewife who makes her purchases from itinerant hawkers does not always save money by the transaction.

The L.C.C. detective is often to be found hot on the trail of the dishonest coal-hawker, at whose hands the poor people who buy fuel in small quantities suffer much. It is a good thing to find this class of offence growing less. Not that the average coal-hawker is becoming more honest, but he has learnt to dread the sudden appearance of the little black van which bears a relentless inspector with his undeniable standard scales, empowered to test the weight of every bag of coal on the hawker's cart.

It is generally conceded that, so far as its powers go, the L.C.C. leaves no stone unturned in this branch of its multitudinous duties to save the public from the shopkeeping and hawking swindler; and that the Council's efforts in this direction are ably backed up by one of the most carefully organized bodies of men in the United Kingdom.—Royal Magazine.

THE SHORT BEAN CROP.

Under date of October 27, Samuel Glenn & Son, Chatham, Ont., write: "The Canadian Grocer" as follows regarding the selection of beans : "The acreage planted was smaller than for some years, the heavy rainfall of July reduced this about 30 per cent., and just as harvest was well under way we had three weeks of almost incessant rains. A large portion of the crop lay in the fields until almost unfit for shipping purposes. Of these we have had some samples which will waste fully half, some not quite so bad, but the larger portion still worse. Probably 25 per cent. of the crop was harvested after these rains and will, we think, waste fully one-quarter, so you will see the new crop will be very short. We think 20 per cent. of the 1901 crop was carried over. Of these a large quantity have changed hands during the past three weeks at $1.70 to $1.85, but most of farmers are holding for more money. Taking balance carried over from 1901, and marketable beans af this year's growth, we do not think we have 50 per cent. of a full crop. The situation is strong, and we look for higher prices as the season advances."

ANY OLD DISCOUNT.

A large New York department store had an advertisement offering three percentages of discount. First they said they would save you from fifteen to fifty per cent. Further on—"We'll save you from twenty to forty per cent." At the end they said: "A third less than elsewhere is a fair average on which to base your calculations."—Chat.

"Send me another case of RED ROSE TEA, if it is as good as it was before."

"RED ROSE is the best tea I ever had. I hope you will keep it up to the standard."

DOZENS of times I have received letters, and also had customers speak to me personally in the way I have written the paragraphs above.

Why do they write or talk this way?

Why do they think that there is any danger of the quality not being kept up to the standard?

There must be some reason, and I think the old saying, "A burnt child dreads the fire," answers the questions fully.

All these dealers have handled other teas—they must have got BURNT in some way, and naturally fear they may suffer the same way with RED ROSE TEA. Well, perhaps they will, but another saying—"Don't cross a stream until you come to it" will fit in very well here.

What has put RED ROSE TEA where it is to-day? Just the fact that it is "GOOD TEA," the VERY BEST GOOD TEA that you or anyone else can buy.

GOOD ADVERTISING.

A LARGE bread manufacturer in Toronto is at present announcing his intention of giving prizes for the best advertisements of his bread, written by the school children of the city. There is no entrance fee ; only the children are advised to try a loaf of the bread before writing their copy, so that they can describe its good qualities accurately.

Here is a man who evidently believes in publicity, and he knows how to get it. It is all well enough to appeal to the men and women who have to purchase the bread, but it is a stroke of policy to start first with the children. Through them the whole family is bound to become interested and outsiders as well. If the average contestant doesn't let everyone within a radius of two miles know what he is doing he is no ordinary child.

This instance is cited here just by way of a hint. There may be merchants throughout the country who will find a helpful idea in this scheme. While it may not be advisable for the great majority of tradespeople to attempt it, yet a good many may be in a position to put it to the test.

In looking over a pile of newspapers the other day in a vain endeavor to find some bright and interesting grocers' advertisements, the writer came across a considerable white space in the centre of which appeared the important (?) announcement, "This space belongs to Blank, the dry goods merchant."

Looking at this so-called advertisement from a purely utilitarian point of view, what commercial advantage is it going to give Mr. Blank? Is it going to arouse the slightest interest on the part of the public in Mr. Blank's business? Pause, and think to what good purpose that white space might have been used. Surely, Mr. Blank, if he had any business worth advertising at all, might have put something in it to interest the average housewife. But no, he has lost the opportunity.

Advertising is a serious matter and should not be treated with levity. Moreover, it costs money and is expected to bring in returns. If a merchant is going to make an April fool joke of it, like Mr. Blank has done, he will have to take the consequences.

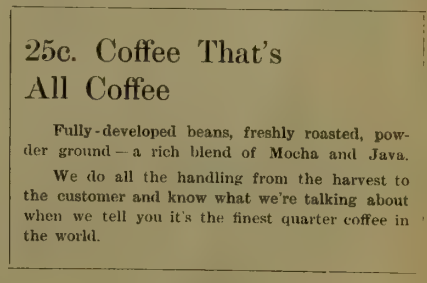
In last week's issue of The Toronto Moon, some fun was made of the great preponderance of advertising matter in the leading magazines of to-day. The periodicals were viewed from the standpoint of the advertising, as if that portion were the only part worthy of attention. When reference was made to the few pages of reading matter, they were put aside with a few remarks about their lack of interest and their uselessness.



All these may, of course, be pure and simple irony, but it has a vein of truth in it. There is no doubt that the advertising matter in the magazines has more attraction for some people than the literary portion. Even to the magazine reader the pages of advertising have a decided interest; so that all around the advertising matter forms a fair percentage of the total value of a magazine from the standpoint of the average reader.

"Ad World" is the title of a new monthly published in Montreal devoted to the interests of the advertising public and to the study of modern office methods.

There are few things that advertising can't do, no matter how good it may be or how wisely placed. It can't restore health and strength to a broken-down business that's drawing its last breath and hasn't enough vitality to take any nourishment. It can't sell enough of a poor article to make it profitable in the long run. It can't sell very much of a good thing if an equally good and well-advertised thing of the same kind is sold at a lower price. And it can't do the most good anyhow unless it is pretty good itself — unless there's real thought and method in it—business arguments, interesting details, facts.

There are a few things that advertising can and will do—that it is doing right along for those who know how to use it. Advertising of the right sort will help any legitimate business under Heaven that deserves help. Backed by the right goods and prices it will do more to build up a business than any other one force known to the business world. Under its influ-

It will pull many a business out of the hole when it's a matter of finding a wider market for a good thing and finding it promptly. All this and more advertising has done, and is doing and will do.—American Machinist Mailing Card.

NEW MINCE MEAT PACKAGE.

The Capstan Manufacturing Co., of Toronto, are putting a delicious package mince meat on the market this season known as "English" pressed mince meat. Their reputation for first-class mince meat in bulk is well known among the trade, and doubtless their new brand in package form will meet with merited success.

IMPORTANCE OF BEE-KEEPING.

Few people in America realize the importance of the bee-keeping industry, remarks an exchange. It is estimated that Europe produces about $18,000,000 worth of wax and honey, and that a similar sum results from the benefits conferred by the fertilizing habits of the bees. So highly is this industry esteemed abroad that Germany has 1,900,000; Spain, 1,690,000; Austria, 1,550,000; France, 950,000; Holland, 240,000; Russia, 110,000; Denmark, 99,000; Belgium, 200,000; Greece, 30,000. These countries practically consume their own honey crop. There is no reason why our consumption should not be proportionately great. The chief obstacle is the general ignorance of the value of honey as food, and the use of it only as an occasional treat, instead of an article of daily food.

The stock of Mrs. S. Langlois, general merchant, St. Samuel De Gayhurst, Que., has been sold at 69¾ c. on the dollar to L. S. Roberge, of Lambton.

TRADE IN CACAO AND BRAZIL NUTS.

THE Brazilian nut crop for 1902 is nearly all in the hands of the dealers or in transit from the fields, and an accurate estimate of the total can be made. The crop is nearly double the combined output of the two previous years. The quality has also been unusually good, and the supply has been so judiciously handled that there has been neither a glut nor a shortage in the market during the season. Prices have ruled firm throughout, and at no time has any stock accumulated. The demand from the United States increases steadily. In 1900 the United States took 44 per cent. of the crop and Europe the remainder. In 1901 50 per cent. of the crop was taken by the United States, and this year that country's purchases have amounted to 55 per cent.

The total shipments of nuts from the Amazon up to date have been 6,871 tons, of which Manaos shipped 3,778 tons and Para 3,093 tons. The most conservative estimates of the remainder of the crop place it at about 300 tons, thus making a total for the crop of 1902 of about 7,200 tons. The crop of 1900 was 2,511 tons; that of 1901, 2,808 tons.

THE CACAO CROP

The cacao market has been steady at average prices, and the demand fully equal to the supply. No crop in this country is subject to such fluctuations as cacao, and for this reason comparisons with previous crops are valueless.

The total shipments from the Amazon for the first six months of 1902 were:

| | Tons. |
|---|---|
| January | 314 |
| February | 310 |
| March | 409 |
| April | 408 |
| May | 562 |
| June | 587 |
| July | 300 |
| Total | 2,800 |

Something more than one-third was taken by the United States, and the balance by Europe. France, as usual, is the largest consumer, with Holland second. The trade with the United States is, however, increasing, and before long that country will doubtless consume the bulk of the cacao product of South America.

FIFTY PER CENT. MORE APPLES.

THE crop of apples harvested makes final estimate of The American a liberal total, according to the Agriculturist, which, in its report of October 25, places it at 43,000,000 barrels, against 27,000,000 barrels in 1901. The present crop naturally shows some marked contrasts when compared with that of a year ago. In the older-established orchard sections in the Middle and Eastern States the increase over last year's failure is very pronounced. In the Central West there are also sharp gains, while in the Southwest, a territory last year favored by exceptionally good yields, the crop this season is unusually deficient. As for quality, this is far from satisfactory in the Central and Western States. In the east apples range from very poor to exceptionally good, with liberal quantities in the aggregate suitable for autumn and winter storage. The Michigan crop is not a full one, yet there is a liberal surplus, with quality uneven. Ohio has a good many apples for shipment, so with Missouri, while Arkansas and Kansas are far behind last year. New York, the most important apple State, has a big crop, yet less than the bumper yield of 1896. The outturn in that State is very uneven in quality. The crop in New England is very much better than last year when it was a failure. The Canadian crop varies greatly in quality, but the total yield is liberal, with the exception of Nova Scotia, which this season faces a failure. apple buyers were in the field early, and the campaign has been active. Within the past fortnight prices in many instances have shown a slight hardening tendency, particularly for varieties of well-selected apples.

COLLEGES FOR BUTCHERS.

A COLLEGE in which the butchering and curing business is taught by experts is thus described in The Springfield Farmer by Andrew Ross, a professor of the Minnesota School of Agriculture :

"This work was made a part of the course in the School of Agriculture, and its object was to give farm boys an opportunity to

used for meat on the farm and to cut up carcasses into suitable pieces for table use. The work was begun in a very primitive fashion, though it was a very popular line of work from the start. The growth of the school has been rapid, and the quarters for this kind of work have been very crowded. In 1900 the Legislature was asked for an appropriation providing a new building for this work. This was secured and the building put up. The class-room is large enough to seat comfortably 100 or more stndents, and has folding doors opening into the killing-room and into the cutting-room, so that students can remain comfortably seated while observing the demonstration lectures given in both lines of work.

A GOOD COOLING ROOM and refrigerator have been provided, with ample room for a carload of cattle. The plant is refrigerated by the ammonia process and is complete in every respect. Besides the refrigerator, a good-sized curing-room has been provided, where the temperature may be controlled and valuable experimental work may be done in learning new methods of curing meat. In addition to the curing-room, freezing-rooms have been provided in the basement, where poultry may be stored and kept frozen through the winter ; or where the temperature may be so reduced that the

at different temperatures, thus giving an opportunity for studying experimental methods of curing and preserving fresh meats. A rendering-room has also been provided, with steam-jacket lard kettles, tanking outfit and all the modern equipments for thorough and effective work. These features are essentially necessary where a combination of experimental and education work is carried on. It is not the intention to train the farm boys to be expert butchers, but simply to give them a knowledge of the work sufficient to enable them to properly dress and care for the meat used upon the farm. With that idea in view, home-made arrangements for handling will be used as much as possible. This also is true of the work done by the students in the cutting-room. This building is, so far as known, the most complete and substantial structure in the United States, used strictly for the purpose of instruction in the proper handling of meat products. Its benefit to the farming class will readily be seen, and when the opportunity for experimental work and the facilities for securing accurate data on live stock problems are considered, it is believed that the money provided for the building is indeed well spent. To make this kind of work of practical use to farm boys, it is necessary for them to experience the difficulties of dressing the different animals used for meat. With that object in view, a demonstration lecture is given by the instructor before or more students, and the details of the operations gone into. A lecture illustrating some phase of the work is given each week. The students are then divided up into squads of five each, and required to come to the slaughter-house, where they actually dress the beef, pork, mutton and poultry used at the school. Each student gets a chance to dress a beef, a hog, a sheep, and a certain amount of poultry. They are in turn required to divide the carasses up into suitable pieces for use at the kitchen of the School of Agriculture. This line of work, while not complete enough to make them very expert, is sufficient to give them the principles of the work, and it can be extended as opportunities arise for dressing animals for home consumption. Besides cutting up the carcasses, the students are required to cure a certain amount of beef and pork, and are given recipes adapted to use on the farm."

STOCK IN THE KILLING-ROOM

A CLASS OF ONE HUNDRED

A NEW PORK-PACKING FACTORY.

For the last 15 years John Wheatley, of Charlottetown, and S. Wheatley, of Halifax, have been shipping hogs in large quantities and manufactured them in Halifax ready for the consumer. As the hogs deteriorate in value in transit and mostly arrive in bad order in mild weather, which, under such circumstances, renders it impossible to turn out at all times an article to suit the present demands, they have decided to open up a packing-house in Charlottetown. They have secured the commodious warehouse and cellars owned by David Small, corner Powell and Water streets, where they are now in full working order. Messrs. Wheatley are prepared to handle 15,000 hogs this fall. They have secured two first-class men from the other side, W. H. Fader and Samuel Jenkins, who arrived here last Wednesday and are now hard at work in connection with the factory in Charlottetown. Messrs. Wheatley will have a warehouse and cold-storage department in Halifax. As soon as the goods are prepared and ready for use they will be shipped off to Halifax, where they will supply their many customers. S. Wheatley, of Halifax, will attend to the selling, while John Wheatley, of Charlottetown, will do the buying and superintend the work of the factory, where they are now open to receive any number of hogs that may come along. They will endeavor at all times to pay the highest price given for choice goods.—Guardian, Charlottetown, P.E.I.

HOW VIENNA SAUSAGE IS MADE.

The recipe of The Butchers' Advocate for making Vienna sausage is : "To 18 lb. of veal add 72 lb. of lean and 10 lb. of fat pork. Chop finely and mix well, adding 32 oz. of salt, 10 to 12 oz. ground white pepper, 1½ pts. water and potato flour to suit. Stuff and tie into sausages weighing 4 oz. each ; smoke 48 hours."

THE DOMINION PACKING CO.

In its issue of Thursday, October 23, The Charlottetown, P.E.I., Examiner makes the following reference to a well-known firm : "The Dominion Packing Co. are to-day taking stock at the Rattenbury plant and are completing all the arrangements of taking over the business. They begin operations on Monday morning."

The same paper, in its issue of the following Monday, says that the firm mentioned above slaughtered 400 hogs on Saturday, "and began the work of packing to-day. We hope to see a straight

THE PROVISION MARKETS.

TORONTO.

This week's cattle shipments have decreased very considerably, and, as a result, butchers' cattle are scarce. The average run of about 70 to 75 loads has fallen to about 25 loads. Hog shipments average about 4,000 this week. Prices are quoted as follows : Dressed hogs, $7.00 to $7.50 ; beef carcasses, $4.50 to $7.00 per 100 lb. ; hind quarters, $5.00 to $7.00 per 100 lb. ; front quarters, $3.50 to $5.50 per 100 lb. ; veal, 7 to 9c., and lamb 5½ to 6c. Best live hogs, heavy weight (160 to 200 lb.), are worth $6.00, while light weights are quoted at $5.75. Choice export cattle are worth $4.50 to $5.25, and butchers' cattle, $3.25 to $4.25.

The provision trade, on account of it being between seasons, is not brisk, although there is a good demand for smoked meats and lard. Fresh egg receipts are becoming smaller. Prices remain unchanged and are as follows : Long clear bacon, 11 to 11½c. ; smoked breakfast bacon, 14½ to 15c. ; roll, 12 to 12½c. ; medium hams, 13½ to 14c. ; large hams, 12½ to 13c. ; shoulder hams, 11 to 11½c., and backs 14½ to 15c. ; Canadian heavy mess pork, $21.50 ; short cut, $23.50 to $24.00 ; lard, in tierces, 10¾ to 11c. per lb. ; tubs, 11 to 11¼c., and pails 11¼ to 11½c. ; compounds, 8¾ to 10c. ; plate beef, $15.00 per 200-lb. bbl.

MONTREAL.

There has been some improvement in the demand for nearly all lines of provisions and hog products, and the market is active. Prices have been steady throughout the week, and no change has been made. Canadian short cut mess continues in light supply and the market is very firm. Smoked meats are also moving at a lively rate, both hams and bacon being in good demand.

In dressed hogs there is a fairly good business doing. Since our last report fresh-killed abattoir dressed hogs have declined about 25c., and are now quoted at $8.50 to $9.00 per 100 lb. Since the decline, however, supplies have not been any too large, and the market has become steadier. Fresh country-killed hogs are quoted at $8.00 to $8.25 per 100 lb.

Lard is in active demand, and a good volume of business has been done during the week in both pure and compound brands. Prices are unchanged. We quote : Pure Canadian lard, $2.37½ to $2.40 per pail ; Fairbank's "Boar's Head" lard

Barrelled pork is scarce, and prices high. Any local packed is very quickly picked up. Beef, while not so much in demand, is high. Ontario pork is something new here. In pure lard, higher prices rule, quite full stocks are held. There is a large sale. In compound lard, sales are active and full prices are asked. In fresh beef prices are easier, more domestic being used. Lamb has a large sale. Mutton is dull. Very little veal is offered. Pork is scarce and high. We quote: Mess pork, $21 to $22.50; clear pork, $23 to $24; plate beef, $14 to $16; domestic beef, 5 to 7c.; Western beef, 7 to 9c.; lamb, 6 to 6½c.; mutton, 4 to 5c.; veal, 5 to 7c.; pork, 8c.; pure lard, tubs, 12c.; pails, 12¼c.; compound, tubs, 9¼c.; pails, 9½c.; Fairbank's refined, tubs, 10¼c.; pails, 10½c.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

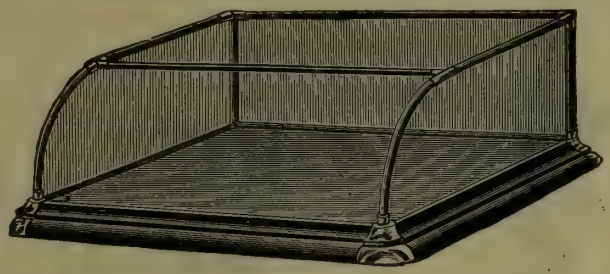
Halifax, November 3, 1902.

THE past week, in fact, the whole of November, has shown great activity in the grocery business, especially with the wholesalers. This has been largely due to the fact, as previously noted, that October is the month when the shore ports, which are closed in by the ice for a considerable part of the winter, put in their winter stocks, and, as might naturally be expected, the orders filled are considerably larger than at any time during the summer. Though Nova Scotia has many miles of railway as compared with its area and population, there are very many towns and thriving villages which still have to depend on vessels and small steamers for communication with the business centres. There are roads, of course, but the days of trucking goods any distance are past.

Reports from all parts of the Province show that business is in a very healthy condition. The ordinary crops have been good; good prices are being realized, which is also secured in cash. The apple crop, which, however, only affects very materially a small number of the counties in Nova Scotia, has been smaller than usual, and the fruit, though apparently grown to full size and well matured, is very defective with black spots and deformity of shape. This results in No. 1 fruit, in most cases, being no better than the No. 2 of ordinary years. A single barrel of such No. 1, so-called, cannot be bought in Halifax to-day less than $3 cash, and many parties are asking that price in small lots. Already quite a quantity of apples have been shipped from this port to England, and good prices have been realized.



Hay has been a good crop, and the weather good for harvesting. The price will rule lower this season, as there is not the same large demand from South Africa. Oats have been a good crop also. At present the price is 38½ to 40c. Potatoes are also plentiful, with price ruling lower than a year ago. Large quantities of both are now coming in from P. I. Island. Wheat, where grown, has given a good yield. It may not be generally known that in some counties of the Province, Pictou, for example, nearly all the farmers grow enough wheat for their own use. In fact, there is a roller-process mill in that county which turns out as nice a flour as can be imported. This mill is situated at Durham, some 10 miles from the railway, and is kept busy by the local trade of the country for miles around. Corn is also imported and ground for meal, or cracked for feed.

Butter is not coming in now so plentifully, and is firm with an advance on all grades of one cent. Eggs have also advanced to 18 cents (for case eggs), while fresh are retailing in the stores or in the Saturday market for 32 to 35 cents. Never during the summer have fresh eggs retailed less than 24 cents per dozen—and small ones sometimes at that. The hen would seem to be a good bird to cultivate.

A LESSON FOR CANADA.

IN seeking for the foundation causes of a nation's commercial success, many influences have to be taken into account. Britain owes her supremacy in great measure to her insular nature, which fostered sea-faring, and to the fact that she was first in the modern industrial field. The United States soon forged to the front because they were forced by circumstances to provide for a rapidly expanding population. But when it comes to the reason for Germany's remarkable advance of recent years, other causes must be sought for.

These causes lie principally in the German character itself. The German is a student of men and of methods. He is observant. He travels extensively and mingles with men of other nationalities—much more freely than other foreigners do. These characteristics are at the basis of imitation and the German becomes an imitator. He sees the plausibility of the commercial ways of other nations and he decides to practice them himself. He appropriates all that he deems valuable in methods for conducting business, and he sets doggedly to work to excel in the mercantile world. Then his scientific knowledge comes to his assistance and helps him out in his plans. That is why Germany has succeeded so well.

Our own nation is in a similar position to Germany. The old-established industries of Britain and the United States will not relinquish their market in this country without a struggle. Canada will have to meet outside competition on its own level, and to reach that level Germany's lesson must be taken to heart. Keen observation of the methods of other nations will constantly be required if Canadian industries are to advance.

EXPORTING PEARS.

THE crop of Canadian pears this year has been a good one. One or two fruit men have exported to the markets of England considerable quantities of this fruit.

The pears sent over were principally of the Duchess and Keifer varieties, which are mostly of use for cooking purposes, and these met with ready sales, the prices realized being high enough to enable a considerable profit being obtained after all expenses were paid.

The pears were packed in boxes, after the style of the Californian fruit, and reached their destination mostly in good condition.

None of the table varieties were sent over, as far as can he ascertained, but there seems to be room for the building up in the English market of a considerable trade in Canadian pears.

The one thing needful for the success of this undertaking is a proper supply of improved refrigerator cars for the carriage of the fruit from inland points to the Atlantic ports, and suitable steamers to bear the product across the Atlantic.

APPLE EXPORTS.

FIRST BEET SUGAR.

When the Berlin beet-sugar factory commenced operations on October 30, it was announced in certain newspapers that the factory had the honor of turning out the first sugar made in Canada from the beet. This is scarcely correct. When it is remembered that not ten years ago the Government of Quebec was paying a bounty annually on the beet-sugar industry in that Province, and that not so long ago a factory was removed from Farnham, Que., into New York State, it will be seen that the industry had its birth in Canada prior to the opening of the Berlin factory.

SIR WILLIAM MULOCK'S SURPLUS.

IN his address in Toronto on November 3, Sir William Mulock, Postmaster-General, announced that his Department would show a surplus of $5,000 for the past fiscal year. This is the first time in the history of the Department that the revenue has been made to even meet expenditure, much more show a surplus.

No doubt some of Mr. Mulock's political opponents will find reason to criticize his statement in regard to the surplus, and to throw some doubts upon its reality. As it is well known that some items of expenditure are charged to the Works Department, their criticism may not be altogether out of place. At the same time, however, it must be recognized that the result of the past year's administration of the Department has been more successful than any previous year in the history of the Dominion.

If there is a deficit, according to the calculations of Mr. Mulock's political opponents, it must be very small indeed ; in fact, smaller than ever before. For this he is certainly entitled to a great deal of credit, and not carping, factious criticism.

It must be remembered that this satisfactory statement of affairs is in face of the fact that the postal rates on letters, both within the Dominion and within the Empire, have been greatly reduced since Mr. Mulock became Postmaster-General. Besides this, he has made a great many improvements, which could not, of course, be made without the expenditure of money. That this was warranted has been justified by the fact that not only is there a small surplus, but there has been a very large increase in the mail carried.

The business men of Canada, irrespective of politics, must necessarily feel gratified at the result of the past year's administration of the Post Office Department. Years before Sir William Mulock became Postmaster-General, this journal referred to his business and administrative ability. Since he came into office his action has more than justiffed this high opinion of his merits. Although actively engaged in law, he has had a wide business experience on account of his connection with large commercial enterprises, and this he has turned to good account as Postmaster-General. While, in addition to this, he possesses in an eminent degree the quality of adaptation. This in an administrator of a Department, such as that of the Post Office, is a valuable quality indeed, enabling as it does the possessor of it to appropriate and act upon suggestions which may, from time to time, be made to him.

There is another business department in the Government which we wish was only administered in the same efficient manner as that relating to the Post Office, and that is, the Department of Trade and Commerce, over which Sir Richard Cartwright presides. Sir Richard Cartwright is, no doubt, an able man. He is certainly one of the best-informed in Canadian political life, and his attainments are wide and many, but as the Minister of Trade and Commerce he has proved a decided failure. As we have pointed out in the previous issues, it may be because he was not appointed to the Department of Finance when the present Administration was formed, but whatever the reason might be, and whatever his attainments might be, he has certainly not been suited for the Department of Trade and Commerce.

One almost wishes that Mr. Mulock was head of that Department, but it would be scarcely a wise thing to make a change when he has produced such good results in the Post Office portfolio. It is to be hoped that the exceedingly good results which have been obtained in the Post Office Department will open the eyes of the Premier to the necessity of removing Sir Richard Cartwright from the Department of Trade and Commerce. On account of his faithful services, however, he should not be cast overboard, and as the Lieutenant-Governorship of Ontario will soon be vacant, it would be the proper thing for Sir Richard to be elevated to that honorable position. At any rate he should not, in the commercial interests of the country, be permitted to longer cumber the Department of Trade and Commerce.

SUGARS 5c. LOWER.

All grades of refined sugar were reduced 5c. per 100 lb. on Thursday morning, in sympathy with a decline of 10c. in New York. In the latter city, however, the export price has been advanced 5c. The f.o.b. price of Canadian granulated in Montreal is now $3.75.

THE COFFEE CRISIS.

AN International Coffee Commission has been sitting recently at the New York Coffee Exchange. Delegates from Venezuela, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Guatemala, Mexico, Uruguay, Dominica, El Salvador, Honduras and Peru were present.

The coffee crisis was the all-pervading theme of the discussion. Its cause was attributed to the excess of supply over demand, which has existed since 1898, when thr prevalence of high prices led to the establishment of many new coffee plantations.

Various expedients for improving conditions have been suggested, principally along the line of increasing the consumption. Three recommendations were passed :

First—Recommending to all the governments and producing and consuming countries the compulsory use of pure coffee in the armies and navies.

Second — Recommending to the governments and countries which produce coffee that they establish, as soon as possible, in countries in which coffee is not now consumed, places for the demonstration of pure coffee.

Third—That coffee-producing and consuming countries may prohibit the sale of adulterated coffee and of substitutes bearing the name of coffee, and in case this prohibition cannot be enforced that a heavy duty be imposed on such articles.

Besides these more direct methods, it was proposed to attempt to have the dutles on coffee imposed by European nations removed, to do something towards improving the actual cultivation of the coffee bean and to diminish the supply by prohibiting the exportation of inferior goods.

So far as THE CANADIAN GROCER is concerned, we would remind our readers that we have always been anxious to promote the welfare of the coffee business in Canada. Not so long since three prizes were offered by us for essays on how best to improve the coffee trade in this country. The prize essays were read far and near with wide interest, and were reproduced and commented upon, not only in England and the United States, but in all the principal coffee-growing countries.

Up to the end of June of this year, 5,345,691 lb. of coffee entered Canada on the free list. This is a decidedly better record than for the preceding year ending June 30, 1901. Then the importation was only 3,345,284 lb. Under the heading of dutiable coffee, it is found that 999,259 lb. entered the country in 1902, and 1,032,741 lb. in 1901. By adding these amounts to the previous figures, the results are not appreciably changed. That is, the importation of coffee showed a decided increase during the last fiscal year.

A MERCHANT'S PLEASANT TRIP.

W. H. McFarlane, general merchant, of Paisley, has returned from an enjoyable trip to Washington and other American cities. Along with a party composed of members of The Canadian Ticket Agents' Association, he visited a number of places along the Atlantic Coast, including Philadelphia, Atlantic City and New York. The Lehigh Valley Railway gave the Canadian visitors special trains, and they passed through the anthracite coal region of Pennsylvania while the great strike was on. The next excursion of the Association will be to Sydney, Cape Breton.

MILK POWDER IN GERMANY.

A German inventor, it is reported, has discovered a method and constructed an apparatus which obviates the drawbacks formerly encountered in the preparation of milk powder. The apparatus, according to a United States Consular report, evaporates milk to complete dryness at a temperature not exceeding 40 deg. C, and without the application of a vacuum. The powder obtained, it is claimed, has the fineness of flour. Neither the taste nor odor of the milk is altered. Heated with water to from 60 to 70 deg. C.—i.e. to a temperature exceeding the melting point of butter fat—milk is reproduced which, on cooling, differs in no way from ordinary milk. By a special treatment, the inventor says he has succeeded in preventing the powder from turning sour; it withstands bacteria, mold, dampness, and changes of temperature. About 1 lb. of powder is said to be obtained from 5 qts. of milk. The apparatus is easily manipulated and is capable of treating at least 2,600 gals. of milk per day. A sample of the powder obtained from skimmed milk, it is said, was found to contain 30 per cent. albuminous matter, 49 per cent. lactic sugar, 1 per cent. fat (30 per cent. in unskimmed), 7½ per cent. salts, and 6½ per cent. moisture.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, November 6, 1902.

GROCERIES.

A STEADY volume of business has kept up this week in wholesale groceries and trade is satisfactory for the time of the year. The mildness of the weather has kept the farmers busy at home with their fall work and so they have not as yet commenced to deliver their grain so extensively. As soon as they do so, however, trade is expected to be very brisk as there will be a good deal of money put in circulation which will be surely felt in wholesale grocery lines. Canned tomatoes are scarce, and as high as $1.90 was offered for the product, but jobbers here seem to have none on hand to sell. French sardines, in all lines, have been advanced nominally about 2c., but stocks of these on hand are light. The holiday trade for nuts has not yet set in and the price of tapioca is easier. There has been a good call for the brighter kinds of syrups. There has been a good, steady demand for sugars for this time of the year, and prices have been fully maintained. There has been considerable buying in teas during the week by jobbers and the market keeps strong for Indian and Ceylon blacks and greens, Japans, young hysons and gunpowder teas. New prunes are selling freely to arrive and opening prices here are ½ to 1c. lower than the old ones on all sizes, excepting 50-60s and 40-50s. Quite a few peaches and apricots are moving out.

CANNED GOODS.

Tomatoes continue scarce and prices are almost out of sight. There are none offering and as high as $1.90 was offered by a buyer here, which, as far as we know, met with no response. One or two sanguine holders expect the price of the article to go up to $2.25 before long, but this view does not agree with the opinions of others who believe that at that figure there will be no demand for them. This state of the tomato market has had the effect of stiffening the prices of corn and peas, which are up 2½ to 5c. The prices of French sardines have been nominally advanced 2c. all round, but there seems to be very light supplies of the fish in Canada. There is a fairly good demand for the season for haddies, herring, lobsters and also canned meats.

COFFEES.

There is a good call for green Rios and the other grades are in fairly good demand. The outside markets were easier in tone and contract prices showed a decline. We quote: Green Rio, No. 7, 7¾c.; No. 6, 8c.; No. 5, 8¼c.; No. 4, 9c.; No. 3, 10 to 12c. per lb.

NUTS.

Nuts are commencing to move, but the holiday demand has not yet commenced. The outside markets are firm and unchanged.

RICE AND TAPIOCA

There is a fair amount of business being done in rice and tapioca, the latter being easier outside. The New Orleans rice markets are firm and the buying there has been active. Exporters of rice from the United States are beginning to show more interest in the lower grades, which are firmly held. We quote: B rice, 3½c.; Japan, 5½ to 6c.; sago, 3¾ to 4c. and tapioca, 3¼ to 3¾c. per lb.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES

The brighter grades of Syrup have shown increased activity and the other kinds are in good demand also. Molasses is moving out freer. Advices from New Orleans state that the new crop molasses are slowly coming in, but of the supplies received only a small percentage is of the desirable grades.

See pages 35 and 36 for Toronto, Montreal, St. John and Halifax prices current.

SPICES.

Trade in spices continues fair and there has been no change in prices. The outside markets are quiet and firm.

SUGAR.

There is no change to report in the condition of the local sugar market. The demand continues good and the prices are steady and unchanged from last week. In New York a considerable quantity of raws have changed hands at full prices, with buyers willing to purchase and sellers asking fractionally more money than before. United States refined is, however, easier, with a shading in yellows and a general tendency towards lower prices in anticipation of the refill large shipments of Western beet sugar from California, which are due to arrive in New York about the 15th of this month.

In Europe beet sugar has declined 1½d. for the week, from 7s. 6¾d. to 7s. 5¼d. The latter figure, however, is still about 20c. per 100 lb. over the parity of 96 deg. centrifugals, New York.

The United States stocks for the week show a decline of about 9,000 tons, the receipts being 36,037 tons and the meltings, 15,000 tons. The stocks in the United States and Cuba together show a deficiency of 16,000 tons for the week. The latest cable from Mr. Licht, of Magdeburg, Germany, indicates a probable reduction of 100,000 tons from his previous estimate of the European beet sugar crop, which leaves the present estimated crop at 5,750,000 tons, against a total outturn last year of 6,813,000 tons.

TEAS.

There has been quite a lot of buying in teas on the local market during the past week. Young hysons are becoming scarce and so are gunpowders. Another month will practically exhaust all the Japan and China green teas in first hands. Final shipments are being completed from China and long before it will be possible to have new supplies on the market again there will be a famine in these teas. The demand for Indian and Ceylon greens is greatly on the increase and there is quite a smart demand for face and colored greens. Flavored teas are showing a firmer tendency and the present outlook in cheap Ceylon and Indian teas is for slightly higher prices. London, Eng., mail advices state that although there was a heavier quantity of Indian teas brought forward, medium and good liquoring teas maintained previous rates, but common kinds were not so eagerly bid for. Medium and better grades of Ceylon teas showed an advance over the week before, the competition of exporters proving of great assistance to the market.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

CURRANTS.—The primary currant market is reported firm and stocks of high-grade fruit are getting much reduced. The local demand is fairly active. We quote: Fine Filiatras, 5½c. up; Patras, 6¼ to 6⅞c. and Vostizzas, 7 to 8c. per lb.

VALENCIA RAISINS.—The call for Valencia raisins is quite brisk and the prices gre maintained. The ss. Bologna is reported in the St. Lawrence with a cargo of Valencia and Malaga raisins, nuts, etc., for the Christmas trade. We quote: Fine off-stalk, 7¼ to 9c.; selected, 8½ to 9c. and selected layers, 9c. per lb.

SULTANA RAISINS.—There is a much firmer tendency in Sultana raisins at Smyrna. Owing to the scarcity of Valencia raisins there has been a great demand for these on the market there, causing the tone of the market to have a bullish tendency. We quote 9 to 13c.

DATES.—The new fruit will be on the market this week. New Fard dates are offered at 7½ to 8c. per lb.; Hallowee, 5c. and Sairs at 4½c. per lb.

PRUNES.—New prunes are now selling for delivery on arrival. The market is fairly active. The prices on the sizes from 110 to 60s have been reduced from ½ to 1c. per lb. We quote: Californian prunes, 100-110s, 4c.; 90-100s, 5 to 5½c.; 80-90s, 6 to 6½c.; 70-80s, 6½ to 7c.; 60-70s, 7 to 7½c.; 50-60s, 8 to 8½c.; 40-50s, 8¾ to 10c. per lb.

FIGS.—The primary fig market is said to be exhausted, and on account of the smallness of the crop almost any quality offered were booked as layers. Some tapnets arrived on the local market and were sold at 4c. We quote: Elemes, 7-crown, 15c.; 3 crown, 12c. and Star, 11c. per lb.; Naturals, 8c.

CALIFORNIAN EVAPORATED FRUITS.—There has been an active demand for peaches and apricots. The latter are higher on the Coast. Prices are unchanged at 9 to 11c. for peaches and 9 to 13c. for apricots.

CALIFORNIAN FIGS.—These have been all sold out.

CALIFORNIAN RAISINS.—Last week Griffin & Skelley Company, San Francisco, advised their Toronto agents that the Raisin Growers' Association had decided to advance the price of both loose muscatels and seeded raisins on the 3rd of this month, with a guarantee that they would not reduce the price before February 1, 1903. What this advance is has not yet been announced, but it took effect at 6 p.m. on the 3rd instant.

Telegraphic advices from San Francisco report brokers there entirely sold out of seeded raisins.

GREEN FRUITS.

The green fruit market is in an active condition. There are on hand large supplies of almost every variety of fruit, both from the temperate regions and from tropical countries. Quite a few grapes are still offering. Considerable quantities of Jamaica oranges are selling, and grape fruit is now on the market in abundance. Apples are in heavy supply and the demand for them is principally in small lots. Nova-Scotian cranberries are now on the market at $8 per barrel. We quote: Peaches, 30 to 50c. and pears, 15 to 40c.; grapes, 15 to 20c. for small baskets and 25 to 30c. for large; spples, 10 to 25c. per basket and $1 to $2 per barrel; crabapples, 25c. per basket; lemons, $4.25 to $7 per box; onions, ordinary, 60c.; Spanish, 90c. per case; peppers, green, 15 to 30c. per basket; ripe, 60 to 75c.; oranges, Jamaica, $2.25 to $2.75 per box and $5 per barrel; Jersey sweet potatoes, $2.50 per barrel; cocoanuts, $3.50 per sack; quinces, 20 to 35c. per basket; cranberries, $9 to $9.50 per barrel; bananas, $1.25 to $1.75 per bunch; grape fruit, $1.50 per box.

VEGETABLES.

Business in vegetables continues quiet and the prices are about the same as last week, excepting that potatoes have advanced fully 15c. per bag. Cabbage and potatoes are the products most in demand. Our quotations are as follows: Lettuce, 30 to 40c. per dozen; radishes, 20 to 25c. per dozen; mint and parsley, 20 to 25c.; cauliflower, 50c. to $1 per dozen; cabbage, 30 to 50c. per dozen and $1.00 per barrel; pickling cabbage, 25 to 50c. per doz.; carrots, 40 to 50c. per bag; beets, 40 to 50c. per bag; potatoes, $1 to $1.20 per bag; celery, 50 to 75c. per dozen; corn, 8 to 15c. per doz.; squashes, $1 to $1.50 per doz; pickling onions, 75c. per basket; pumpkins, 50c. per dozen; citrons, 40 to 50c. per doz.; artichokes, 50c. per bushel; spinach, 40c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EGGS.—The receipts of eggs are light, the demand for strictly fresh being good and the prices firm. The export movement in cold stored and pickled continues good. We quote: 18 to 19c. for strictly new laid, 17 to 18c. for cold storage, 16 to 17c. for pickled and 13 to 14c. for seconds.

BEANS.—The offerings of beans are little, if any, and the quotations of last week are maintained. Beans in large quantities are worth $2 to $2.25 per bushel.

DRIED AND EVAPORATED APPLES.—The abundant supplies of green apples makes the demand for the evaporated apple slow. Evaporated apples are quoted at 6½ to 7c. per lb.

HONEY.—There is a fair volume of business doing in honey and the prices are unchanged. We quote as follows: Extracted, 8 to 8½c. for large quantities and 9 to 9½c. per lb. in small lots. Combs, $1.50 to $1.75.

POTATOES.—The arrivals of potatoes keep large but the demand is brisk, causing the prices to increase in strength. We quote: 75 to 80c. per bag in carlots.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

BUTTER.—There have been a good many large rolls brought in during the week. The market is steady for all fresh grades in rolls and tubs. The English market is a trifle easier. We quote as follows: Finest 1-lb. prints, 17 to 18c.; choice large rolls and tubs, 15½ to 16½c.; secondary grades, tubs and rolls, 13½ to 14½c.; bakers', 12 to 13c.; creamery prints, 20 to 21c.; creamery solids, 19 to 19½c. per lb.

CHEESE.—The price of cheese in Canada is still high and the continuance of these conditions has, to some extent, astonished dealers. Little response is at present being made to the inquiries from the other side of the Atlantic at the Canadian factories and there is a large stock being held in this country. The exports from Montreal from May 1 up to the end of last week were: 1,785,906 boxes, as against 1,557,725 boxes for the same period in 1901. We quote as follows: Finest grades, 12 to 12½c.; seconds, 11¼ to 11⅜c. per lb.

POULTRY AND GAME.

POULTRY.—The receipts of poultry, which were heavy the latter part of last week, have dropped off this week. The ducks and geese arriving are in good condition, but turkeys are scarce and poor. The demand for all kinds of poultry is a little slow. We quote: Choice turkeys, 10 to 11c.; seconds, 8 to 9c.; geese, 7 to 8c.; ducks, 50 to 70c.; chickens, young, 50 to 60c.; old, 35 to 45c.

GAME.—There has not been as yet much game coming forward and jobbers at present are not anxious to receive any as there is no inquiry yet for the fowl. The next few days will probably see an increase in the receipts. We quote: Teal, 20c. per pair; pin tails, 30 to 35c. and black ducks, 70 to 75c. per pair.

FISH.

There is a fair volume of trade doing in fish. The season for trout and whitefish is closed and the frozen fish are now on the market. Oysters are meeting with a steady demand. We quote: Frozen fish, trout, 7 to 7½c. Fresh fish—Lake Erie herring, 4 to 5c.; perch, 4 to 5c.; pike, 6c.; British-Columbian salmon, 15 to 20c.; whitefish, 7 to 7½c.; mackerel, 15 to 20c.; rock bass, 4c.; halibut, 15c. per lb.; blue pike, 4c.; live lobsters, 25c. per lb.; oysters, $1.25 to $1.35 per wine gallon; smoked ciscoes, $1.25 per basket;

GRAIN, FLOUR AND BREAKFAST FOODS.

GRAIN.—The receipts of all kinds of grain for the week have been small and the tone of the market is strong with slightly higher prices in wheat. On the St. Lawrence Market the quotations are as follows: Red and white wheat, 70½ to 71c.; goose wheat, 65½ to 66c.; barley, 45 to 49c.; oats, 36 to 37c.; rye, 57½c. and buckwheat, 50 to 52c.

FLOUR.—The market is stiffer under the influence of an active demand and the firmness of wheat. Our quotations are as follows: Ontario patents, in bags, $3.60 to $3.70; Hungarian patents, $4.10 to $4.15; Manitoba bakers', $3.85 to $3.90; straight roller, $3.40 to $3.50 per barrel.

BREAKFAST FOODS.—A brisk demand continues for oatmeal and rolled oats. The other lines of breakfast foods are also active. Our quotations are as follows: Oatmeal, standard and granulated, in carlots on track here, $4.20; standard rolled oats in carlots on track here, $4.00 per barrel; in wood, 15c. extra; broken lots are 25c. per bbl. extra; rolled wheat, $2.25 in 100-lb. bbl.; cornmeal, $4; split peas, $4.75; pot barley, $4.25 in 196-lb. bbls., or $4.10 in bags.

HIDES, SKINS AND WOOL.

HIDES.—A fair amount of business continues in these. We quote: No. 1 green, 8c.; No. 2 green, 7c.; No. 1 green, steers, 8½c.; No. 2 green, steers, 7½c.; cured, 8½ to 9c. per lb.

SKINS.—There is a good call for calfskins. Lambskins are up 5 to 10c. We quote: Veal skins, 6 to 14 lb. inclusive, No. 1, 10c.; No. 2, 8c.; do, 15 to 20 lb. inclusive, No. 1, 9c.; No. 2, 7c.; deacons (dairies), 60 to 70c. each; shearlings and lambskins, 60c.

WOOL.—The wool market is unchanged. We quote: 13½c. for fleece wool and 7½c. for unwashed.

TALLOW.—The tallow market is still weak at 6¼ to 7c. per lb.

SEEDS.

The chief business continues doing in alsike and the ruling price for it is $7 to $7.75 for prime to choice seed with liberal offerings at outside points. A few small lots of the new crop of red clover have been brought in and sold at $6.50 to $6.75 outside. Timothy is quiet at $1.50 to $1.70 per bushel.

MARKET NOTES

Lambskins have advanced 5 to 10c.

French sardines have advanced 2c. all round.

The opening prices in prunes on the sizes ranging from 60-110s are from ½ to 1c. lower than the old prices.

Canned tomatoes are scarce and as high as $1.90 has been offered for them to which no response has been made.

In the United States the prices of lard are nearly 1c. per lb. higher than prices ruling in Canada, with an upward tendency, and therefore higher figures may be expected here in the near future.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, November 6, 1902.

GROCERIES.

THE wholesale trade is active this week, and until the advance of freight rates shipments will be unusually heavy. Some difficulty is being experienced in getting space on the boats for the lower ports. Prices on imported French sardines are stiffening, owing to the scarcity. Some dealers are entirely out of French goods and are unable to obtain more. Coal oil, both Canadian and American, has advanced, the former being ½c. higher and the latter, 1c. higher. Chloride of lime, in ¼-lb. packages, has been reduced from 90 to 75c. Mixed pickles continue to exhibit a higher tendency, both in bulk and in bottles. They are likely to be very dear this year, and indications are that pickles that were formerly sold at $1 and $1.05 will now be quoted at $1.30 and $1.35 per dozen.

SUGAR.

Since the advance in sugars of last week there has been no further change in price, and granulated now sells for $3.80 and yellows at $3.15 to $3.65. Trade is somewhat quieter this week, but the tone of the market continues firm. The strong position of raw beet is still evident, but contrary to the expectations of most operators the price of the refined article has not advanced in sympathy.

TEAS.

The market for Japans continues strong, although no recent advances have been reported. The local market is practically bare at present of Japan siftings, dusts and fannings. A quantity of Ceylon green teas have been coming into this market designed to take the place as near as possible of Japans. They are prepared by Japanese and put up in Japan packages. The price of Indian and Ceylon teas is still comparatively low. Ceylon and Indian black teas are considered excellent value at present prices. Ceylon greens are a little firmer and are quoted at 15 to 23c. At the Colombo tea auctions of the first part of October, the quality was reported to be deteriorating, with a proportionate weakening in prices of medium to fine grades. A good inquiry for leaf teas was experienced, all kinds of which were firm except common pekoe souchongs, which declined 1c.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There has been an improvement in the demand for corn syrups, and although the volume of business done was small, there are signs of the markets picking up. There is no change in the price of corn syrups. Cane syrup, in half-barrels, is now quoted at 2c. per lb. for good quality. We quote corn syrups as follows: In barrels, 3c.; in half-barrels, 3½c.; in ¼ barrels, 3¾c.; in 38½-lb. pails, $1.40 and 25-lb. pails, $1.10.

There has been a fair amount of business in Barbados molasses, the demand being chiefly for small lots. The price is maintained, Barbados selling in a jobbing way at 23 to 24c., and the market appears steady. There is but a very light demand for large lots. Business in other molasses is as usual. New Orleans is quoted at 16½ to 17c.; Antigua, at 24c. and Porto Rico at 38c.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

These two staples are quieter this week and the amount of business that has transpired is not large. Prices, however, have been maintained, and no change is shown. Our quotations are now as quote: B rice, in bags, $3.02½; in ½ bags, $3.07½; in ¼ bags, $3.12½; in pockets, $3.17½. In 10-bag lots an allowance of 10c. is made. CC rice, $2.92½ in bags; $2.97½ in ½ bags; $3.02½ in ¼ bags and $3.07½ in pockets. In the open territory prices are about 10c. less. Patna rice is worth 4 to 5c. per lb. and tapioca, 3½c.

SPICES.

Locally, there has been no change in prices. Jobbers report the demand no more than fair. On the New York market all lines of spices, except gingers, are strong, and in the latter there is a better feeling and more active demand. In cayennes, nutmegs, pimento and cassias, especially, the market is firmer under an improved demand. Notwithstanding that deliveries in October were very large, stocks in grinders' hands are reported exceedingly limited. Our quotations, locally, are as follows: Nutmegs, 35c. to 55c. per lb., as to size; penang mace, 45 to 50c. per lb., as to quality; pimento, ground, 12½ to 15c.; cloves, 15 to 25c.; pepper, ground, black, 17 to 22c., according to grade; white, 25 to 27c.; ginger, whole Cochin, 15 to 17c.; Japan, 13 to 14c.; Jamaica, 16 to 20c.; Afghan, 12 to 13c.; ground, Japan, 15c.; Cochin, 16 to 17c.; Jamaica, 20 to 22c.; and Afghan, 13 to 14c.

CANNED GOODS.

Jobbers have advanced prices on canned blueberries to $1.25 per dozen, and at that figure they are none too plentiful. The position of tomatoes is still very strong, and prices are firm, although no recent advance is reported. Jobbers refuse to sell any large lots at lower prices. Corn is still firm but steady at the price quoted. We quote: Tomatoes, $1.75; corn, 82½ to 85c.; peas, 82½c. to $1.20; string beans, 82½c. to 85c.; strawberries, $1.45 to $1.60; blueberries, $1.25; raspberries, $1.45 to $1.60; gooseberries, $1.45 to $1.60; pears, 2's, $1.60 to $1.70; 3's, $2.10 to $2.15; peaches, 2's, $1.65 to $1.70; 3's, $2.50 to $2.75; 3-lb. apples, 85 to 90c.; gallon apples, $2.10 to $2.20; 2-lb. sliced pineapples, $2.20 to $2.30; grated pineapples, $2.50; pumpkins, $1 per doz.; spinach, $1.50; sugar beets, 95c. to $1.00; salmon, pink, 92 to 95c.; spring, $1.25; Rivers Inlet red sockeye, $1.30; Fraser River red sockeye, $1.40.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

CURRANTS.—No change has been made in the price on this market. A good business is doing, the demand being especially good for cleaned fruit. Prices continue firm. We quote: Fine Filiatras, 5⅛ to 5½c. in cases; cleaned, 5⅝ to 5¾c.; in 1-lb. cartons, 6½ to 7c.; finest Vostizzas, 6¼ to 7c.

SULTANA RAISINS.—There is an active inquiry and the tone of the market is firm. The price remains at 9½c. per pound.

VALENCIA RAISINS.—The primary market advanced 2s. per cwt., and local prices are higher in sympathy. Fourcrown layers have sold as high as 8¾c. There is a good demand. We quote as follows: Finest off-stalk, 7¼ to 7¾c.; selected, 7¾ to 8c. and layers, 7¾ to 8¼c., according to brands.

CANDIED PEELS.—These are going fairly well at unchanged prices. Citron peel is quoted at 15c.; orange is worth 11½c. and lemon, 10½c. per lb.

MALAGA RAISINS.—New Malaga raisins are now offering for future delivery and an active business is doing. Prices are as follows: London layers, $1.50 to $1.60; "Connoisseur Clusters," $2.10 to $2.20; ¼'s, 65 to 70c.; "Royal Buckingham Clusters," $3.15 to $3.25; ½'s, $1; "Excelsior Windsor Clusters," $4.50 to $4.60; ¼'s, $1.30 to $1.40.

FIGS.—Eleme table figs are scarce. In boxes they are quoted at 10½ to 20c. per lb., according to size of fig. Comadres are steady at $1.20 per tapnet.

DATES.—Hallowees, for delivery during the latter part of November, are quoted ½c. per lb. lower, being now 4c.

CALIFORNIAN RAISINS.—There is an active inquiry for these, and 3-crown muscatels are now quoted at 7½c. per lb.

PRUNES.—Prices of Californian prunes have not changed. We quote as follows: 8½c. for 40-50s; 8c. for 50-60's; 7¾c. for 60-70's; 7½c. for 70-80's; 7¾c. for 60-70s; 7½c. for 70-80s; 6¾c. for 80-90s; 6½c. for 90-100s. Italian prunes are offered at the following prices: 10-50s, 7½c. to 7¾c.; 50-60s, 7 to 7½c.; 70-80s, 5½ to 5¾c.; 90-100s, 4½ to 4¾c. per lb.

NUTS.

New crop of shelled walnuts, for delivery at the end of December, are now quoted at 25 to 26c. per lb. Pecans are now worth 15c. per lb. Peanuts are 1c. lower for the finest grades and ½c. lower for the poorer grades. They now sell at 7 to 11c., according to quality. We quote as follows: Walnuts, 11c.; Tarragona almonds, 12 to 13c.; shelled walnuts, 24 to 26c.; shelled almonds, 29 to 30c.; filberts, 9½c.; Pecans, 15c.; Brazil nuts, 14 to 15c. per lb.

GREEN FRUITS.

By an inadvertent mistake in our report of last week the price of Boston lettuce read "$2.15 per dozen," instead of "$1.15 per dozen." There is a fairly good demand for fruits and vegetables in season, and the market is moderately active. Jamaica oranges in boxes are 25c. lower this week. Peaches are out of the market. Plums have advanced about 50c. Cranberries are 50c. per barrel higher. Tokay grapes have appeared on the market and are selling well at $3.25 per box. Sweet potatoes are also offered again, the price being $2.75 to $3.25. We quote as follows: Jamaica oranges, in bbls., $5 to $5.50 and in boxes, $3; Messina lemons, $4 per box; cocoanuts, $3.50 per bag of 100; bananas, No. 1, $1 to $1.50 and 8-hands, $1; Canadian cabbage, 25 to 40c. per dozen; potatoes, $1.15 to $1.30 per barrel; plums, $1.50; pears, $3.25 and limes, $1.50 per box; Canadian apples, in barrels, $1.50 to $3 and in baskets, 20c. to 30c.; egg plant, 50c. per basket; Canadian pears, 40c. per basket; Spanish onions, 55c. per crate and $2.10 per case; sweet potatoes, $2.75 to $3.25 per bbl.; Canadian blue and white grapes, 20c. to 22c. per basket; Delawares, 35c. per basket, and Malaga grapes, $5.50 to $7 per keg; red grapes, 25c. per basket; cranberries, $8.50 to $10 per barrel; red onions, $2.25 per bbl.; chestnuts, 11c. per lb.; Boston lettuce, $1.15 per doz.; wax beans, $2.50 per basket; green beans, $2.50 per basket, and cucumbers, $2.25 per doz.; pineapples, 24s, $5 to $5.50 per crate; Tokay grapes, $3.25 per box; grape fruit, $6 per box; new dates, 4½c. per lb.; figs, 10 to 15c. per lb.

FISH.

Malpeque shell oysters have advanred considerably and are now quoted at $6 to $8 per bbl. Other oysters have not changed in price, but the market is firm. There is a decided scarcity in oysters. Although dealers are receiving stock right along, it is estimated that there will be only about one-half the supply of last year. Whitefish are now out of the market. No. 1 Nova-Scotian herring are higher and mackerel has advanced $4 per bbl. Dried codfish, on the other hand, is 50c. per 100-lb. bundle cheaper. There is a good demand for almost all lines of fish. Fresh lake fish are commencing to arrive freely. Arrivals have been later than usual owing to the storms on the lakes. The supply, however, is plentiful. A car of fresh halibut and salmon arrived last week from British Columbia. We quote: Haddies, 6 to 7c.; smoked herring, 9c. per box; fresh haddock and cod, 1½c. per lb.; dore, 7 to 7½c.; pike, 6c.; halibut, 12c.; salmon, 15c.; No. 1 herring, Nova-Scotian, $5.50 per bbl and $3 per half-bbl.; No. 1 Holland herring, $6.50 per half-bbl.; No. 1 Scotch herring, $6.50 per half barrel and 95c. per keg; Holland herring, 70 to 80c. per keg; No. 1 green codfish, $5.50 to $5.75 and mackerel, $20 per barrel; boneless cod, 1 and 2-lb. blocks, 6c. per lb.; loose boneless cod, 5c. per lb. in 40-lb. boxes; dried codfish, $4.50 per 100-lb. bundle; No. 1 Labrador salmon, $20 in tierces and in barrels, $14; standard bulk oysters, $1.40 per gallon; Marshall's kippered herring, $1.45 per dozen; Canadian kippered, $1 per doz.; Canadian ¼ sardines, $4.00 per 100; canned Cove oysters, No. 1 size, $1.30 per doz.; canned Cove oysters, No. 2 size, $2.20 per doz.; Malpeque shell oysters, $6 to $8 per barrel.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

BUTTER.—A continued firmness in the market can be reported this week. Finest creamery brought from 20¾ to 21c. A noteworthy factor at the moment is the call from the domestic trade, who are paying 21½c. for jobbing lots of finest. This is reported to have a tendency to make sellers somewhat more stubborn in negotiations for round lots. Briefly stated the market is satisfactory. We quote: Quebecs, 20½ to 20⅝c.; Townships, 20¾ to 21c.; dairy, 16 to 16½c.

CHEESE.—There is little cause for complaint as to the amount of trade passing in cheese. It is said that the stock of cheese on this market is about 254,289 boxes. In London it is reported that they have 100,000 boxes. Prospects for the future are good. We quote as follows: Finest Ontarios, 11½ to 11⅝c. and Quebecs, 11⅜ to 11½c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EGGS.—A fair volume of business is being done in eggs, although the market is rather more quiet than a week ago. The demand is principally for pickled and cold storage goods. There is a scarcity to be noted in straight stock. Straight receipts are bringing 18 to 18¼c., July and August cold storage, 17½c.; pickled, 17½c. and straight candled, 19c.

BEANS.—The market still remains firm and the change anticipated by some dealers has not yet taken place. Prices are $2.05 per bushel on track for primes and $2.05 to $2.10 in broken lots.

HONEY.—There is not a great deal doing in honey. The demand is slow and the supply light. White extracted is selling at 8c. per lb and white comb at 10 to 11½c. Buckwheat honey brings 6½c. in bulk.

John Taylor & Co., FINE TOILET SOAPS, Toronto.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.—A dull and featureless market is to be noted this week. We quote: Syrup, in large tins, 70 to 80c.; in small tins, 50 to 60c. in wood, 5 to 5½c. per lb. Sugar, 8½ to 10c.

ASHES.—The market remains dull. We quote: First pots, $4.35 to $4.40; seconds, $3.60; Pearls, $6.25 per 100 lb.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

Quotations are as follows: Choice Manitoba spring wheat patents, $4.10; seconds, $3.80; strong bakers', $3.40; straight rollers, $3.50 to $3.60; winter wheat patents, $3.75 to $4.

GRAIN.—The tone of the market for grain has continued firm throughout the week. Peas are quoted higher, and rye has also advanced in price. Barley is quiet, but prices are steady. Oats continue in good demand, and with a continuance of limited offerings the market shows a higher tendency. We quote: Rye, 56c.; peas, 79c.; corn, 72c.; buckwheat, 58½ to 59c.; barley, 49c.; oats, 36 to 36½c. ex-store.

OATMEAL.—No quotable change has been made, but the tone of the market is firmer in sympathy with the advance in the price of oats. Rolled oats are now quoted at $4.50 per barrel and $2.25 per [illegible] in jobbing lots, and at $4.15 per barrel and $2 per bag in large lots.

BALED HAY.—The demand for baled hay continues good and the market is active at steady prices. No quotable change is reported. Prices now are: No. 1 timothy, $9 to $9.50; No. 2, $8 to $8.75; clover, $7 to $7.50 per ton in carlots.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, N.B., November 3, 1902.

BUSINESS is very active. The markets, as a rule, are very firm with an upward tendency. There are a few exceptions, such as dry codfish and pickled fish, which are more freely offered. Beans, while high, have dropped off considerably during the week. There is much interest in the winter-port business which will shortly open. Better arrangements than ever have been made to handle it, and there is no doubt the volume of business will be larger than ever.

OILS.—There is nothing new. Burning oil, which is a particularly large business, shipments this fall having been larger than usual, holds firm at the advance. Lubricating oils have a large sale for the season. Paint oils are rather quiet, the lower price in linseeds and the strong market in turpentine continue. Some cod oil is arriving regularly to hand.

SALT.—In Liverpool coarse salt the market is well supplied. Regular receipts will come to hand with the opening of the winter port business. In fine salt, there is a fair sale at even figures. We quote: Liverpool coarse, 55c. to 60c.; English factory-filled, 95c. to $1.00; Canadian fine, $1 per bag; cheese and butter salt, bulk, $2.40 per bbl.; 5-lb. bags, $2.75 to $2.85 per bbl.; 10-lb. bags, $2.60 to $2.65 per bbl.; 20-lb. wood boxes, 22-23c. each; 10-lb. wood boxes, 14c. each; cartons, $2 per case of two dozen; English bottled salt, $1.25 to $1.30 per doz.; mineral rock salt, 60c. per 100 lb. (Selected lumps.)

CANNED GOODS.—This is quite an active line. Dealers are holding tomatoes at the full advance, not being able to fill their orders. Corn is quite firm. Peas are unchanged. Salmon is still offered quite freely. There is a wide range in the price. The market is rather firm. In fruits, gallon apples are offered freely at quite low prices. The market is freely supplied by local packed fruit. Blueberries are scarce. Other fruits sell at even figures. Meats are being sold by Ontario packers for spring delivery. Prices are firm. In sardines, the pack so far, has been light, but prices are low. Haddock and herring are quite freely received.

GREEN FRUITS.—There are still free receipts of soft apples, but Gravensteins and winter fruit are scarce and bring full figures. The Gravensteins seen here are poor. Oranges are quite low, there being free receipts of Jamaicas. In lemons, while prices are still quite high, the market is somewhat easier. Grapes, Ontario stock are not so freely offered, and the season is about over. Keg grapes are more freely offered. There is very little doing in sweet potatoes. Cranberries show quite a range in price. Each season the domestic berry shows an improvement. There is a very light call for bananas.

DRIED FRUITS.—The chief interest is in Californian fruit, particularly seeded raisins. The market is quite bare and direct shipments will be late. Coast prices will be higher by the time the report is in the reader's hands. Californian prunes are daily expected; in fact, they will be on the market this week. Prices are low. Malaga raisins are more freely offered than usual. Valencias are scarce and high. Currants are low. Cleaned, in packages, have the market. Some new peels are daily expected and sell freely to arrive. Figs sell freely and prices are firmer. New dates are shortly expected. Prices are low, but the market is tending higher. Evaporated apples are rather higher. In onions, stock is freely offered, and lower prices rule. Nuts have a free sale. New peanuts are being quoted.

DAIRY PRODUCE.—Butter is rather firmer; best stock is hard to get. There is a good inquiry. Eggs are rather firmer. Sales have not been large, but they show an improvement. Cheese is rather higher and stocks held are quite light.

SUGAR.—The market rules very firm. Prices are still low and the sale is very large. There are several retail houses buying in carlots this season, which is unusual here.

MOLASSES.—There is a fair inquiry. Porto Rico is the grade having the sale. Prices are unchanged, though held firmer. Some Barbados is still offered.

FISH.—There is just a fair business, the big fall demand having been supplied. Dry cod have been very freely received and the price is rather easier. Pollock are rather light supply. Pickled herring are rather easier, there being less demand. Finnan haddies, which have a very large western sale, are rather scarce and the price is firm. Smoked herring are in very light supply for this season and rather higher prices rule. We quote: Haddies, 4½ to 5c.; smoked herring, 6½ to 7c.; fresh haddock and cod, 2 to 2½c.; boneless fish, 4 to 5c.; pollock, $1.70 to $1.75 per 100 lb.; pickled herring, $2 to $2.25 per half barrel; dry cod, $3.50 to $3.65; pickled shad, half barrel, $6.

FLOUR, FEED AND MEAL.—The firmer prices in flour rule. Manitobas have been advanced 10c. Feed is quite plentiful. Oats and oatmeal are firmly held. Cornmeal is unchanged. Beans are more freely offered, and at much lower prices than were quoted last week. Barley has a rather better sale. Peas are high and scarce. Quotations are as follows: Manitoba flour, $4.15 to $4.20; medium, $3.95 to $4.10; oatmeal, easy at $4.40 to $4.50; cornmeal, $3.20 to $3.25; middlings, in small lots, $26 to $28; oats, new, 40 to 41c.; handpicked beans, $2.25 to $2.30; prime, $2.05 to $2.75; yellow eye beans, $2.80 to $3; split peas, $5.15 to $5.25; barley, $1.40 to $1.50; hay, new, $9 to $10.

It is many years since the stock of smoked herring held here at this season was so small.

The A. I. Teed Co., St. Stephen, have received a large shipment of Upton's jams, jellies and marmalade.

E. T. Sturdee is finding a large demand for New York cleaned currants. Hills, Bros. & Co., whom he represents, quote low prices.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, November 1, 1902.

THE business of the week has been satisfactory. Money is coming in fairly well and all jobbers seem satisfied, with the single exception of the car-shortage difficulty. Goods are still very long in coming in and this makes correspondence heavy. The weather is simply perfect. There was a light rain on Friday and Saturday of last week, but since then the weather has been warm and bright. To-day (November 1) has been like a summer's day, and except for the absence of leaves on the trees was more like early June. The mild weather has a tendency to hold back the sale of heavy clothing, but it is popular with those who have long fuel bills to pay and with the builders who are straining every nerve to complete their contracts. There is very little of interest to record in the matter of market changes.

CANNED GOODS.—The interest of the situation still centres around tomatoes. The extreme shortage of supply is now pretty fully known and jobbing houses are adjusting themselves to the conditions. Offers of tomatoes at $3.10 per case Montreal have been received in the city for lots up to 1,000 cases, but so far as known these have not been bought. At this price it would mean that tomatoes would have to retail at 20c. and at this price consumption would be materially lessened; in fact, jobbers claim that it would be cut down over one-half. Price quoted on tomatoes here at present is $3.50 per case, but it is understood that this price will go higher. Corn and peas are very firm but without change. We quote: Corn, per case, $2; peas, per case, $2; beans, per case of 2 doz., $1.75. SUGARS.—The market is steady with a very considerable volume of business moving. No change in prices can be recorded. Extra standard, granulated, $4.45; bright yellows, $3.85.

MOLASSES.—In steady demand at the following prices: Black strap, in bbls., per gallon, 28c.; black strap, in half bbls., per gallon, 30c.; black strap, in 5-gallon kits, each, $2.25; golden, in half bbls., per gallon, 38c.; Barbados, genuine imported, in half bbls., per gallon, 45c.; Imperial brand, in 3-lb. tins, per case of 2 doz., $3.25.

EVAPORATED AND DRIED FRUITS.—New Californian muscatels are in and show very fine quality. Prices are as follows: 2-crown, 8½c.; 3-crown, 9c. per lb. There is little change in other lines, quotations for which are: London layers, $1.90 to $2 per box; clusters, $2.50; "Royal Buckingham Clusters," $3.50 to $3.75; fine off-stalk Valencia, $2.25 to $2.35; layers, $2.40 to $2.50. Currants are unchanged at 5½c. for best Filiatras and 6¾c. for cleaned. Vostizzas, in cases, 6c. Smyrna figs.—The new stock promises to be very fine. We quote: 6-crown, 20c.; 5-crown, 15c.; 3-crown, 12½c.; glove boxes, 14 to 16c.; cooking figs, 4½ to 5c.

Evaporated fruits are firmer and show a tendency to advance. Prices are as follows: Peaches, peeled, 20 to 21c.; peaches, unpeeled, 8½ to 9½c.; pears, 10 to 12c.; apricots, choice, 9½c.; apricots, standards, 8¾ to 9c.; pitted plums, 9 to 9½c.; prunes, 100-120, 4 to 4½c.; prunes, 90-100, 5½ to 5¾c.; prunes, 80-90, 6 to 7c.; prunes, 70-80, 6¾ to 7c.; prunes, 60-70, 7¼ to 7½c.; prunes, 40-50, 9 to 9½c.; evaporated apples, 8½c. per lb.

CEREALS.—A slight decline in rolled oats and a stronger bean market are the only items of interest to record this week. Rolled oats have dropped to $1.85 for the 80-lb. sack, and other lines in proportion. Granulated and standard oatmeal, $2.50 per 98-lb; cornmeal, in sacks, $1.75; cornmeal, half sacks, per half sack, 90c.; white beans, choice, $2.35 to $2.45; split peas, per sack, $2.70; whole peas, per lb., 2½c.; pearl barley, Ontario, per sack, $3.30; pot barley, Ontario, per sack, $2.20; rolled wheat, per sack of 80 lb., $2.25; wheat, granules, per sack of 6 to 10-lb. bags, $2.

RICE.—The market is firm and without change. Prices are: Japan, 5½c.; Patna, 5 to 5¼c.; B rice, 4 to 4½c. per lb.

FLOUR.—It was rather expected that flour would advance in sympathy with eastern prices, but the advance promised last week has not been confirmed and the mills are selling at the old figures of $2 for patent No. 1; $1.85 for No. 2 and $1.55 for strong bakers. The mills of the West are all heavily oversold.

BUTTER.—For the small amount of creamery still in the hands of the factories 20 to 21c. is being paid at the factory. Another week will see all of it about cleared up. Dairy butter.—Supplies are not increasing to any considerable extent and a good deal of the late receipts cannot be classified as "choice." Anything like a good round lot of fresh, sweet dairy is worth 15c. Winnipeg, and inferior grades, 12 to 14c.

CHEESE.—The market is now down to winter basis. There are small quantities of Manitoba in the city and considerable stocks of Ontario. Jobbers are selling at 13½c. per lb.

EGGS.—Receipts show no signs of increasing and there is a very active demand. One house in the city is offering 20c. net Winnipeg and others quote from 18 to 19c. Retail eggs are 30 to 35c. per dozen, according to the grade of freshness.

NOTES.

The Williamson Company's goods, such as fruits in glass, which first came on this market last season, are growing in popularity. The Hudson Bay are their agents here and have received one car, and another in transit.

OTTAWA TRADE GOSSIP.

BUSINESS here is reported good with both wholesale and retail merchants. The increase in prices of some lines has created an extra demand.

Raisins are still very firm at advanced prices. Californain seeded raisins cannot be bought within ¼c. of last week's prices. Flour is the same as last week and in good demand.

The price of sugar is also the same, the demand at present not being very great.

Canned tomatoes are being retailed here in some stores at 15c., although 12½c. is about the lowest they can be bought for. A small lot was sold the other day for $1.75 per dozen. Corn is likely to reach $1 per dozen soon according to a good report. Peas are about 85 to 90c.

Currants are plentiful at 4½c. for fine Filiatras and ¼ to ½c. higher for cleaned fruit.

The price of American oil is advancing. It is now 19½c., being 1c. higher than last week. A prominent firm state that they cannot get enough to supply the demand.

At the Fruit Exchange good stock winter apples are selling at high prices. Buyers are beginning to realize that it is a mistake to look for apples as low as it was talked of some time ago. No. 1 Spies are selling at $3.25 to $3.75; Baldwins, $3 to $3.50 and Pippins, $2.50 to $2.75. No. 2 stock is now plentiful, and

At the Cheese Board last Friday some 780 boxes were offered, made up of 543 of white and 237 colored; 11⅛c. was bid and a few sales were made at that figure. The price of cheese of September make or older is about 12 to 12½c. now, and it is scarce at the price.

The regular meeting of the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association will be held next Monday evening in their rooms, Fruit Exchange Building, Nicholas street.

The fall number of "The Canadian Grocer" came to hand Monday morning and everyone spoken to who has seen it was delighted with its appearance and make up. The information to be had from it is worth a year's subscription alone.

EXPERIMENTAL SHIPMENT OF APPLES.

An experiment recently made by the Experimental Farm authorities here in apple shipping to Great Britain has demonstrated the demand which it is possible to create for Canadian fruit. There was shipped, on October 1, 100 bushels of first grade fall apples, packed in boxes of one bushel each. They were sent to a commission merchant in London in the name of one of the officials, in order that there should be no favoritism shown on account of their being Government farm-grown. The returns received this week show that the apples sold quickly, bringing a profit, after commission and freight was paid, of $3 a barrel. In the 100 bushels there were about 33 barrels.

SALE OF A HOTEL

An event that will interest commercial men took place here yesterday when the transfer of the Grand Union Hotel took place. Hugh Alexander, the proprietor, for the past nine years, sold out to J. K. Paisley.

Mr. Alexander intends leaving for the West to go into ranching, and to celebrate his last day as proprietor, he gave a dance and supper. It was an impromptu affair, but there was a large gathering of prominent citizens and guests of the hotel.

A MYSTERIOUS BLAZE.

One of those fires, the origin of which is wrapped in mystery, was discovered about 10 p.m. on October 29 in the basement of the premises at 22 North John street, Hamilton, occupied by the Garlock Packing Co. The brigade was on hand promptly, and soon squelched the flames, but the squelching process resulted in considerable damage by water. The loss, which will likely exceed $1,000, is covered by insurance.

The fire will be a serious matter to the company, owing to the delay it will cause in the filling of orders. A. Byrne, the proprietor, has only recently returned from a trip to the Old Country, during which he took a large number of export orders, and these cannot be got at as soon as required.

W. E. Mayhew, general merchant, Bristol, Que., has sold out to W. J. Scobie.

NECTAR THEN AND NOW.

AT the hands of Hebe or Ganymede as cupbearer it assumed a roseate hue, possessed wonderful life-giving properties, and imparted perential beauty and vigor to those who sipped it wisely, remarks London Globe. This, of course, was on the mystical heights of Olmypus, where, in hot weather, it was doubtless tempered with a mixture of chastening snow. In the valleys below the early connoisseur, supine but exigent, took his nectar in the form of a > —draught of vintage that had been > Cooled a long age in the deep-delved earth, and as often as he took it he seems to have found that it agreed with him. But no sooner was a beverage pronounced the ideal nectar of gods and men than the latter began afresh their experiments with the cup. The only nectar that could be properly idealized must be all things to all men; and as the tastes of mortals were almost as various as their drinks, a rather serious difficulty must have been experienced. This seems ultimately to have been solved by the application of the term to a whole class of beverages, the only necessary condition being that they should be equally delicious and salubrious. In a word, there was nectar, and nectar all the world over. Thus it became not only the most accommodating of drinks, but the ideal beverage according to time, place, circumstance, and—last, but by no means least—the fastidious personal equation.

But, of course, the ancients had their special idea of a true nectar, as tested and approved by their own palates. Wine was its natural basis, and it would, perhaps, not be difficult to trace the "cup" drinks of the moderns to the class of beverages which were regarded by the Greeks and Romans as "nectareous." The early practice of adding water to wine and cooling it with ice or snow developed into an entirely new order of thirst allaying beverages. Honey was the natural sweetener of all of them; but this ingredient was apt to pall, and its rather cloying lusciousness had to be corrected by the use of certain flowers and spices. From Lucullus himself might have fallen the inspiration:

> Annual for me the grape, the rose, renew,
> The juice nectareous and the balmy dew.

A similar development can be traced in the history of the famous beverages, mead and metheglin, once the nectars of Northern Europe. Both were fermented drinks; but the latter—the nectar or "honey wine" of the banqueting table—was rather viciously intoxicating, while mead was chiefly used as a vehicle for the flavoring of fruits and aromatic herbs. Queen Elizabeth was excessively fond of it, and a mead used to be especially prepared for her use, blended with sweet briar, thyme, rosemary and bay. The effect of metheglin upon the heads and tempers of its consumers was notorious, and remembering the liberal views prevailing among our ancestors on this subject, the cause of many a hot feud and doughty trial of strength between Saxon and Dane may not be far to seek. Mead, however, was a true nectar, as was "morat," a delicate mixture of honey with mulberry juice. "Pigment" was a richer and heavier liquor, composed of wine highly spiced and also sweetened with honey.

As the use of honey waned, and the employment of sugar became general, a new departure occurred in what may not improperly be called "made" or mixed drinks. A genuine nectar was always regarded as a happy blend of several ingredients, and as these were infinitely various, the result was sometimes a little astonishing. One of the most delightful and harmonious of these blends was that of milk with cider or light wine, which one would like to think was the discovery of a genius. As for good cider, it is occasionally so very good as to be almost a nectar in itself, and one of its scientific advocates claims for it that "it satisfies the interior parts of the system, which then cease to importune the stomach." A splendid credential, which also implies a great moral. But where are the ciders of old days with which this truly admirable result might perhaps have been obtained? What has become of the once famous "Cocky Gee," king of all the Somersetshire ciders, of which an excellent judge remarked that never was nectar more delicious? "Full flavored, soft, creamery, yet vigorous, it was preferred to any champagne. Fashions change, tastes vary, and men conform accordingly. Though not even the most drouthy poet would vaunt the vapid inanity of the so-called "claret cup" as ordinarily made and administered. No hint of the nectar of flowers is to be found in that bowl. And in spite of the exquisite nectars of which milk is a leading ingredient, we are content to regard it as sufficiently drinkable when "enthused" by means of a syphon. Such a combination would have chilled the heart of Isaak Walton, a connoisseur of no mean order. He does not say that he was the inventor of the delicious beverage described in his book, but he certainly suggests a most delightful occasion for its enjoyment. On a hot summer afternoon, and within earshot of the drowsy rippling of the stream, we find a shady retreat "which Nature herself has woven with her own fine finger—a contexture of woodbines, sweetbriar, jessamine, and myrtle." In this enchanting bower art comes to the relief of (human) nature with a nectar composed of sack, milk, oranges and sugar, which, though not iced in the lavish modern manner, was "temperatured" to the refreshing point of coolness; which is about "as cool as a cucumber," little more or less. This is a most appealing drink, even to the driest imagination. So good, indeed, that it was declared to be "too good for any but anglers or very honest men." By all means let us qualify for a share of that bowl.

It has been said that in the multitude of beverages there is folly; but there is pleasure, and good service, too, in a few. The ideal nectar for hot weather should be thirst assuaging, bland, and not of too composite a character. Like truth, it may sometimes be discovered at the bottom of a well. Some easily satisfied palates have found it in cold tea lightly sweetened and with a slice of lemon added; while a pinch of oatmeal to a yard of pump water has been voted all sufficient by the teetotallers. It depends upon the drinker. No doubt, simplicity is delightful to the thirsty, though a more nectareous touch is permissible in the draught prepared for an occasion. And here is one which, though originally "made in Germany," should yet commend itself to English tastes. In a large vessel, and in a cool place, lay a freshly-gathered bunch of sweet-smelling woodroffe, with an orange. Then fill up the bowl with any thin Rhenish wine, and allow it to stand for some hours. When required add a bottle or two of aerated water, and serve it as a "cup" with everything floating in it. It should, of course, be cool; but if you affront it with ice it will respond with diminished flavor. And—as is not always the case with nectars of a more ambitious cast—it is said of this delicious beverage that you never have to ask your friends how they like it.

W. H. Evans, in Montreal Star.

Entering a laundry in Westmount a few days ago I noticed the "celestial" deeply interested in a "classic." I said:

"Who is teaching you?" I exclaimed.

"The San Fliscan Flyer."

"The St. Franciscan Friar?"

"Yes, the Fliscan Flyer at the biggee Jossee housee on Dolchester street, no bootee, lopee beltee (rope belt)."

"Well, Gum, how are you progressing?"

If it teaches anything, the great contest proves the truth of the saying: "It is each man's small misfortune that makes up the general misfortune."

ADVERTISING TALKS.

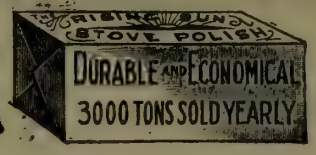
By A. B. Caswell.

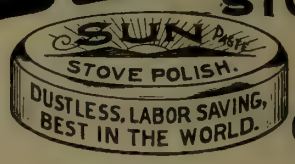
THERE are three essential points which the retail merchant will do well to observe in his advertising :

1. Right mediums.
2. Right goods.
3. Right way of using the mediums for the goods.

First—Right mediums. This is a question which causes no small amount of worry to the advertising manager of large concerns where general publicity is desired. The number of mediums is something enormous, and each presses some claim peculiar to itself as good and sufficient reason why its columns should be patronized. This, however, is not a matter which need greatly concern the average retailer, whose local daily or weekly is his only newspaper medium. Where there is only one paper in the town it is not difficult to choose, and in cases where there might be two or three, both might be used or a choice made of the best medium. Every local merchant has a pretty good idea as to their circulation, standing, etc., in the community. The merchant cannot appreciate too much the value of the judicious use of printers' ink. Space in a well-read paper, properly managed, cannot fail to produce results. Run your ad. regularly, daily or semi-weekly or weekly, as the case may be, but regularly, and let each advertisement be as near like a personal call upon your customer or prospective customer as possible. Besides the benefit to be derived from persistent advertising through the medium of the local papers, there are other methods, all of which are a means towards the end. For instance, neat window displays with cards drawing attention to the goods and telling their price is good advertising. Though a stationary advertisement, that is, one which can only be seen by the passing public, yet its general effect is always good. Many merchants pay large salaries to expert window-dressers, recognizing the importance of an attractive window from an advertising standpoint. Another good medium is the delivery wagon. It is a constantly moving advertisement, and will be seen in all parts of the community during a day. Many of the larger stores use their delivery wagons as a means for daily announcements to the public, placing showcards offering particular wares on the sides of the wagon and changing them daily, or as often as desired. An attractive wagon in itself, with the name of the owner neatly lettered upon it, is a cheap as well as an effective advertisement. I say cheap, because a delivery wagon is a necessity anyway to most retail stores, and an attractive outfit costs no more to keep up and little more to possess than a vehicle that would be discreditable.



Second—Right goods. I think I have said enough for the present with regard to mediums, and now just a word as to "Right Goods." Too much importance cannot be attached to the merit of the goods advertised. Any article properly advertised can be put upon the market for a time, but it cannot be expected to remain there unless it has merit to back up its advertising, and this is the secret of the meteor-like career of all sorts of quack merchandise which flash across the commercial sky and as quickly disappear into the darkness of oblivion again. They have not the staying qualities. Let me strongly advise the merchant to beware of advertising anything to possess merit which it has not. If you wish to run out some damaged goods, or goods of inferior quality, state openly that such is the case and that for this reason they are being sold at a sacrifice, etc., but never lose sight of the fact that "Honesty is the best policy." Good goods and honest, straightforward statements regarding them, once proved to be honest or backed up by an honest merchant will go farther towards building up a business than all the fake advertising in the world. Even our old friend, P. T. Barnum, who perhaps knew the value of advertising better than anybody else in America, used to say "You can fool all the public part of the time, and you can fool part of the public all the time, but you can't fool all the public all the time."



Third.—The right way of using the mediums for the goods. This comes last but is not the least important subject of this article. What I have just said above may also be taken as the keynote of this heading. A plain straightforward statement of facts is the prime feature of good advertising. Having once got the confidence of the public in this way there is no reason why you should not keep it. A catchy headline, neat display, and the judicious use of cuts all assist in adding to the attractiveness of the advertisement.

I also favor giving prices, though some object to this, saying that they do not want their opposition to know what they are doing. Rest assured your opposition knows all about what you are doing, whether you advertise or not, and his taking such an interest in your affairs is complimentary rather than otherwise. The public like prices and are going to buy at the store where they see that such-and-such a thing costs so much rather than at the store where such-and-such a thing is selling at a "very low price." These ambiguous statements are too much like a leap in the dark for this enlightened age. Give the public honest facts and figures if you want them to give you their confidence in return.

BRANDON RETAIL GROCERS.

THE Brandon Retail Grocers' Protective Association has been in existence about four months and already has proved itself of material benefit to its members in many ways by bringing the trade together and helping things generally. The objects of this Association are as follows:

1. To foster a more social feeling among the members of the trade.

2. To patronize such wholesale houses as do an exclusive wholesale business.

3. To keep a list of such persons as are not worthy of credit for the information of members.

4. To watch all legislation affecting the trade.

5. Protection against the adulteration of goods, fictitious labels and false weights and measures.

6. To shorten the hours of labor.

7. To recommend the adjustment of all trade disputes by arbitration whenever practicable.

8. To procure better laws in licensing peddlers and other matters affecting their trade.

In carrying out the above objects they hope to encourage every honest dealer, stamp out fraud and trickery everywhere, and by united action secure to themselves and to their customers all the benefits possible in connection with the trade.

TO ABOLISH TRADING STAMPS.

AT the regular monthly meeting of the Grocers' Association of Montreal, which was held on Thursday evening, November 6, there was an unusually large attendance of members, as it was understood beforehand that the meeting would be of special interest. The president, Ald. Turner, was in the chair.

The subject which occupied the attention of those present for the chief part of the evening was that of the use of trading stamps. This has been brought up before in the meetings and it has been the general opinion that the trading stamps should be abolished. A motion to do away with them in the city was carried by the Association some months ago, and the legal representative of the Association was instructed to inquire into the city's powers in the matter.

It appears that the city council can arrange the charter so as to render the use of trading stamps prohibitory; and at Thursday's meeting it was pointed out that the present was the best time to have the matter settled, as the aldermen were proposing amendments to the charter. After a good deal of discussion, in which it was apparent that to abolish trading stamps was the general desire of the members of the association, it was decided to make a request to have a clause inserted in the charter prohibiting their use. A letter received from the Toronto Grocers' Association some time ago outlined the experience they had had in this connection, and defined their position on the question; and the present action of the Montreal Association is much along the lines of that of their fellow grocers in Ontario.

The plan of closing one night in each week for the benefit of the clerks came up for discussion and was approved of. Already several grocers in the city and suburbs have consented to this, and it has been the practice with them for some little time. Now that the approval of the Association as a body has been secured, all grocery stores will be recommended to close on Thursday night of every week. In the event of its preceding a holiday, of course, it will not be advisable to close.

At a meeting of the Montreal branch of the Grocery Clerks' Association on November 7 it was recommended that all grocery stores close Thursday evenings, unless preceding a holiday, to give clerks a night to themselves each week.

ONE ON P. C. LARKIN.

A GOOD story is going the rounds in Toronto business circles just now about that energetic gentleman, P. C. Larkin, with whose name the "Salada" Ceylon tea is indissolubly connected.

Back in Mr. Larkin's little sanctum at the "Salada" tea headquarters, there is a valuable phonograph, which Mr. Larkin uses on occasion to save his stenographers the trouble of taking down his correspondence in shorthand. Into this intricate machine Mr. Larkin is wont to dictate his letters in a firm and emphatic voice, each word clear-cut and resonant. One day not so long ago, Mr. Larkin was leaning over his pet machine, shouting into it some matters of an important nature. He became worked up over his subject and his words came from him with the utmost emphasis. Then, suddenly, he paused perplexed, and turned back the machine. It immediately began to repeat with accuracy every word that Mr. Larkin had uttered. But evidently Mr. Larkin did not think so. He listened, he grew warm, he became excited. Suddenly jumping from his chair he exclaimed: "No, no, I never said that," and promptly turned off the phonograph.

PROMINENT MERCHANT DEAD.

The death is reported of Mr. Archibald D. Munroe, a well-known tea and coffee merchant of Maxville, Ont. Mr. Munroe went to Montreal on Friday, November 7, to make purchases, and while in the wholesale establishment of Messrs. P. S. Doyle & Co., tea importers, St. Paul street, was suddenly stricken with paralysis. He was immediately taken to the Montreal General Hospital, where physicians pronounced his case very serious. Everything possible was done to save his life, but without avail, and on the following Monday he died.

His brothers, Messrs. D. H. Munroe, D. D. Munroe, of Moose Creek; Alex. D. Munroe, of Maxville; and his nephew F. D. Munroe, a student at McGill University, were at his bedside. The remains were conveyed to Maxville for interment.

Mr. Munroe was a highly respected member of the trade, whose loss will be keenly regretted by all who knew him.

THE PROVISION TRADE

AND COLD STORAGE NEWS.

FROZEN HOGS FOR AUSTRALIA.

THE PROVINCE, Vancouver, B.C., says: "The exportation of frozen meat from Vancouver to Australia may at first seem like the shipping of the proverbial coals to Newcastle, but it is a fact that arrangements have already been completed for such consignments, and the first shipment will leave here on November 14.

"The meat to be shipped consists of frozen hogs, and the refrigerator cargo space has been pre-empted by the exporters. The cargo space in the refrigerating departments of each vessel carrying the shipments amounts to approximately 150 tons.

"The major portion of the shipments of hogs made on each vessel will be from the hands of local exporters, who will, it is understood, do their business through P. Burns & Co. Eastern people have also seized upon the opportunity of shipping frozen hogs to Australia, and their trade will be represented in the shipments to be made on the next two liners sailing from here.

"It is confidently expected that once the frozen hog trade has been fairly established by Canadians in Australia it will develop to large proportions, and it should prove exceedingly remunerative to those in this Province who are in a position to engage in it."

CURING BEEF HAMS.

The National Provisioner gives the following good cure for beef hams: For each 220 lb. of meat use a solution or pickle of 16 oz., saltpetre, 3 pts. of syrup and 85 deg. pickle. Cure in 40 days, then store in a temperature of 38 to 40 deg. F.

RUSSIAN MEAT FOR LONDON.

United States Consul Marshal Halstead reports from Birmingham, October 2, 1902, as follows: "In a recent review of British trade, The London Daily Mail states that the Russian Agricultural Department is reported to be making arrangements to play an important part in supplying the London markets with beef, in opposition to the American meat exporters. It says special steamers have been built with freezing chambers, the Russian Government assisting by subsidies, and that it is intended they shall ply between a Russian Port, via the Kiel Canal, and London, with huge cargoes of fresh meat. Libau is considered a suitable port, as from there the beef can reach London in three days or less after slaughtering."

O.A.C. GRADUATE HONORED.

J. J. Ferguson, a graduate of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, has been appointed stock manager of the Swift Packing Co., and has general charge of the stock food departments in Chicago, Kansas City, Omaha, St. Louis and St. Paul.

PREPARING MEAT EXTRACTS.

Meat extract is manufactured from fresh beef soups from canning departments and even from old pickle which contains considerable albumen, taking, however, fresh beef as a basis. The fat, bone and sinew are trimmed out and the meat chopped and macerated in cold water several hours. Steam is then introduced into the vat and raised to a temperature of 120 deg. F. Agitate constantly. The liquor is then strained into another vessel, the residue being then boiled with equal parts of water about six hours. The liquor is afterwards separated by pressure and immediately transferred to a vacuum pan and reduced one-fourth. Then the first liquid obtained, which contains the albumen, is added and evaporation continued until 1 lb. of extract represents 20 lb. of beef. Summed up, there are the following processes involved: First, divesting meat of all fat, bone and sinew and then chopping fine; second, the digestive process, in which the meat is exposed to steam in the digester; third, separating, by straining off the albumen and fibrine; fourth, the evaporation process as above stated. National Provisioner.

THE PROVISION MARKETS.

TORONTO.

Cattle shipments, averaging about 60 loads per day, are being received this week at the Western Cattle Market. Dealers report the quality as being extra good. About 5,000 hogs have been shipped in this week—a considerable advance on last week's shipments. Since colder weather has come trade is getting very brisk in dressed meats, and prices have advanced. We quote: Dressed hogs, $7.50 to $8.00; beef carcasses, $4.50 to $7.50 per 100 lb.; hind quarters, $5.00 to $8.50 per 100 lb.; front quarters, $3.50 to $5.50 per 100 lb.; veal, 7 to 9c., and lamb 5½ to 6½c. Best live hogs, heavy weight (160 to 200 lb.), are worth $6.00, while light weights are quoted at $5.75. Choice export cattle are quoted from $4.40 to $5.10; butchers' from $3.65 to $4.40, and feeders from $2.50 to $4.25.

The provision trade is brisk in all lines, and, if stocks were not light, would be much more so. There is a particularly good demand for all kinds of pork. A number of wholesale provision dealers are handling venison, in which line there is a ready sale. It is sold by the carcass at 7 and 8c. per lb. Prices in other lines remain unchanged, and are as follows: Long clear bacon, 11 to 11½c.; smoked breakfast bacon, 14½ to 15c.; roll, 12 to 12½c.; medium hams, 13½ to 14c.; large hams, 12½ to 13c.; shoulder hams, 11 to 11½c., and backs 14½ to 15c.; Canadian heavy mess pork, $21.50; short cut, $23.50 to $24.00; lard, in tierces, 10¾ to 11c. per lb.; tubs, 11 to 11¼c., and pails 11¼ to 11½c.; compounds, 8¾ to 10c.; plate beef, $15.00 per 200-lb. bbl.

MONTREAL.

There has been a fair demand in most lines of provisions during the week, and the market in general has been steady with no quotable changes. Both local and country buyers have been taking fairly good supplies. The feeling in Canadian short cut mess continues firm, owing to the continued scarcity.

The demand for dressed hogs continues fairly good, and this week somewhat lower prices are quoted, fresh killed abattoir stock selling at $8.50 to $8.75. Country killed hogs are quoted at $8 per 100 lb.

In lard, although no actual change is quoted in prices, there is an inclination to shade prices of round lots. We quote: Pure Canadian lard, $2.37½ to $2.40 per pail; Fairbank's "Boar's Head" lard compound, 9⅜c. tierce basis, with extras as follows: 60-lb. tubs, ¼c. over tierce; 20-lb. tin pails, ¼c.; 20-lb. wood pails, ½c.; 10-lb. tins, ¾c.; 5-lb. tins, ⅞c.; 3-lb. tins, 1c. Snow White and Globe compound, $1.80 to $1.90 per pail; Cottolene, 11¼c. for 20-lb. pails, and 11⅛c. for 60-lb.

WINNIPEG.

BEEF — Dressed beef continues in fair supply at 5½ to 6¼c. for city dressed. As the weather grows colder there will be considerable offerings of farm dressed meat, but up to the present that has not cut any figure on this market.

MUTTON — Good demand at 8 to 9c.; lambs, 10 to 10½c.

DRESSED HOGS — Very limited supply at 9 to 9½c.

CURED MEATS — There has been no change in the price of any line this week, the demand is heavy and trade keen. We quote: Hams, sugar cured, 15¼c.; breakfast bacon, bellies, 15¾c.; backs, 14¾c.; spiced rolls, short, 12¾c.; long, 13¼c.; smoked shoulders, 11½c.; cooked hams, 25c. per lb.; smoked long clear, 13c.; dry salt, long clear, 11c.; dry salt, backs, 12½c.; barrel pork, heavy mess, $20; pork sausage, 8c.; bologna, 7½c.; pickled pigs feet, in kits, $1.25.

LARD — Owing to the small number of hogs received lard is somewhat scarce and prices very firm. We quote: Tierces, 11⅞c.; 50-lb. tubs, $6.05; 20-lb. pails, $2.50; 10-lb. tins, in cases, $7.60; 5-lb., tins, $7.65; 3-lb., tins, $7.75.

ST. JOHN, N.B.

In barrelled meats prices are very high. Never were so many grades offered. There are Ontario, domestic and American goods offered. Beside all grades of plate beef there is mess beef. In pork very little of the heavy clear is offered. Market is supplied with cheaper grades. Trade not large. In fresh pork price is a little easier and receipts much better. Sale is somewhat slow. Beef is rather easier, light domestic beef is very plentiful. Lamb is still low. Very little mutton or veal offered. Business is heavy. We quote as follows: Mess pork, $22.50 to $23.50; clear pork, $23.50 to $26; plate beef, $14 to $16; domestic beef, 5 to 7c.; Western beef, 7 to 9c.; lamb, 6 to 6½c.; mutton, 5c.; veal, 5 to 7c.; pork, 7½ to 8c.; pure lard, tubs, 12c.; pails, 12¼c.; compound, tubs, 9¼c.; pails, 9½c.; Fairbank's refined, tubs, 10¼c.; pails, 10½c.

PROVISION NOTES.

George McMorran, butcher, Toronto, is dead.

Rochon & Lafrance, provision merchants, Montreal, have registered.

Woods & Aldrich, butchers, Portage La Prairie, Man., are dissolving.

Papineau & Cie, butchers, etc., St. Cunegonde, Que., have registered.

Thos. Pizer, provision merchant, Toronto, has sold out to the Dominion Poultry & Produce Co.

Kimball & Merkley, butchers and fruiterers, Magrath, N.W.T., are going into the agricultural implement business.

Nine prominent chemical factories in Berlin, Cassel, Graunan, Hamburg and Leipzig, headed by Schering, have addressed a protest to the Diet against the prohibition of the use of boric acid and its salt for preserving meat.

Retail butchers in Toronto, who are at present handling venison, report that very little profit is realized from that line on account of the $15 license required before it can be handled. "The game," they say, "is hardly worth the powder."

William J. Harris, known as London's "Sausage King," has three sons all named William Harris, and numbered one, two, three, who assist him in the business, and four daughters all named Betsy, numbered one, two, three and four and all lady sausagemakers.

VERY BUSY.

Mr. Ewing, of S. H. Ewing & Sons, informed THE CANADIAN GROCER that their capacity was being taxed to the utmost, and a night as well as a day staff were working hard filling orders. Ewing & Sons ask their many customers to bear with them at present in any delay in filling their orders, as they are doing their best to accommodate the trade as much as possible, and hope soon to be in a position to fill orders more promptly. This rush is a good indication of the popularity of this firm's goods.

BUILDING NEW FACTORY.

The "Ozo" Co., Limited, proprietors of The Michel Lefebvre Vinegar Works and of Brosseau & Co., have now placed the contract for another factory in Montreal on the property of the Lefebvre Vinegar Works. In the new place they will manufacture pickles, spices, sauces, jams, etc.

The rapid progress of this company has been marked by the trade in general. It is due no doubt to the high quality of their vinegars and pickles, as well as to the excellent business management. When the new factory is completed, and all the lines mentioned being manufactured, The "Ozo" Co., will have one of the most complete factories of its kind.

It is expected that the new place will be finished in about three months' time and everything in operation in good time for the spring trade.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

On Saturday night, November 8, the Dominion Commercial Travellers' Association, at their meeting in Montreal, elected the following officers by acclamation :

President—J. Robinson, reelected.
Vice-President—George A Mann, reelected.
Treasurer—J. S. N. Dougall, reelected.
Directors—J. Paterso', A. D. Gall, P. J. Paradis, R. Booth, jr., S. A. Agnew.

The price the retailer pays for FAIRBANK'S BOAR'S HEAD brand of REFINED LARD COMPOUND has little to do with whether he should purchase it or not. The question for the retailer to consider is, does BOAR'S HEAD brand of REFINED LARD COMPOUND sell at a profit. If the consumer is willing to pay as much or more for BOAR'S HEAD brand of REFINED LARD COMPOUND than for hog lard or any other frying or shortening medium, the price should cut no figure with the merchant. It is the best article that takes a permanent place in the estimation of the consumer, and the store that can point to its shelves with high-grade stock is the one that has the best class of patronage and does the best business usually in the town. A merchant who cannot get away from cheap things is entirely at the mercy of his competitor who talks quality. Every merchant who is selling FAIRBANK'S BOAR'S HEAD brand of REFINED LARD COMPOUND knows that it is the only compound lard that is preferred by many to hog lard or butter.

Orders can be filled by any of the leading packing houses or jobbers in Canada or direct.

The grocer who sells pure, white, dry, crystaline Windsor Salt is absolutely sure of satisfying the man or woman who buys it. Satisfaction is a pearl of great price, but you can't measure it in dollars and cents, because you can't sell it. Since "Windsor Salt" and "satisfaction" mean exactly the same thing, you sell a pearl of great price when you sell Windsor Salt.

WHY IT WAS DELAYED.

"IT'S utterly impossible! that insert could never have been printed in Canada."

Such was the dictum of the post office authorities when The MacLean Publishing Company inquired why the Special Fall Number of THE CANADIAN GROCER was being held at the Toronto post office. The insert, of course, was the beautiful piece of work advertising Ogilvie's Flour.

According to the post office regulations—and we are in entire sympathy with them—a publication, any portion of which is printed abroad, is denied the ordinary use of the mails.

The insert referred to was executed in its entirety on the company's premises and the Special Fall Number of THE CANADIAN GROCER was sent out in complete accordance with the requirements of the postal authorities. The latter, on discovering the finely-printed Ogilvie page, promptly concluded that it could never have been produced in Canada, and accordingly stopped the carriage of the edition. Headquarters had to be got at over the long-distance telephone line, and as soon as the Deputy Postmaster-General was assured by the editor that the page was a Canadian product he immediately gave orders by wire to send the edition out in the usual way.

The incident, while unfortunate in one respect, is decidedly encouraging in another. It is a handsome compliment to Canadian artists and to the Canadian engraving and printing industry from men who are competent to judge. We must acknowledge that it is only a short time since the Canadian industry was far behind that across the border in the more modern and scientific branches of the art, but to-day we find, on the testimony of business men, that they can get work done quite as well and quite as cheaply here as in the United States.

The incident served to call forth many compliments to THE CANADIAN GROCER. The paper is usually mailed on Thursday night, so that practically all of Quebec and Ontario get their copies the following day and the Maritime Provinces and Western Canada soon after. On the Saturday following the date of publication a number of letters and even telephone messages came from different parts asking what had become of the paper, and on Monday and the few following days, letters poured in from all over Canada complaining of the non-arrival of THE GROCER. Nearly all of them had something to say complimentary to the paper, and showing in what high esteem it was held. A number enclosed another year's subscription, thinking possibly their term had expired, and requesting that all back numbers should be supplied. Finally, it became necessary to send out a printed circular to explain the delay.

THE POULTRY MARKET.

Last year a good deal of poultry was exported from Canada to Great Britain and the dealers here realized a fair profit on the transaction. This year the season has opened and the market is active.

The dealers now are finding it more profitable to buy the chickens, ducks and geese by weight instead of by the pair. Thus the sales are made on a better basis, and the farmer is encouraged to fatten his fowls before placing them on the market, being certain of realizing better prices in proportion for them when they are fat than when they are poor.

EXPORTS OF CEYLON GREEN TEA.

WHATEVER skeptical persons may have thought a short time ago, it is evident that British-grown green teas have secured a permanent footing upon the market. Of course, their use is very small when the quantities of China and Japan greens that are annually consumed are taken into account, but the fact that their consumption is steadily increasing, and that they are now figuring in the statistics which are from time to time issued in regard to tea is in evidence of this.

A return recently issued giving the distribution of Ceylon green tea from January 1 to the end of September shows that there has been a substantial increase over the same period last year. The quantity exported to all countries was 637,224 lb., while this year for the same period the quantity was 1,593,063 lb. In 1901, Russia took no Ceylon green tea, but this year she took 106,435 lb. Africa also appeared for the first time as a consumer of Ceylon green. Australia and China, on the other hand, while they took small quantities last year did not take any this year during the period in question.

Our readers are, no doubt, mostly interested in the figures relating to the quantities exported to this continent. These show that while for the nine months last year the quantity was 457,982 lb., that this year for the same period it was 993,970 lb., an increase of about 117 per cent.

Our own trade returns giving the imports of green tea into Canada show that for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1901, we took 81,574 lb. of Indian and 335,815 lb. of Ceylon green. This year, however, the figures were 71,466 lb. of Indian green and 520,480 lb. of Ceylon green tea.

The dearness and scarcity of China and Japan green teas has, no doubt, materially added to the consumption of British-grown green teas on this continent, but, of course, to what extent cannot be estimated. Whatever may be the causes the fact remains that the consumption is increasing, and not only in America, but elsewhere.

COUNTING THE COST.

A CANADIAN fast Atlantic service has been the subject of frequent conversation in Canada for some time past. The necessity for such a line and the advantages accruing from it have been emphasized in the press and on the public platform, while statesmen and capitalists have been laying their heads together as to how the project shall be actually consummated.

Yet, with all the eagerness with which this important work is being regarded by patriotic Canadians, there is danger that some important features may be overlooked. To many people the great obstacle will simply be the construction and maintenance of the vessels of the line. They believe that when once the line, as such, is a complete fact, that then everything will be perfection.

But this is the twentieth century, and a few years witness changes which relegate the perfect system of to-day into the antiquated system of yesterday. The Fuerst Bismarck, launched a few years ago at a cost of $1,500,000, is far surpassed in speed and equipment by the Deutchland of 1900, costing $3,000,000. In 1857 the highest steam pressure maintained in the boilers of an Atlantic steamship did not exceed 60 lb. to the square inch. In the latest vessels, boilers are constructed to withstand a pressure of 225 lb. As the years advance the development becomes more rapid. The demand for economy of time is everywhere heard. Whether it be for the transmission of thought, as in the cable or telephone, or in the transmission of merchandise, as in the transportation facilities, increased rapidity is the great desideratum.

It becomes apparent, therefore, if Canadians are to establish a fast line, that they must be prepared to keep it fast or at least relatively fast. If the turbine principle within a few years revolutionizes ocean traffic, then must the Canadian line adopt that principle or fall far behind.

Emil Boas, the New York agent of the Hamburg-American Line, believes in the marvellous prospects of the turbine principle. He writes in a New York paper: "The application of the turbine principle to the propulsion of the steamships I regard as one of the most significant incidents in the history of naval architecture. Unless I am very much mistaken, it will revolutionize present methods. The remarkable speed developed in the ships in which it has been applied indicates that it will be generally adopted."

RESULTS OF FRUIT MARKS ACT.

IT is a pleasure to those who have taken part in the agitation for a proper packing and grading of Canadian apples for export to read the report of Mr. A. W. Gundley, the Government agent at Liverpool, in regard to this year's shipments of apples.

He reports, on October 29, that of the apples arriving at Liverpool the grading of Canadian fruit was much superior to that of any of the apples exported from the United States. In the latter many of the apples were "faced" in a shameful way. He gives an example of the way American apples are graded, and considers it a typical one, remarking in regard to it that in all probability this particular barrel would not realize half the price of the "Canadian XX."

In the Liverpool market, however, the grade marks are not as yet considered seriously, all the fruit being exposed by sample in an open market, instead.

But if a feeling of confidence in such marks can be gradually instilled in the minds of buyers in the Old Country, it will not take long before the reliability of the markings of the Canadian fruit will become recognized, which should result in giving to our packers and shippers a reputation that will be of the utmost advantage to them over the exporters of other countries.

MONTREAL SHIPMENTS OF CHEESE BETTER.

VALENCIA RAISINS.

THE market for Valencia raisins is very firm, in sympathy with the situation on the primary market, which is characterized by a scarcity of fruit that may easily result in some shortage here before many weeks. Prices have advanced during the week, and show a continued higher tendency. Stocks now in importers' hands are light, considering the season, and all reports go to show that the market is gathering strength, which, as the holiday season is approaching, is not likely to be lost.

On November 6 the steamship Bellona, the second direct vessel, brought a full cargo of fruit; but it is estimated that up to the present the total quantity of Valencia raisins imported this season into Canada has not exceeded 200,000 boxes. As the annual consumption is considered to be in the neighborhood of twice that quantity, it is apparent that before the holiday season arrives the trade, both wholesale and retail, will have no stock to spare.

The demand at present is of the best, and shipments are going forward rapidly to various points throughout the Dominion; but in view of the strong position of Valencias the trade will make no mistake by securing as far as possible a liberal increase in their supplies for the winter.

TRADE IN COUNTRIES OTHER THAN OUR OWN.

FIGS IN LONDON.

FROM a wholesale and retail point of view the position of figs is almost as unfortunate as Valencias. The shipments to London will amount to about 12,000 to 13,000 skeleton cases, against an average of 17,000 to 20,000 cases. 11,000 have been already sold, leaving the market very bare and anxiously waiting the next arrival. November has generally been regarded as the fig month, and although the trade in October has been perhaps larger than usual, there still remains a considerable proportion of the business to be done. The difficulty of supplies will undoubtedly become acute at no very distant date, and the possible scarcity has had a considerable effect on the present market, which for nearly all kinds shows an advance of 2s. to 3s. per cwt.; the prices are now very high, and it is to be hoped are quite sufficient to regulate the consumption without any further enhancement. The quantity remaining in Smyrna is reported to be very small and very poor in quality, and beyond this, the time for packing and shipping is almost over.—The Produce Markets' Review.

LEMONS IN CALIFORNIA.

The Californian lemon season has commenced in earnest. The crop this year is estimated at about 1,800 cars, as against 1,600 last year and 2,700 the year before. Handlers here point out that the growers and packers of Californian lemons have still much to learn. One trouble is that the lemon trees get just as much irrigation as do the oranges—to the detriment of their keeping qualities. Moreover, the tops of the boxes are pressed down with a press worked by foot power. Oranges, with their more flexible skin, can stand this treatment all right, but the more brittle-skinned lemon breaks and bruises under this treatment, and, as a result, very few boxes of Californian lemons are ever opened which do not show bruised fruit on the top layer. The Sicilian packer, with his pliable strips bent over and nailed to either end of box, thus giving the top layer of fruit plenty of play, has a valuable idea of packing.—St. Paul Trade.

WALNUTS AND ALMONDS ON THE COAST.

Regarding walnuts and almonds The San Francisco Trade Journal has the following: "The outturn of walnuts in this State does not admit of full deliveries from first hands. It is stated that only a 75 per cent. delivery can be made. The market is higher, with supplies hard to get, as further advances are looked for at an early day. The rains did some damage. Almonds are in strong condition. Deliveries of both nuts are being made.

MACKEREL SITUATION EAST.

Private advices from Boston under date of November 7 say of salt mackerel: "Receipts of salt mackerel continue light, and prices firm. The steamer from Halifax which arrived at 1 o'clock to-day brought 400 bbls. salt mackerel, of which 215 bbls. are going to Gloucester. The schooner Edna Wallace Hopper arrived at Gloucester to-day from Cape Shore, having 40 bbls. large rimmed mackerel, which are not yet sold. There are about a dozen more vessels to come from there, the most of which have small catches. The weather has been unfavorable most of the time. Small fresh mackerel have arrived daily from Woods Hole, New Bedford, and Stonington where they are caught principally close in shore among the rocks with hook and line.

"The total catch for the season numbers 41,342 bbls., compared with 67,587 bbls. for the same period last year, 87,838 bbls. in 1900, 22,171 bbls. in 1899, 14,731 bbls. in 1898, and 10,705 bbls. in 1897. The imports of mackerel at Boston so far this season number 17,134 bbls., against 28,863 bbls. last year, 26,985 bbls. in 1900, 20,700 bbls. in 1899, 18,654 bbls. in 1898 and 15,810 bbls. in 1897.—New York Journal of Commerce.

SULTANA RAISINS IN ENGLAND.

Sultanas continue firm in price and in the fullest demand. If a little wider range in price could be established it would be desirable, but all indications point to the absolute deficiency of what may be called ordinary fruit. Every parcel which shows the smallest tendency in this direction is eagerly bought up at within a fraction of the value of the fruit intrinsically far superior. Under these circumstances, attention might profitably be directed to those lots which show so much better value at an almost inconsiderable difference of price. There is apparently a great fight to sell a 5d. Sultana at a rather meagre profit, when a good 6d. would provide much better remuneration for the grocer, and infinitely better value for the purchaser. The following figures regarding Sultanas are of much interest:

| | 1902. Tons. | 1901. Tons. |
| Total crop | 33,000 | 24,000 |
| Shipments to date to U. K. | 10,000 | 7,000 |

This year's shipment is an average one. That of last year was extremely short, and a rise of 20 per cent. took place subsequent to the corresponding date. The present stock in Asia Minor is about 6,000 tons. If the whole of this came to the United Kingdom it would only bring the total imports for the present year up to 16,000 tons, against an average of 19,000 tons.—Produce Markets' Review.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, November 10, 1902.

TRADE for the past week in the wholesale grocery line has been remarkably good, and all firms have been kept extremely busy. In fact, there has been more than the usual volume of autumn business doing. Especially good orders have been coming in from the various parts of the Province, and payments at the first of the month were well met. A general healthy tone prevails and the trade is looking for a continuation of the same. The retail trade has also been good, and weekly or monthly accounts have been promptly settled.

Flour is showing a firmer tendency and the same difficulty is being experienced in getting orders filled promptly at the mills. Beans are easier and are now quoted at $2. Oats are firmer, and 40 to 42c. is the general quotation. Potato cargoes are coming in very plentifully, but as the article is not so good a quality as the Nova-Scotian, the price of the latter is not affected and stands at 40 to 45c. It is reported that Prince Edward Island potatoes may be purchased at Charlottetown for 20c. Hay has hardly settled down to a regular quotation. Much will depend on the opening of good markets for export. The farmers are holding out for better prices than offered.

The market for fish in the West Indies is practically unchanged, and the same may be said of Brazil. Shipments are, however, going forward by every steamer, but the wholesalers claim that there is no profit in the business. Prices here, especially for cod, are very low, the market having been glutted by heavy arrivals of Newfoundland cod. The local market is well supplied with fresh cod, and a few mackerel occasionally. Fresh cod is bought by the wholesalers at 1½c.—the usual price being about 2c. Fresh halibut and other fish are also in plentiful supply.

Butter is not coming in so freely now and prices have an upward tendency. The same may be said of eggs. Case eggs are quoted at 19c. while fresh laid are retailing at 32 to 35c. Heavy beef is now coming in very freely, and there have been several auctions of carload lots. The quotation has fallen to 8c. on foot. Light beef is plentiful and has declined considerably. In fact, it is not wanted for the local trade. Fowls and turkeys are in good demand, but are no doubt being held back for the Christmas trade, when higher prices may be expected.

The reopening and enlargement of the pork-packing establishment in Charlottetown, P.E.I., has created a demand there which has cut off the import of hogs from Prince Edward Island, and though the price lately declined here it may be expected to run higher later in the season. Barreled pork, which has declined considerably, is now quoted at $22 to $22.50. Lard is very scarce and there is said to be very little in hands of dealers here.

Wholesalers report that all kinds of soaps are firm and are likely to remain so. The soap manufacturers of the Maritime Provinces import nearly all the raw material they use from foreign markets and these are in great demand and consequently high.

Since the apple crop of Nova Scotia has been all packed it is found that there is a very small quantity that is fit for export, unless as No. 2s, which would probably be unprofitable. There will be about one-third of the usual quantity for export. So far, to November 5, the shipments at this port only reach 25,788 barrels, as against 71,119 barrels last year. The ss. Carlisle City arrived yesterday and will take about 5,000 barrels. The ss. Evangeline, now on her way here from St. John, will take a large quantity, probably 10,000 barrels.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

TORONTO, November 14, 1902.

GROCERIES.

An active market continues for all lines of groceries, and the Christmas trade is now commencing to set in. The demand from all parts of the country is good, and particularly so from Eastern Ontario. A good many orders are also coming in from Western Ontario. Remittances are satisfactory, and the colder weather ought now to put more money in circulation amongst the farmers, as they from now on will be marketing their grain, and this will have the effect of increasing the demand for all classes of goods. Canned tomatoes remain as they were, high, with none offering, and the prices of corn and peas have advanced 2½ and 5c. respectively in consequence. The decline in sugars of 5c. last week as we were going to press remains in force, and the sugar market here is fairly brisk for the time of year, and the prices are steady. Cane raws are held firmly, and no change either way is expected for some time to come. In the coffee market there is reported a scarcity of Mexican coffees, but this will hardly affect the local market. New crop foreign nuts are expected to arrive here before the end of the month, and the prices this year for all kinds of nuts will be firm and high. In teas, Japans and Chinas remain scarce and at a high level of price, the lower grades of Young Hysons being now almost unobtainable.

CANNED GOODS.

The canned goods market is not very active. The scarcity of tomatoes is still a feature and none are offering, either from the canneries or the wholesale houses. The dearness of these has caused an appreciation of 2½ and 5c. respectively in the prices of corn and peas, for which there is a bigger demand than usual. Quotations now are, corn 95c. to $1.25 and peas 90c. up. Tomatoes are nominal at $1.75 up. In meats, fruits and fish there is little demand and the prices are unchanged.

COFFEES.

The local coffee market is quiet with a steady demand, but light for green Rios. Mexican coffee is scarce with none offering on the outside markets. Coffee abroad was weaker and declined under selling by tired holders. Quotations follow: Green Rio, No. 7, 7¼c.; No. 6, 8c.; No. 5, 8¼c.; No. 4, 9c.; No. 3, 10 to 12c. per lb.

NUTS.

There is as yet only a light demand for nuts, but the holiday trade will shortly set in and all lines then will be brisk. The first shipment of foreign nuts is expected to arrive about December 1. A letter received by a local house from Marseilles, France, states that the new walnut crop has been destroyed to a large extent by three successive hail storms, and will, as a result, be only one-third of last year's yield which was 8,000 to 10,000 bales for export. And this quantity available for export will be greatly reduced if the London and Paris demand for green walnuts, which averages about 200 bales daily, continues.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

Trade in rice and tapioca keeps up well, but the demand is mostly for small lots. The market in the south for rice continues firm and fairly active. We quote; B rice, 3½c.: Japan, 5½ to 6c.; sago, 3¾ to 4c., and tapioca, 3¼ to 3¾c. per lb.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The market for syrups and molasses continues active, with a good call for the brighter grades of syrups. There is a firm tone in the New Orleans market for new crop molasses.

SPICES.

A lull is being experienced this week in the local spice market. White pepper is firmer in sympathy with a stronger feeling on the outside market.

SUGAR.

The local sugar market continues steady with no large movement reported. The Canadian beet sugar refineries are now putting their product on the market. In New York, the prices of all lines of sugars declined on November 6 10c. per 100 lb. and this was followed two days later by a further drop of 10c. per 100 lb. on hard sugars by the independent refineries. This was soon met by The American Sugar Refinery Co., leaving refined on the United States sugar market for the week 20c. per 100 lb. lower for hards and 10c. for yellows. At the close, however, there is a stronger feeling in that market and indications of a recovery of at least 5c. per 100 lb.

Cable advices from London report a flat and lower market for beet sugar, the prices showing a decline of 3-4 to 1 1-2d. for the week. The quotations now are about 7s. 4 1-2d. per 100 lb. for 88° beet sugar f.o.b. Hamburg, for November and December delivery. The situation in cane sugars is strong, with offerings light, and tone and tendency in favor of sellers.

The total receipts at the four Atlantic ports for the week were 46,659 tons and meltings were nominal at 45,000 tons, leaving stocks practically unchanged. Last week it was stated by us that stocks in the United States and Cuba for the week were 17,000 tons less than for the previous week. The actual figures show an excess of 18,936 tons. The total stocks in Europe and America at latest uneven dates are 1,255,136 tons, against 467,191 tons at the same uneven date last year. The receipts of cane sugars at the United States four ports for the balance of the year will probably be light, and the indications apart from local disturbing influences are of growing strength. In view of the situation in the Republic it is unwise to predict the course of the market for the near future.

TEAS.

Indian pekoe souchongs are scarce and desirable lines are in demand at 5 1-2 to 6d. Medium flavoring teas from London are showing at slightly higher prices over last week, and the cup quality continues excellent. The higher classes of teas are bringing full prices and the late teas show good drawing quality. Fine Assams are rather easier, and also Ceylon greens of good appearance, of which few are offering. Indian greens are in good demand, but none are offering, and 7 1-2 to 9d. will be paid for attractive teas. Ceylon pekoe souchongs are in demand at 6 to 61-2d. for good drawing flavory teas. Good flavored Ceylon pekoes are worth 7 1-2 to 8 1-2d. Japan and China greens remain scarce and at a high level of price, the lower grades of Young Hysons being now almost unobtainable. A letter from Yokohama, bearing the date of October 17, states that teas of all grades there are now nearly exhausted and the few parcels are held for higher prices. A cable from London, Eng., this week reports the market there for Ceylon and Indian teas strong and rising. Mail advices from London report the market for Indian teas weaker through the list. Ceylon teas were also easier, the prices marking a distinct decline and fine teas were especially weak.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

CURRANTS.—The local demand for these is fair and the prices are unchanged. We quote: Fine Filiatras, 5½c. up; Patras, 6¼ to 6¾c. and Vostizzas, 7 to 8c. per lb.

VALENCIA RAISINS.—These are in good demand, but are scarce. The prices are unchanged. We quote: Fine off-stalk, 7¼ to 9c.; selected, 8½ to 9c. and selected layers, 9c. per lb.

SULTANA RAISINS.—Trade in Sultana raisins is moderate and the prices are firm. We quote 9 to 13c. per lb.

DATES.—New fruit continues to arrive daily. The holiday trade has not yet set in. We quote: Fard dates, 7½ to 8c. and Sairs, 4½c. per lb.

PRUNES.—A good local market for prunes is reported. Coast advices report a firm market on the large sizes in both the Californian and Oregon offerings. We quote as follows: Californian prunes, 100-110s, 4c.; 90-100s, 5 to 5½c.; 80-90s, 6 to 6½c.; 70-80s, 6½ to 7c.; 60-70s, 7 to 7½c.; 50-60s, 8 to 8½c.; 40-50s, 8¾ to 10c. per lb.

FIGS.—There has been a good trade doing in figs and the prices are firm and stocks light. We quote: Elemes, 7-crown, 15c.; 3-crown, 12c. and Star, 11c. per lb. Naturals, 8 to 9c. per lb.

CALIFORNIAN EVAPORATED FRUITS.—A fair number of orders keep coming forward for peaches and apricots. We quote: Peaches, 9 to 11c. and apricots, 9 to 13c. per lb.

CALIFORNIAN SEEDED RAISINS.—These raisins have been coming in slowly, causing inconvenience to dealers on this side. This difficulty is due to the scarcity of cars which is hampering the packers in getting the goods from the packing houses. The local market is steady. We quote: Californian seeded raisins, 3-crown, 7½ to 8c.; 4-crown, 8 to 8½c. per lb.

GREEN FRUITS.

There has been a fairly steady demand through the list for all kinds of green fruits and the prices are about the same as last week. There are lots of inferior apples on the market. We quote: Pears, per basket, 15 to 40c., and apples. 10 to 25c. per basket and $1 to $2 per barrel; crabapples, 25c. per basket; lemons, $4.25 to $7 per box; onions, ordinary, 60c.; Spanish, 90c. per case; peppers, green, 15 to 30c. per basket; ripe, 60 to 75c.; oranges, Jamaica, $2.25 to $2.75 per box and $5 per barrel; Jersey sweet potatoes, $2.50 per barrel; cocoanuts, $3.50 per sack; quinces, 20 to 35c. per basket; Cape Cod cranberries, $9 to $9.50 per barrel; Nova-Scotian cranberries, $8; bananas, $1.25 to $1.75 per bunch; grape fruit, $4.50 per box.

VEGETABLES.

There is not much doing in the vegetable line this week and prices are about the same as last week. Quotations are: Lettuce, 30 to 40c. per dozen; radishes, 20 to 25c. per dozen; mint and parsley, 20 to 25c.; cauliflower, 50c. to $1 per dozen; cabbage, 30 to 50c. per dozen and $1.00 per barrel; pickling cabbage, 25 to 50c. per doz.; carrots, 40 to 50c. per bag; beets, 40 to 50c. per bag; potatoes, $1 to $1.20 per bag; celery, 50 to 75c. per dozen; corn, 8 to 15c. per doz.; squashes, $1 to $1.50 per doz; pickling onions, 35 to 50c. per basket, pumpkins, 50c. per doz.; citrons, 40 to 50c. per doz.; artichokes, 50c. per bushel; spinach, 40c.; parsnips, 40 to 50c. per bag; vegetable marrow, 30 to 50c. per doz.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EGGS.—There are now only light receipts of fresh eggs, and the trade is mostly in cold storage and pickled stock. We quote: Strictly new laid, 20c.; cold storage, 17 to 18c.; pickled, 16 to 17c.; seconds, 13 to 14c.

BEANS.—These continue scarce and high. We quote $2 to $2.25 per bushel.

DRIED AND EVAPORATED APPLES.—A few evaporated apples are offering at 6 to 6½c. No dried apples yet are on the market.

HONEY.—A fair amount of business keeps doing in honey. Quotations are: Extracted, 8 to 8½c. for large quantities and 9 to 9½c. per lb. in small lots. Combs, $1.50 to $1.75.

POTATOES.—The offerings of potatoes have been larger this week, quite a number of carloads coming from Eastern Ontario and Quebec. The price is 75c. per bag on track.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

BUTTER.—Quite a quantity of butter, in large rolls and tubs, keeps coming forward and is meeting with a good demand. A number of creameries are closing for the season. We quote as follows: Finest 1-lb. prints, 17 to 18c.; choice large rolls and tubs, 15½ to 16½c.; secondary grades, tubs and rolls, 13½ to 14½c.; bakers', 12 to 13c.; creamery prints, 20 to 21c.; creamery solids, 19 to 19½c. per lb.

CHEESE.—This market remains firm and high and an active inquiry still keeps up from the Old Country. The stocks over there are lighter than usual while the demand keeps up well owing, probably, to the high prices of meat and other articles of food. Stocks on this side of the Atlantic are supposed not to be as large as they were this time last year, but definite information is not obtainable. We quote 12 to 12½c. per lb.

POULTRY AND GAME.

POULTRY.—All kinds of poultry are now in good demand and exporters have commenced shipping the produce to the Old Country. For dressed fowl the quotations are as follows: Turkeys, 10c.; geese, 6c.; ducks, 7c. to 9c.; young chickens, 8 to 10c.; old, 6 to 7c. per lb. For live poultry the prices offered are as follows: Turkeys, 8c.; geese, 5c.; ducks, 7c.; chickens, young, 7 to 8c. and old, 6c. per lb.

GAME.—The colder weather has resulted in an increase in the receipts of game, but the demand continues light. Quotations follow: Teal, 20c. per pair; pin tails, 30 to 35c.; black ducks, 70 to 75c.; butterballs, 30 to 35c.; red heads, 60 to 65c. and blue bills, 20 to 30c.

FISH.

There is a fair demand for all kinds of fish. Oysters are active and firm. Frozen fish are now coming forward in increasing quantities. We quote: Frozen fish, trout, 7½ to 8c.; whitefish, 7½ to 8c. Fresh fish—Lake Erie herring, 4 to 5c.; perch, 4 to 5c.; pike, 6c.; British Columbian salmon, 15 to 20c.; mackerel, 15 to 20c.; halibut, 15c.; blue pike, 4c.; live lobsters, 25c. per lb.; oysters, $1.25 to $1.35 per wine gallon; selects, $1.50 to $1.60; smoked ciscoes, $1.25 per basket; Digby herring, 50c. per bundle of six baskets; finnan haddies, 7½ to 8c. per lb. in 15-lb. boxes; codfish, $4.50 for 25-lb. boxes and $1.80 for 2 doz. box; quail on toast, 5½c. in boxes; boneless cod, 4½c. per lb.; ciscoes, $1.25 per basket; kippered herring, $4 per case of 4 doz. tins; Labrador herring, in half-barrels, $3 and lake herring, $4; salt sea salmon, $7.50 to $8 per 100-lb. bbl.; salt sea mackerel, $2 per kit (20-lb. pail.)

GRAIN, FLOUR AND BREAKFAST FOODS.

GRAIN.—There is still not much grain being marketed and the prices are well maintained. On the St. Lawrence Market the prices are as follows: Red and white wheat, 70 to 71c.; goose wheat, 64 to 65c.; barley, 45 to 49c.; oats, 36 to 37c.; rye, 57½c. and buckwheat, 50 to 52c.; at outside stations, 67 to 68c. will be paid for red and white Ontario wheat, and 65c. for goose wheat.

FLOUR.—There is a good demand for all kinds of flour, but lower prices are looked for shortly. We quote: Ontario patents, in bags, $3.35 to $3.65; Hungarian patents, $4 to $4.10; Manitoba bakers', $3.75 to $3.90; straight roller, $3.40 to $3.50 per barrel.

BREAKFAST FOODS.—There is an active demand for oatmeal and the prices have been advanced 25c. per bag. We quote: Oatmeal, standard and granulated, in carlots on track here, $4.45; standard rolled oats in carlots on track here, $4.25 per barrel; in wood, 15c. extra; broken lots are 25c. per bbl. extra; rolled wheat, $2.25 in 100-lb. bbl.; cornmeal, $4; split peas, $4.75; pot barley, $4.25 in 196-lb. bbls., or $4.10 in bags.

HIDES, SKINS AND WOOL.

HIDES.—The demand for hides is still moderate and the prices are unchanged. Quotations are as follows: No. 1 green, 8c.; No. 2 green, 7c.; No. 1 green, steers, 8½c.; No. 2 green, steers, 7½c.; cured, 8½ to 9c. per lb.

SKINS.—The demand is principally for calfskins. Our quotations are as follows: Veal skins, 6 to 14 lb. inclusive, No. 1, 10c.; No. 2, 8c.; do, 15 to 20 lb. inclusive, No. 1, 9c.; No. 2, 7c.; deacons (dairies), 60 to 70c. each; shearlings and lambskins, 60c.

WOOL.—There is little doing in the wool market. The quotations are steady at 13½c. for fleece and 7½c. for unwashed wool.

TALLOW.—Prices of tallow are weak at 6¼ to 7c. per lb.

SEEDS.

Local competition is forcing up the prices of alsike rather higher than the export market would warrant, so that the market here is rather nervous. The present quotations are $7 to $7.60 per 100 lb. for prime to choice seed. The prices for red clover are $6.25 to $6.60 per bushel outside, and timothy is quoted at $1.50 to $1.75.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, November 13, 1902.

GROCERIES.

THE demand for groceries this week has been very satisfactory and an active trade has transpired in practically all lines. In fact, some lines are in such active demand that jobbers have difficulty in obtaining supplies fast enough. Among the features of the week the decline in sugar of all grades has been prominent. The market for dried fruits is characterized by a pronounced scarcity in some lines, particularly raisins, which gives ground for the belief that prices will rule high for the year.

SUGAR

On Thursday last a decline of 5c. all round took place in the market for refined sugar. This was the result of a drop on the New York market of 10c. per 100lb., which was caused by a weakening in raw sugar. The present quotations for Montreal refined sugar are $3.75 for No. 1 granulated; $3.55 for No. 2 granulated and $3.10 to $3.60 for yellows. There is a good demand and an active market under the lower prices.

TEAS.

A feature of the market this week is the heavy demand for Ceylon blacks and green teas, a few parcels of which have been sold during the past few days at fairly good prices. The Ceylon green tea market went up about three farthings a week ago, and Ceylon low-grade blacks are up about ½c. since last week. There is still an active inquiry for Japans, but the market is exceedingly bare. The few that arrive via Suez and New York are eagerly looked forward to, especially any teas about 16 to 17c. A few Japans at 21 to 22c. are about the only kind that are in any fair supply at all here. One importer here has been advised by a Japan firm that teas quoted to their New York office at 23 yen in August last were now being quoted at 27 yen a picul. All teas for price were of very light, chaffy leaf, and low-priced hard leaf teas recently bought were no longer procurable, except in small quantities at an advance of 1½c. per lb. There has been some inquiry from United States buyers for low-grade China blacks, and Canadian holders here sold a quantity to that market, including some cheap congous and oolongs.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Business in syrups is still of rather small volume, owing to the continued low figure at which molasses is quoted. The latter, however, is expected to go higher before long. At present there is a better feeling in the market for Barbados molasses, and the price for small lots is firm at 24c. The demand is slowly improving. Corn syrups are quoted as follows: In bbls., 3c.; in half bbls., 3¼c.; in ¼ bbls., 3⅜c.; in 38½-lb. pails, at $1.40 and 25-lb. pails, $1.10. Barbados molasses sells at 23 to 24c.; New Orleans, 16½ to 17c.; Antigua, 24c.; Porto Rico, 38c. per lb.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

The demand for the above articles is steady, but the market is not active. There are no quotable changes to report this week. Our quotations are as follows: B rice, in bags, $3.02½; in ½ bags, $3.07½; in ¼ bags, $3.12½; in pockets, $3.17½. In 10-bag lots an allowance of 10c. is made. CC rice, $2.92½ in bags; $2.97½ in ½ bags; $3.02½ in ¼ bags and $3.07½ in pockets. In the open territory prices are about 10c. less. Patna rice is worth 4 to 5c. per lb. and tapioca, 3½c.

SPICES.

There has been no important change in the market for spices. The feeling all round is firm, though no actual change in prices is reported on this market. We quote as follows: Nutmegs, 35 to 55c. per lb., as to size; penang mace, 45 to 50c. per lb., as to quality; pimento, ground, 12½ to 15c.; cloves, 15 to 25c.; pepper, ground, black, 17 to 22c., according to grade; white, 25 to 27c.; ginger, whole Cochin, 15 to 17c.; Japan, 13 to 14c.; Jamaica, 16 to 20c.; Afghan, 12 to 13c.; ground, Japan, 15c.; Cochin, 16 to 17c.; Jamaica, 20 to 22c.; and Afghan, 13 to 14c.

CANNED GOODS.

The movement in tomatoes was decidedly slow at the price of $1.75 to which jobbers advanced them, and in consequence some wholesalers are now quoting $1.50 again. There is still but a light movement in tomatoes, although the price is very firm, and no reduction is thought of. The demand for corn and peas is unusually good, due in a great measure to the high price of tomatoes. A new feature, and a very interesting one on this market is the tomato situation, is the reported importation of some round lots from Baltimore, one lot market is the reported importation of some round lots from Baltimore, one lot of 3,000 cases selling at $1.50 per dozen. In other lines of canned goods there is nothing new to report this week. Our quotations are now: Tomatoes, $1.50; corn, 82½ to 85c.; peas, 82½c. to $1.20; string beans, 82½c. to 85c.; strawberries, $1.45 to $1.60; blueberries, $1.25; raspberries, $1.45 to $1.60; gooseberries, $1.45 to $1.60; pears, 2's, $1.60 to $1.70; 3's, $2.10 to $2.15; peaches, 2's, $1.65 to $1.70; 3's, $2.50 to $2.75; 3-lb. apples, 85 to 90c.; gallon apples, $2.10 to $2.20; 2-lb. sliced pineapples, $2.20 to $2.30; grated pineapples, $2.50; pumpkins, $1 per doz.; spinach, $1.50; sugar beets, 95c. to $1.00; salmon, pink, 92 to 95c.; spring, $1.25; Rivers Inlet red sockeye, $1.30; Fraser River red sockeye, $1.40.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

CURRANTS.—Recent cables from Patras have been firm in tone and the primary market shows a higher tendency. It is now from ¼ to ½c. higher, and further advances may be expected. Locally, there is a good trade doing, and our quotations are as follows: Fine Filiatras, 5⅛ to 5½c. in cases; cleaned, 5⅝ to 5¾c.; in 1-lb. cartons, 6½ to 7c.; finest Vostizzas, 6½ to 7c.

SULTANA RAISINS.—There has been no change in these locally. Sultanas are now from 1½ to 2c. higher than the opening price. We quote 9½c. per lb. The primary market has advanced 5s. within the last fortnight, and the feeling is firm.

VALENCIA RAISINS.—The primary market has continued to advance, and as stocks are very light in importers' hands for this time of the year, prices, locally, are stiffening. We quote: Finest off-stalk, 7½ to 8c.; selected, 8 to 8½c.; layers, 8½ to 9c., according to brands.

CANDIED PEELS.—There is no change this week. Citron peel sells at 15c.; orange, 11½c. and lemon, 10½c. per lb.

MALAGA RAISINS.—There is a good demand for new Malaga raisins, and an active market prevails. Our quotations are as follows: London layers, $1.50 to $1.60; "Connoisseur Clusters," $2.10 to $2.20; ¼'s, 65 to 70c.; "Royal Buckingham Clusters," $3.15 to $3.25; ¼'s, $1; "Excelsior Windsor Clusters," $4.50 to $4.60; ¼'s, $1.30 to $1.40.

FIGS.—There has been a good demand for figs of the new crop, and some importers are reported to be sold out. We quote: Eleme figs at 10½ to 20c. per lb., according to the size of the fig, and Comadres at $1.20 per tapnet.

DATES.—There is nothing new to report. Hallowees, for delivery during the end of this month, are quoted at 4c.

CALIFORNIAN RAISINS.—The market is firm under an active inquiry. Three-crown muscatels sell at 7½c. per lb.

PRUNES.—The market is steady and prices are unchanged. Quotations are as follows: 8½c. for 40-50s; 8c. for 50-60s; 7¾c. for 60-70s; 7½c. for 70-80s; 6¾c. for 80-90s; 6½c. for 90-100s. Italian prunes are offered at the following prices: 40-50s, 7½c. to 7¾c.; 50-60s, 7 to 7½c.; 70-80s, 5½ to 5¾c.; 90-100s, 4½ to 4¾c. per lb.

NUTS.

The market continues firm on all lines, although no change has been made in prices during the week, and we now quote as follows: Walnuts, 11c.; Tarragona almonds, 12 to 13c.; shelled walnuts, 24 to 26c.; shelled almonds, 29 to 30c.; filberts, 9½c.; Pecans, 15c.; Brazil nuts, 14 to 15c. per lb.

GREEN FRUITS.

Business during the week has been fairly good, notwithstanding a sudden change in the weather, and all lines in season are moving well. Canadian grapes and Delawares have gone out of the market. Chestnuts have become plentiful and are quoted from 1 to 2c. lower. Pineapples are $1 per crate cheaper. Our quotations are as follows: Jamaica oranges, in bbls., $5 to $5.50 and in boxes, $3; Messina lemons, $4 per box; cocoanuts, $3.50 per bag of 100; bananas, No. 1, $1 to $1.50 and 8-hands, $1; Canadian cabbage, 25 to 40c. per dozen; potatoes, $1.15 to $1.30 per barrel; plums, $1.50; pears, $3.25 and limes, $1.50 per box; Canadian apples, in barrels, $1.50 to $3 and in baskets, 20c. to 30c.; egg plant, 50c. per basket; Canadian pears, 40c. per basket; Spanish onions, 55c. per crate and $2.10 per case; sweet potatoes, $2.75 to $3 per bbl., and Malaga grapes, $5.50 to $7 per keg; cranberries, $8.50 to $10 per bbl.; red onions, $2.25 per bbl.; chestnuts, 9 to 10c. per lb.; Boston lettuce, $1.15 per doz.; wax beans, $2.50 per basket; green beans, $2.50 per basket, and cucumbers, $2.25 per doz.; pineapples, 24s, $4 to $4.50 per crate; Tokay grapes, $3.25 per box; grape fruit, $6 per box; new dates, 4½c. per lb.; figs, 10 to 15c. per lb.

FISH.

Arrivals of fish have been heavy this week and the market at present is well supplied in all seasonable lines. Haddock is cheaper by about 1c. per lb. and dried codfish are quoted lower. Labrador salmon is now entirely out of the market. We quote: Haddies, 6 to 7c.; smoked herring, 9c. per box; fresh haddock and cod, 3½c. per lb.; dore, 7 to 7½c.; pike, 6c.; halibut, 12c.; salmon, 15c.; No. 1 herring, Nova-Scotian, $5.50 per bbl and $3 per half-bbl.; No. 1 Holland herring, $6.50 per half-bbl.; No. 1 Scotch herring, $6.50 per half barrel and 95c. per keg; Holland herring, 70 to 80c. per keg; No. 1 green codfish, $5.50 to $5.75 and mackerel, $20 per barrel; boneless cod, 1 and 2-lb. blocks, 6c. per lb.; loose boneless cod, 5c. per lb. in 40-lb. boxes; dried codfish, $4 to $4.50 per 100-lb. bundle; British-Columbian salmon, $12.00 per barrel; standard bulk oysters, $1.40 per gallon; Marshall's kippered herring, $1.45 per dozen; Canadian kippered, $1.00 per dozen; Canadian ¼ sardines, $4 per 100; canned Cove oysters, No. 1 size, $1.30 per doz.; canned Cove oysters, No. 2 size, $2.20 per doz.; Malpeque shell oysters, $6 to $8 per barrel.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

BUTTER.—There has been a decidedly firm butter market this week and there is every likelihood of it continuing in this condition. Without a doubt this year has been a record-breaker for buttermen. In the opinion of one of Montreal's leading exporters, the climax has been reached, and while prospects for the future are bright, a further advance can hardly be expected. Prices are ½ to ¾c. per lb. higher. There is a scarcity of finest. Both exporters and domestic buyers are eager to obtain this class of butter. There is a good supply of other kinds. Finest creamery is selling for 21¼ to 21½c., while finest Quebec is quoted at 20¾ to 20½c. Western creamery sells at 19 to 20½c. and western dairy at 14½ to 17c. per lb.

For the week ending November 8 shipments from the port of Montreal amounted to 20,814 packages, or 9,971 packages more than for the corresponding period last year. Shipments from May 1 amount to 493,825 packages, or 106,283 packages more than for the same time last year.

CHEESE.—Remarkably good is the condition of business in cheese, the market still showing exceptional strength. An advance of from ½ to ¾c. has taken place since our last report. Quebecs are selling at 11¾ to 12c. and Ontarios from 12 to 12¼c. The season is rapidly drawing to a close, and stocks, it is said, are none too heavy. These two factors, in a large measure, account for the strong market, and it seems that purchasers in Great Britain are displaying a keener desire than usual to obtain cheese at the ruling prices. A keen competition exists between exporters in this city.

Shipments from this port for the week ending November 8 amounted to 106,372 boxes, or 46,270 boxes more than for the corresponding week last year. Since May 1 we have shipped from Montreal 2,011,832 boxes, being 340,525 boxes more than for the same period last year.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EGGS.—A slight upward tendency can be reported this week. Straight receipts have advanced ½c. per dozen. There is a fairly active demand for this class at 18½ to 19c. The price of July and August cold storage is 17½c.; pickled, 17½c. and straight candled, 20c. per dozen.

BEANS.—Trade is rather quiet and in all probability top prices have now been reached. We quote: $2.10 to $2.15 for primes and in carlots, $2.

HONEY.—Trade in honey still remains slow and prices are as before. We quote: White clover in comb, 11 to 11½c. and white strained, 8½c.

POTATOES.—While there has been no change in the price of potatoes, a firm feeling is still maintained. Sales have been made here at 65c. per 90 lb., while a choice car of Early Rose went for 70c.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.—Trade is reported to be in a fairly satisfactory condition, although there is not a great deal doing. Prices are unchanged. We quote: Syrup, in large tins, 70 to 80c.; in small tins, 50 to 60c.; in wood, 5 to 5½c. per lb. Sugar, 8½ to 10c. per lb.

ASHES.—Business is very quiet and prices are unchanged. We quote: Firsts, $4.35 to $4.40; seconds, $3.60; pearls, $6.25 per 100 lb.

POULTRY.—The mild weather has in a large measure interfered with the poultry trade. Now that the cold weather has set in higher prices are anticipated. Both turkeys and chickens are selling for 12 to 12½c. per lb.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

FLOUR.—Though no actual change in the prices has occurred, the tone of the flour market has become stronger and the feeling at present is very firm. Spring wheat flours are in excellent demand, and a good business both on local and country account is being done. We quote as follows: Choice Manitoba spring wheat patents, $4.10; seconds, $3.80; strong bakers', $3.40; straight rollers, $3.50 to $3.60; winter wheat patents, $3.75 to $4.

GRAIN.—Several lines have weakened during the week and lower prices are quoted on some. In peas there has been a further advance and the present price is firm on account of the light offerings. Corn is from 1 to 2c. lower and buckwheat is about 1½c. lower. Oats have not changed in price. Trade is somewhat quiet in that line. We quote: Rye, 56c.; peas, 80c.; corn, 70c.; buckwheat, 57c. to 57½c.; barley, 49c.; oats, 36 to 36½c. ex-store.

OATMEAL.—Trade continues fairly good and the prices are steady and unchanged. Rolled oats, in barrels, are quoted at $4.50, and in bags at $2.25 in jobbing lots. In large quantities the price is $4.15 per barrel and $2 per bag.

FEED.—There is a good demand for all lines of feed and the prices are firm. Ontario grades are higher but Manitobas show no change. We quote: Manitoba bran, $16 to $17; shorts, $18 to $19; Ontario bran, $16; shorts, $18 to $19; mouillie, $23 to $30, according to the quality.

BALED HAY.—The tone of the market is a little firmer this week. There is an active trade doing at the following prices: No. 1 timothy, $9 to $9.50; No. 2, $8 to $8.75; clover, $7 to $7.50 per ton in carlots.

MONTREAL NOTES.

Valencia raisins have advanced.

Sugar has declined 5c. per 100 lb.

Canned tomatoes have been imported from Baltimore, and are selling at $1.50.

Last week 106,372 boxes of cheese were shipped from Montreal and 20,814 packages of butter. For the corresponding week last year reports show that 60,102 boxes of cheese and 10,843 packages of butter were shipped, so that the week ending November 8 makes a much better showing than the same week last year.

"Maple Leaf" granulated sugar, the product of The Ontario Sugar Co., of Berlin, Ont., is quoted by The Eby, Blain Co., Limited, who report already quite a large sale of this sugar.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, N.B., November 9, 1902.

DURING the past week business has been good. Holiday shipments are in full swing. The wholesale grocery business was, perhaps, never on a better basis than at present. While some merchants still cut some lines, there is a better average profit than at least for some years. There is also the great advantage of selling goods on shorter terms as well as the great advantage of definite term with long open accounts, which in past years have been the cause of so many heavy losses. The markets continue very largely in sellers' favor. In the local market, while sugar is a little lower, foreign sugars are higher and the general tone is strong. Hops have shown a large advance and are held firm. Cream of tartar is a little easier.

OILS.—In burning oils the market is firm at the advance, and the quantity moving is very large. Lubricating oils continue to have a large sale for the season. Paint oils are in light demand, but linseeds hold at full prices, though turpentine is rather lower. Cod oil is in rather light supply this season.

SALT.—In Liverpool coarse salt the stock held is quite large, and the prices are unchanged. Regular receipts by the winter-port boats will soon be to hand. Buyers can save money by arranging to have supplies shipped direct from steamer's side. Handling adds very quickly to the price of goods of this kind. Prices are likely to rule firm. In fine salt the market is unchanged, and we now quote: Liverpool coarse, 55c. to 60c.; English factory-filled, 95c. to $1.00; Canadian fine, $1 per bag; cheese and butter salt, bulk, $2.40 per bbl.; 5-lb. bags, $2.75 to $2.85 per bbl.; 10-lb. bags, $2.60 to $2.65 per bbl.; 20-lb. wood boxes, 22-23c. each; 10-lb. wood boxes, 14c. each; cartons, $2 per case of two dozen; English bottled salt, $1.25 to $1.30 per doz.; mineral rock salt, 60c. per 100 lb. (Selected lumps.)

CANNED GOODS.—Tomatoes continue to be of particular interest. Stocks will be very light and the high prices are here to stay. Corn and peas are firm. In fruits, quite large stocks of gallon apples are held, local packed. The sale for No. 3 apples is very small. Peaches are a fair stock. Strawberries are firm and blueberries are scarce. Salmon is unchanged. The local demand for meats is light, but some orders for spring are being placed. Domestic fish, such as sardines, herring and haddies are being sold low, though stocks are not particularly large.

GREEN FRUITS.—Apples are rather dull. Nova-Scotian stock is coming to hand freely, though the crop there is short. Very few Bishop pippins are offered. This is one of our best early winter apples. Quite a few Spies and other hard fruit are being received from Ontario. Oranges have a rather light demand and the prices are quite low. Lemons have been scarce. Full prices are asked. In grapes, some good Ontario stock is still offered. Malaga grapes have a better sale. There is a fair demand for quinces. A few peas are offered. Cranberries show a wide range as between native and imported. There is a light business in sweet potatoes. In bananas, a retail trade only.

DRIED FRUITS.—This is a very active line. New Californian prunes and raisins have been received, but only light receipts except prunes. Seeded raisins are very scarce and bring extra price. Loose muscatels have been advanced on the Coast. Though seeded are not quoted higher you cannot get choice confirmed at old prices. New peels, citron, orange and lemon, were largely received last week, but the market is lightly stocked. Figs are selling freely. Dates are to hand and the stock is fine, and the price for first goods is rather higher than will rule later. Currants, new-cleaned, have been freely received. The market is rather firmer; the sale is large. Evaporated apples are unchanged. Onions are rather lower. In peanuts, the new goods quoted are rather easier than the old prices.

DAIRY PRODUCE.—Good butter is scarce and full figures rule. There is a fair stock of medium grade. Eggs are in better demand and rather better prices rule. Care needs to be taken in regard to quality. Cheese is very firm and the stock is not large.

SUGAR.—Local prices are off 5 cents, though the market is reported strong, foreign sugars being higher. Sales are large, particularly for granulated.

MOLASSES.—Some small cargoes of Porto Rico continue to arrive, but the stock here is not large, and there is a steady sale. Rather higher prices rule. Barbados is getting well cleaned up.

FISH.—There is quite a little interest in smoked herring. Prices continue to advance. The stock here is very light and very few to come forward. In dry fish prices are unchanged. There are fair stocks held. Pickled herring hold steady at quite full figures. The sales are quite large. Finnan haddies are a large business. Prices are unchanged. A few spring shad are offered. Alewives are very dull. We quote: Haddies, 4 to 5c.; smoked herring, 9 to 9½c.; fresh haddock and cod, 2 to 2½c.; boneless fish, 4 to 5c.; pollock, $1.65 to $1.70 per 100 lb.; pickled herring, $2 to $2.25 per half barrel; dry cod, $3.50 to $3.65; pickled shad, per half barrel, $6.

FLOUR, FEED AND MEAL.—In flour, both Manitoba and Ontario grades hold firm. Oats and oatmeal are higher and tend upward. Cornmeal is rather lower. Feed is higher and not so freely offered. Beans are easier. Business is light. Barley has a limited sale. Peas are still scarce and high. We quote: Manitoba flour, $4.60 to $4.70; best Ontario, $4.20 to $4.25; medium, $3.95 to $4.10; oatmeal, $4.10 to $4.50; cornmeal, $3.10 to $3.15; middlings, in small lots, $26 to $28; oats, new, 40 to 44c.; handpicked beans, $2.25 tp $2.30; prime, $2.05 to $2.75; yellow eye beans, $2.80 to $3; split peas, $5.15 to $5.25; barley, $4.25 to $4.40; hay, new, $9 to $10.

It is not good policy to offer substitutes for Royal Baking Powder, nor to sell the cheap alum powders under any circumstances.

The consumer whose trade is most valuable wants the best and purest goods, and in baking powder this is the "Royal." If he does not find the Royal at your store he will go elsewhere for it, and in so doing there is a liability that he will carry all his orders with him.

OTTAWA TRADE GOSSIP.

November, 11, 1902.

BUSINESS this week among retailers has been rather quiet. Your correspondent was around among retail stores in all parts of the city to-day and nearly all merchants who were seen reported business dull. Wholesalers and manufacturers are pretty busy filling orders and getting ready for the Christmas trade. Orders for Christmas confectionery are being solicited this week.

Not many changes in prices have taken place since last week, except a drop in sugar of 5c. per 100 lb.; granulated is now $3.82.

Tomatoes, if anything, are firmer, the jobbing price looking as if it is going to be $1.75 per dozen. Those who have to buy will certainly have to pay high prices, unless they can buy from retailers, who seem to be the best off in the whole situation. In speaking with a number of retailers most of them have received their full order for canned goods when it had been placed with a wholesale house, but those who bought direct from the factory had to take a percentage.

White beans are firm at $2.20 to $2.25 per bushel.

Hams and bacon are selling slow and prices are easier than a month ago. We quote: Hams, 10 to 12c.; pounds, 12 to 13c.; choice breakfast bacon, 14c.; Windsor bacon, 14c.; rolls, 11 to 12c. Pure leaf lard, in tubs, 11c.; kettle rendered, 12c. per lb.

Butter is a little more plentiful since the first of the month, but not enough to affect the price. Creamery is selling at 23c. in prints; choice dairy, 18½ to 20c. Eggs are firm at 18c. Potatoes are very scarce this week at 70 to 75c. per bag. Around this section potatoes are said to be more plentiful than anywhere in Ontario, but they are being shipped to outside points, which is affecting the city market. In flour, patent is selling at $4.10 and strong bakers at $3.80.

In green fruit at the Ottawa Fruit Exchange the receipts of apples have been very large, but despite that fact prices have been very good. Yesterday's sale was a large one and prices ruled as follows: No. 1 Spies, $3.25 to $3.50; No. 2, Spies, $2 to $2.25; No. 1 Greenings, $2.65 to $2.75; No. 2 Greenings, $1.85 to $2.05; No. 1 Baldwin, $3 to $3.25; No. 2 Baldwin, $2 to $2.25; No. 1 Snows, $3.25 to $3.50; No. 2 Snows, $2 to $2.25; No 1 Mackintosh, red, $3.25 to $3.50; No. 1 Russet, $3.10; No. 2, $2 to $2.20; No. 1 Cranberry Pippin, $2.65 to $2.75; No. 2 Cranberry Pippin, $2; No. 1 Canada Red, $3; No. 2 Canada Red, $2.25; No. 1 Ben Davis, $3; No. 2 Ben Davis, $2.25; No. 1 Golden Sweet, $2.50; No. 1 Bell Flower, $2.75; No. 2 Bell Flower, $2.10; No. 1 Phoenix, $2.75 to $2.95; No. 2 Phoenix, $2.30; No. 1 Baxter, $2.10; No. 1 Scarlet Pippins in large sugar barrels, $3.25 to $3.50.; Jamaica oranges, in bbls., $3.50 to $4; ditto in boxes, 176s and 200s, $1.80 to $2.25; sweet potatoes, $2.75 to $3; Malaga grapes, $4 to $4.25; cranberries, Cape Cod, $9 to $9.75. Cranberries are scarce and likely to be higher.

Hallowee dates, 5½c.; layer dates, 4 to 5c.; Persian dates, in pkts., 5½c.; red and white onions, in bbls., $1.25 to $1.50; Spanish onions, 42½ to 50c. per crate.

The last lot of grapes that are expected this season, some 1,500 baskets, sold according to variety from 15 to 20c. per basket.

In future at the Exchange there will only be three sales a week, Monday, Wednesday and Friday, as it gives the company a chance to handle the large quantity of apples, and now that the small fruits are over it is unnecessary for holding a sale every day.

G. W. Hunt expects to store some 25,000 barrels of apples this year in his new building.

NOTES

Ald. Cunningham, a prominent grocer, of Rideau street, has made application for membership in the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association.

A. Huckles & Co., of this city, are manufacturing a jelly powder which is making a mark here. They also have for the Christmas trade a nice lot of fruit syrups in bottles of all sizes.

Wholesalers find great difficulty this year in receiving their goods, owing, it is said, to the scarcity of cars, which causes the delivery to be slow in many instances. It goes to show, however, that trade must be growing to an enormous extent in Canada.

In connection with the canned goods situation it is reported that a certain jobbing house in this city, which placed an order for a large lot of tomatoes with a Montreal firm at a figure showing a profit above factory prices, is entering suit owing to its non-delivery. for the value of the order now. It will be interesting to hear the result, which won't be known until January.

The Retail Grocers' Association held their regular meeting last night. The president, Mr. Prevost, who had promised a paper some time ago on "Partnership in Business," brought up the question for discussion. His ideas were in favor of a partnership, but as he had not completed the paper, he will have it ready for the next meeting. A great deal was discussed for and against partnership, which was very interesting for those present. Several accounts were passed and the president and secretary were appointed to canvass a few prominent grocers who have not joined the association, to get them on the roll before the next meeting.

It was decided to hold a progressive euchre party in Booth's Hall before the end of the month. The executive committee were instructed to make all arrangements.

The question of buying winter apples was discussed and the ideas of several members were brought out which was a benefit to others not so well posted.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, November 9, 1902.

BUSINESS continues good and the fourth of November saw a larger percentage of paper covered than is usual on that date, which is always a heavy one in Western banks. There is some complaint among jobbers that country retail merchants have been speculating in land and asking more time on this account, but this does not apply to any considerable portion, and business is on the whole very satisfactory. After the very fine warm weather which continued up to Monday morning, the 3rd instant, there has come a change to sharp cold with light snow. This has proved a great stimulus to the sale of clothing and footwear, and incidentally, also, it increases the sales of groceries, as farmers coming in for one line of supplies are pretty sure to buy all they need. If the present frost continues it will very speedily put an end to fall plowing, and that will increase the wheat hauling.

Considerable interest is being taken in a notice received from the Government at Ottawa calling attention to the fact that there is a penalty of $100 attached to the selling or offering for sale as "vinegar," a more or less colored liquid consisting essentially of impure diluted acetic acid obtained by the oxidation of wine, beer, cider, or other alcoholic liquids." It is generally understood that a very considerable amount of vinegar, claimed to be pure spirit proof, has been offered and sold at from 7 to 8c. per gallon less than genuine proof vinegar can be laid down in Winnipeg.

CANNED GOODS.—The tomato situation continues to occupy considerable attention. One consignment of tomatoes now on its way to Winnipeg was bought in Baltimore for $1.90 per case, the duty is 96c. per case and the freight will be at least 50c., if not more. The Western representatives of Rose & Laflamme, Montreal, are offering tomatoes at $1.55. This would mean $3.60 per case delivered Winnipeg. Corn is reported growing scarce and although it has not advanced on this market it is very firm. Peas are also firm and without change. All lines of canned fruits are in nominal demand.

SUGARS.—The demand is fair and the price is now $4.40 for granulated and $3.80 for bright yellows.

SYRUPS.—All classes of corn syrups are higher in sympathy with corn.

GREEN FRUITS.—The market is resuming a more normal tone after the slaughter prices produced last week by the sale of carlots by transient traders. Apples, Kings and Spies, are quoted at $3.50, other winter varieties at $2.25: Jersey cranberries, to arrive Monday, $11; lemons, $6; Mexican oranges, $4.50 to $5, according to size; bananas, $3.50; Tokay grapes, $3; Malaga grapes, $8; sweet potatoes, $6 per barrel.

HONEY.—A very fair trade is being done and the prices range as follows:

FLOUR.—Market is good, with fair export trade, and prices are unchanged. We quote: No. 1 patent, $2; No. 2, $1.85; No. 3, $1.55; No. 4, $1.25.

DAIRY MARKET

BUTTER.—There is little or no change. Stocks of creamery are cleaned up and even the holdings by city dealers are small. The city creameries that continue in operation all winter are quoting 25c. per lb. at factory to city customers. Dairy Butter.—Supplies are fair and some of the butter coming in is very good. There is, however, a good deal that is off grade. 14 to 15c. Winnipeg is quoted for the best lots of dairy butter.

CHEESE.—Manitoba made is now about cleaned up and dealers are trading chiefly on Ontario, for which they ask 13 to 13½c. per lb.

EGGS.—The few cold days have practically ended the egg supply which has been light all fall. Storage eggs are selling at 23c. per dozen.

DEATH OF A COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER.

Harry W. Craig, the well-known commercial traveller for Geo. J. Hamilton, baker and confectioner, Pictou, N.S., died at his father's (ex Mayor Richard Craig) house last Friday of cancer of the brain. Deceased was 28 years of age and the youngest son. His brothers are Richard T. Craig, grocer, Truro, and Alvin J. Craig, grocer, Pictou.

STOVE POLISH FIRM'S CARDS.

The F. F. Dalley Co., Limited, stove polish manufacturers, Hamilton, are sending out, to all who wish it, a neat little card with the following humorous get-up on the back of it:

A Dutchman, addressing his dog, said, "You vas only a dog, but I vish I vas you, when you go mit your bed in you shust turn round dree dimes and lay down; ven I go mit the bed in I hav to lock up de blace, and wind up the clock and put the cat out, and ondress myself, and my frou vakes up and scolds, den de baby vakes up and cries and I have to valk him mid de house round, den maybe, ven I gets myself to bed it is time to get up again. Ven you get up you shust stretch yourself, dig your neck a leedle and you vas up. I haf to light de fire, put on de kiddle, scrap some mit my vife already and git myself breakfast. You play around all day and have plenty of fun. I haf to work all day and have blenty of drouble. Ven you die you vas dead; ven I die I haf to go to hell yet."

Please mention THE GROCER when writing.

R. Arthur, of Barbados, who is on a visit to Toronto, says that Canadians should increase their trade with those islands. The United States takes nearly all the Barbados product, especially sugar. Canadians get a little of the small trade and sometimes orders are cancelled on account of the slowness of Canadians in filling them. Canadians ought to be ashamed to allow it to be said that they are not as fast as the people of the United States.

is the only policy which a grocer can follow and be successful.

If he is dishonest to his customers they soon find it out and leave him. If he is dishonest to himself he soon fails.

Are you honest to yourself?

When you are weighing out goods are you sure that your scales do not cheat you? If they are WILSON'S COMPUTING SCALES they do not, but if they are any other old kind they might do so. ## Some Merchants' Experience.

Solomon said in his haste: "ALL MEN ARE LIARS!" He didn't mean it. He was simply so mad with one man that he included all the rest.

Let us not fall into Solomon's mistake. We should take out of our experience the wisdom there is in it AND STOP RIGHT THERE!

Otherwise we are as stupid as the cat who sat down on a hot stove lid. She will never sit down on a hot stove lid again, and that shows good judgment. BUT SHE WILL NEVER SIT DOWN ON A COLD ONE, EITHER.

Now, some merchants have had hard experiences lately with coupon books that were represented to be absolutely correct in count and made up just as good as any other, but they were not, and you won't know what a perfect coupon book is until you have tried either Allison's Coupon Books or Allison's Coupon Pass Books. Both are good; one book suits some, while the other fills the bill with the rest of the merchants.

We are doing a lot of special engraving work now for merchants who use books in large quantities. Our books are carried in stock by jobbers. We will be glad to send you a free sample.

More Care Needed in Shipping Apples.

"THERE are tons of trashy fruit (apples) in this country and they find their level in the poorest class of shops, some being really too miserable to sell from costers' barrows. It is simply absurd for shippers to forward poor fruit. To-day's lot, ex Numidian, showed up in painful contrast to similar varieties from Boston. Greenings were especially poor and have suffered considerably from sweat spots, particularly in the heart of the barrel. Buyers summarize thus: 'Canadian fruit very poor this year, but packing marvellously improved.' There are two exceptions, but two Irish buyers to-day said they could at last count on the bulk bearing definite relation to the face, although they knew nothing of the Fruit Marks Act," said W. A. McKinnon, Chief Fruit Inspector of Canada, writing recently from England to Acting Chief Inspector McNeil.

Thus Mr. McKinnon reports the condition of the English apple market: "The fruit shipped by way of Boston was in excellent condition; those from a Canadian port were in a poor one. The English buyers have got the impression that the Canadian crop was poor. But a large portion of the apples exported from Canada were sent via Boston and arrived in excellent condition. The fault evidently does not lie in the quality of the Canadian apples as they leave Canada from Halifax and Montreal, but in their condition on arrival. Those going by way of Boston reached their destination in excellent condition. The United States were getting the credit for growing good apples, while in reality many of the apples exported from Boston were Canadian grown."

The cause of this unsatisfactory state of affairs can probably be laid at the doors of the railway and steamship companies handling the fruit. Shippers from Toronto complain of the scarcity of proper refrigerator cars, and the fact is that the temperature of the box cars generally provided for apple transportation is from 20 to 25 deg. above the temperature outside.

Many of the steamers subsidized to carry the fruit across the Atlantic are said to be poorly provided with ventilation facilities, indeed, some are not ventilated at all. The apples are packed in the hold, the hatches closed over them, and they are allowed to sweat there until they are spoiled. It is reported as a fact that when the hatches have been opened a strong foul odor escapes from the apples which have been so closely confined. No wonder apples arrive in the Old Country from Canada in a state unfit for selling.

Of course not all the steamers sailing from Canadian ports are as described above. Lately a number have been fitted up with a system of cold-storage, but the facts stated above are true in many cases.

The Federal Government did a good thing for the Canadian fruit trade in passing the Fruit Marks Act, and ought to continue in the right direction in providing proper facilities for laying down our fruit in the United Kingdom.

The fruit crop both in Canada and in the United States is not up to the average this year as far as quality is concerned. The apples are much affected with scab. In the Province of Ontario, according to Inspector Elmer, the trouble has been worse than it has been for years, and thousands of bushels of greenings should never have been picked. In the State of New York the loss through scabby apples will be heavy.

The New York State Experimental Station at Geneva has been investigating this trouble and find that a white mildew on the scab is the cause of a rot that is threatening to destroy the entire apple crop of Western New York. The varieties chiefly affected are greening and fall pippin.

The white mildew has no connection with the scab fungus, it has been discovered on investigation. The scab will not rot the fruit but will break the skin wherever it grows and thus make an opening for the other fungus to get into the apple and rot it.

The trouble is said to be due to a lack of thorough spraying. Had the apples been kept free of spraying, no harm could have been done to them in storage.

NOW'S THE TIME.

In a couple of weeks or so wholesalers will not be able to ship goods perishable by frost to their customers otherwise than by express. It behooves the retail merchant who receives his goods by water transportation to look well over his stock, and decide what he will require for winter in the shape of pickles, vinegars, and other goods that would be damaged by exposure to the cold, and order at once.

A TRIP TO THE WEST INDIES.

"To the British West Indies, via Halifax," is the title of a booklet recently issued by Pickford & Black, of Halifax, N.S. It is the story of a trip last winter by a party of Canadians on the steamship Dahome of the Pickford & Black line, and is full of illustrations of the different points visited on the trip. The book will be mailed for the asking. Mention THE CANADIAN GROCER.

GOOD ADVERTISING.

Notes by Miss Nora Laugher, Toronto.

ADVERTISING to bring business is very like fattening pigs for the market—you must keep right on with it. No man succeeds in fattening a pig by feeding it well one day and famishing it the next, neither can the merchant put money in his purse by advertising a portion of the year and neglecting it the remainder. An ad. must be continued—driven right home as it were. To advertise correctly is to advertise continuously. Merchants who have gained wisdom by experience thoroughly realize that very few people reply to an ad. the first time that it is brought before their notice. Of course, this does not apply to women and bargains. The very first bargain ad., if well written and catchily set, usually strikes home where it is intended to. I am speaking of some staple article

High-Class Groceries

We purchase our stock from reliable dealers, and our goods at all times will be found strictly fresh and of the choicest quality. We make a specialty of keeping on hand the choicest lines of Canned Meats, Fruits and Vegetables.

Quality is an essential in this class of goods. We place in stock only the most reliable brands . . . . . .

TAYLOR & CRUSO

Successors to Jas. Miller. Victoria Block, Fort William.

Strong statements.

which must be advertised steadily, but with proper variation and judgment, of course, in literary composition and typesetting.

When an ad. appears but once a week in a daily paper people forget that they ever saw it. Speaking of women and bargains: Men may laugh, but women will shop, and quite right they are. Shopping is a part of woman's work. It is generally compulsory upon her, for Adolphus George scorns the idea of entering the store to ask for canned peas at three for a quarter, or socks for little Jimmy at six pairs for 50c. He would much prefer lording it around and paying 12½c. per can for peas and 25c. per pair for his son and heir's hose upon any ordinary occasion. He has a soul above bargain day. Woman, on the other hand, does not have to be coaxed or coerced into shopping, she knows it is her bounden duty, just as sweeping the parlor, cooking the dinner and dressing the children. Necessity compels her as the housewife, to economize.

The one thing every merchant must keep in view who wishes to reap the best results from the money expended in advertising is to conduct his business and make his announcements that the public will recognize the business integrity of the house and the entire reliability of any announcement he may make. This must be a fundamental principle of permanent success.

The next thing is to have his announcements so prepared that not only will their literary construction be above criticism, but with such a knowledge of primary ideas and the typesetter's art that he will be able to properly emphasize the leading thoughts of lines of goods by an appropriate display of type. It is only thus that the public in these days of universal advertising and rapid living can be induced to read and act upon his announcement, which, to the man who is paying for it, is of more importance than all the other combined ads. in any medium.

Like the farmer, the advertiser sometimes finds that the harvest follows the planting very quickly, while, at other times, the result is slower. So much depends upon the character of the seed, the knowledge of the sower of the required conditions, and the field or the soil in which it should be sown.

Any dealer who has good, reliable articles to dispose of and takes space judiciously in good mediums to bring those articles before the public with well-written ads. cannot fail to stir up a demand.

An ad. should be crisp and convincing; it should be well constructed so that it will catch the eye at once. Many a merchant has good and bright ideas regarding his own advertising, but lacks the ability to express them properly. Then, again, others have the ability to write their own advertisements, if they had time to concentrate their thoughts upon

THE PROVISION TRADE

AND COLD STORAGE NEWS.

THE LARD SITUATION.

IT is an unusual condition, write The N. K. Fairbank Co., under date of November 11, when the price of hog lard in the United States affects the Canadian market, a duty of 2c. per lb. always prohibiting the importation of American hog fat. At the present time, a peculiar condition, however, is that United States lard has advanced to a point that the foreign market is paying more for lard purchased in the United States than they could buy at in Canada. This, for the first time in years, gives the Canadian producers of lard an opportunity in the English market. Hog lard in the United States closed on November 8 at $10.80, or fully ¾c. above the Canadian price at that time. To-day (November 11) foreign buyers can get a better grade of lard for ¾c. less in Canada than in the United States. The export records show that Canada has exported all of the products of the swine, excepting lard, and, with this opportunity, it looks as if the price of lard in Canada will soon be on a par with the price in the United States, as the foreign market is the balancing power. Buyers would do well to consider this phase of the situation, and its effects on lard and kindred products like refined compounds. Hog receipts in Chicago last week were 455,000, compared with 490,000 for the corresponding week in 1901, which probably means continued advances in the United States and better prices abroad, and, in turn, higher prices in Canada.

MONTREAL BUTCHERS.

The members of the Butchers' Association of Montreal held their annual meeting on the night of Tuesday, November 11.

The election of officers resulted in nearly all the former officers being reelected for the ensuing year. Following are the names of the new officers : President, Alfred Leduc, reelected ; 1st vice-president, Jean Lamoureux, reelected ; 2nd vice-president, Jos. Courville, reelected ; secretary, L. R. Trudeau, reelected ; assistant secretary, S. J. A. Toupin, reelected ; treasurer, H. Poitras, reelected ; assistant treasurer, F. Leroux ; corresponding secretary, Albert Blanchard ; marshals, J. B. Leroux and D. Belanger ; auditors, Jos. Vileneuve, S. Jeannotte and A. Leduc, reelected.

Vice-President J. Lamoureaux outlined a scheme of reform which he proposed that the Association should demand when the intended amendments to the city's charter are discussed. He said that the system of meat inspection was defective and that the butchers are not sufficiently protected. For instance, meat sold by grocers, especially in the spring season, should be most carefully inspected, and he thought that no license should be given to them in the fall. He said that all tenants at the Bonsecours market, paying at least $300, should be given the right to vote, and advocated the system of isolation for butchers' stalls.

The treasurer's report being read proved to be very satisfactory, there being a balance on hand of $1,939.41, and the Association had a membership of over 300.

ADULTERATED FOODS.

The Pure Food Department of the State of Pennsylvania has knocked down a great many public idols in food sense. After carefully analyzing hundreds of brands of syrups, chocolates, honeys and more serious items of food, including imported articles, this department has condemned many popular and well-known brands as adulterated frauds. "Pure honey drawn from the bee" was highly adulterated with syrup, "pure chocolate" was frightfully adulterated with corn starch or mixed with the powdered hulls of the chocolate bean. Evaporated cream was colored for richness and many other frauds on foods were perpetrated upon the public. The whole range of the food field is being searched and it should be searched. — The National Provisioner.

TO MAKE POLISH SAUSAGE.

The Butchers' Advocate gives the following hints for making and keeping Polish sausage : "Take 25 lb. of pork, two parts lean and one part fat, which has been salted for a few days with 1 lb. salt and a little sugar. Grate down finely 3 sticks of garlic, salt them, stir in among them a quart of water ; then add the meat, which has first been chopped into pieces the size of a hazelnut. Then add 1 ½ oz. of pepper, ½ oz. nutmeg. Mix well and put into narrow pigs' casings very full. The casings should be 2 ft. 6 in. long. They are then tied up and doubled, so that each sausage is 15 in. long. Hang them on a smoking stick to dry for a day. Then smoke them at a heat of 133 deg. Fahr., and let them hang until they are thoroughly cooked inside merely with the hot smoking. These sausages can be made in the hottest weather without being spoiled. The garlic need not necessarily be an ingredient. If one should prefer to boil this sausage, then give only a light smoke until the sausage is a yellowish red color, and boil afterwards directly after smoking, for 25 minutes."

BUTCHER KILLS HIMSELF.

C. H. Cornell, a butcher of 200 Robert street, Toronto, committed suicide on Monday, November 17, at about 11 a.m., in Rosedale Ravine Drive, Toronto, by shooting. Deceased had been speculating in stocks and lost a lot of money, and this is supposed to be the cause of him putting himself out of the world.

THE PROVISION MARKETS.

TORONTO.

From 60 to 70 loads of cattle per day are being received at the Western Cattle Market. The stock is said by the dealers to be of good quality, and all shipments are quickly purchased. Export cattle are a little lighter than usual. About 5,000 hogs of a good quality have been received this week. Prominent dealers say farmers should keep their hogs until they are heavier as too many light ones have been received of late. Those who handle dressed meats claim the weather is having a depressing effect on the number of carcasses received. There has been an advance in prices in that branch of the business. We quote : Dressed hogs, $7.00 to $8.60 ; beef carcasses, $4.50 to $8.00 per 100 lb. ; hind quarters, $6.00 to $9.00 per 100 lb. ; front quarters, $4.00 to $6.00 per 100 lb. ; veal, 5 to 9c., and lamb 6½c. Best live hogs, heavy weight (160 to 200 lb.), are worth $6.00 to $12.00, while light weights are quoted from $5.00 to $7.50. Choice export cattle sell for $4.75 to $5.25; butchers' from $4.00 to $4.40, and feeders from $3.75 to $4.15 for the best, and $2.75 to $3.75 for common stock.

Packers in the wholesale provision houses are kept very busy at present filling orders for dealers in lake port towns, who are stocking-up before navigation closes, on account of the boat freight rates being so much less than the all-rail rates. Fully a carload of vension has been received during the past week. The weather is unfavorable for keeping it in good condition, and, no doubt, a considerable quantity of it will have to be sacrificed if it does not get colder. Venison is sold at 6 to 8c. per lb. by the carcass. The following are our quotations in other lines: Long clear bacon, 11 to 11½c.; smoked breakfast bacon, 14½ to 15c.; roll, 12 to 12½c.; medium hams, 13½ to 14c.; large hams, 12½ to 13c.; shoulder hams, 11 to 11½c., and backs 14½ to 15c.; Canadian heavy mess pork, $21.50 to $22.00; short cut, $23.50 to $24.00; lard, in tierces, 10¾ to 11c. per lb.; tubs, 11 to 11¼c., and pails 11¼ to 11½c.; compounds, 8¾ to 10c.; plate beef, $15.00 per 200-lb. bbl.

MONTREAL.

No noteworthy change has taken place in the provision market. All lines are moving freely, but in small lots. In dressed hogs there is an easier feeling, and prices have receded somewhat. Sales of fresh-killed abbatoir stock were made at $8.25 to $8.50, and country-killed at $7.50, with carlots offering at $7.25 to $7.50 per 100 lb. In lard, no change has taken place. Quotations are as follews: Pure Canadian lard, $2.37½ to $2.40 per pail; Fairbank's "Boar's Head" lard compound, 9⅝c. tierce basis, with extras as follows: 60-lb. tubs, ¼c. over tierce; 20-lb. tin pails, ¼c.; 20-lb. wood pails, ½c.; 10-lb. tins, ¾c.; 5-lb. tins, ⅞c.; 3-lb. tins 1c. Snow White and Globe compound, $1.80 to $1.90 per pail; Cottolene, 11¼c. for 20-lb. pails, and 11⅛c. for 60-lb. tubs, for Quebec and Ontario; hams, 12 to 14c.; heavy Canadian short cut mess pork, $24.50 to $25; Canadian short cut clear pork, $23.50 to $24; American short cut clear pork, $24 to $24.50; American fat back, $24.50 to $25; bacon, Wiltshire, 14 to 15c. per lb.; extra plate beef, $14.50 to $15 per bbl.

ST. JOHN, N.B.

In barrelled pork and beef there is a slightly lower market, though the local market is unchanged. Stocks here are very light. In lard, full figures are asked. There continues to be a large sale. Refined and compound lard also are moving freely. In fresh beef, receipts are large, domestic beef being plentiful but light.

A WEALTHY BREWER.

THE London Daily Mail tells us in a recent issue that the value of the estate left by the late R. H. Ratcliff, a member of the well-known brewing firm of Bass, Ratcliff & Gretton, Limited, of Burton-on-Trent, amounts to £609,524 7s. 11d. and the personal estate is estimated to be £551,305. To Mrs. Ratcliff is left an annuity of £4,000, together with a sum of £1,000 and the effects at Wilton Lodge. Legacies of £40,000 each are left, in trust, to each of the testator's younger sons and also to the daughters. He bequeathed the Stanford Hall estate, at Loughborough, and his real estate in Nottingham and Lincoln, to his eldest son.

Within four years duties totalling a large amount have been levied on estates left by members of this firm, the estates being as follows: R. Ratcliff (died November 24, 1898), gross, £1,116,190; net, £1,007,362; J. Gretton (died October 2, 1899), gross, £2,883,640; net, £2,714,043; H. A. Bass (died April 8, 1898), net, £126,262.

Judging by the great wealth of these deceased gentlemen one would surely be warranted in thinking that there is money in the brewery business in the Old Land.

Hints and Ideas of Interest.

SOMETHING ON COFFEE.

EVERY grocer, of course, handles coffee to a more or less extent and is so eager to learn more about the most successful ways of buying the product. Some coffees are impure when they are delivered to the grocer, and some are not. How to buy only the pure should every grocer know. The Merchants' Review has the following to say about the buying of coffees :

A certain food commissioner declares that coffee is glazed in order to deceive buyers. Coffee is not exhibited in this part of the country so that consumers can examine it and buy it because it looks nice and brown and shiny, and we doubt if it is so exhibited anywhere, therefore if the glazing deceives any class it must be the grocers.

Now, Messrs. Grocers, do you buy coffee on its looks or on its flavor? If you buy it because it looks nice, nothing afterwards will much matter, whatever happens to that coffee. It will not much matter whether the coffee is properly ground, properly stored or properly made —simply because the start was made wrong. If the buyer does not get "stuck" at first he will later, and one invoice of poor coffee will drive away more trade in a day than could be won back in a month.

Now, if it is bought on its intrinsic merits, and not upon a fallacious polish which may or may not cover a multitude of sins, the dealer will be warranted in pushing the article.

First, let him use it on his own table. No grocer ought to let an article go over his counter until it has passed the same test. If it is not good enough for himself it is not good enough for his customers.

Having discovered the right goods, the right blend, keep it up to the standard. If it falls off, send the coffee back where it came from. Never take the risk of substituting an inferior article. Plead with customers to infuse the coffee properly, and print instructions on the label.

Take pains with the coffee blend or blends. See that they are bought right, kept right, and as far as possible, infused right.

Let your trade fame rest upon the fame of your coffee. If it is not good enough for that it is not good enough for your purpose. If it is good enough for your trade, it is good enough for strangers, and will serve to carry your reputation further and to build your fortunes higher.

Make no mistake. Coffee is capable of working wonders for the grocer il used aright. Consider the remarkable success of a skilfully advertised breakfast food of the day! Many experts can see no merits in the article, but anyone can see the merits of the advertising. Let the same grade of advertising be applied to a really good grade of coffee, and it is a dollar to a last year's campaign button that the success of the coffee-advertising scheme would "force" the cereal success into the background and fill some grocer's pockets with gold or its substitutes.

See that your coffee is roasted properly. It is sometimes possible to over-roast it without affecting the appearance, but the flavor suffers. Don't be deceived by the appearance. You can't sell the goods that way, and therefore should subject every invoice received to the cup test.

If the goods vary much from time to time, the roaster may be responsible, and a peremptory warning may be sufficient to keep him more vigilant afterwards. When the trouble frequently occurs, the roaster should be changed. No compunctions should deter the grocer from taking a decesive step, for the whole future of his business may depend upon the manner in which he conducts his coffee department.

There are grocery stores that sell really fine coffee at reasonable prices, but only a few people are aware of the fact. Innate modesty or congenital conservatism perhaps prevents the owners from making the fact widely known.

There can be little doubt that more physical vigor is obtainable from a cup of delicious coffee than from a saucer of half-cooked vegetable matter which tastes like a mixture of butterscotch and a goat's milk, yet while health foods are lauded to the shies as food for angels and men, the royal berry of Mocha, Java and Brazil has no one to say a specially good word for it or to tell how some "Clem Jumps," or other sufferer from indigestion, produced by bad cooking, became a different man under the restorative influence of a regular morning dose of So-and-So's Mocha and Java blend at 30c. per lb.

Who will be the Homer of the coffee berry? Who will paint the good it does and the joy that it spreads about it? Who will do this and incidentally make some humble grocer rich?

POOR FINANCING.

I READ an article not long ago, writes J. H. Bolton, the purport of which was that the reason a great number of merchants fail to mave any money was not so much the lack of a volume of business as it was small profits.

There is a great deal of truth in this. So many merchants do not seem to realize what goods cost; they figure if they buy a yard of cloth for five cents and sell it at six cents they are making one cent. That they are not making anything, more likely losing, would be nearer the truth. There are so many articles that must be sold close that it is very necessary to put a profit on anything that will stand it. There is no sense in making leaders of everything.

So many merchants mark their goods according to the price they pay and not what they are really worth or will bring. I have frequently run across articles marked 20 per cent. above their. real value, simply because the buyer gave too much for them at the time of purchase, or the market has dropped materially since that time; but the selling price is not changed.

On the other hand, I find next to the high-priced article, one which is marked at an equally ridiculous low figure, simply because it cost a certain price and a certain amount of profit was figured on that cost.

A man can't always hit everything right, but he'll pound his thumb a good deal if he doesn't try to find out, all the time, just how and where he is travelling. Men have made money when they went blindly into buying aod selling goods, but we don't hear much about the fellows who flunk doing the same thing.

Making money by selling goods has to be done after just as intelligent methods as running a locomotive or an automobile successfully—chance may do it, but actual knowledge is the only sure way.

TEA IN NEW YORK.

NO business of importance was reported transacted for the day, but the tone of the market held firm. Increasing interest was reported being shown by buyers in both Congous and Formosas. Offerings were light, most of the dealers expressing decided confidence in the situation, and were holding for still higher prices. The line business was fairly active at firm prices.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce, November 18.

CANNED GOODS IN BOSTON.

About everything has an upward tendency except tomatoes, and they are about the same as last week. Corn is soaring higher all the time. Squash and pumpkin are firmer, and gallon apples are a shade firmer. The Alaska Packers' Association has advanced the price on canned salmon 20c. per case, and we look for a further advance before long. Canned salmon is the cheapest article on the list. Sardines are firm at unchanged quotations. Canned lobsters are still scarce and very firm.—New England Grocer.

FISH ON THE COAST.

Referring to salmon The San Francisco Trade Journal has the following: "Shipments on contracts are being made as fast as possible. New business is reported light. The supply of chinooks, sockeyes and reds are practically out of first hands, but there are considerable pinks and also chums or dog. Holders are firm in their views, stating that with the higher grades practically out of first hands the trade will have to fall back on pinks, and owing to a scarcity and high prices for mackerel and pickled salmon these will be cleaned up when the spring demand sets in. Some think that stronger prices will probably obtain in view of the scarcity of other kinds of fish."

TOMATOES IN BALTIMORE.

Telegrams from Baltimore to-day report the tomato market steady in tone and full standard 3s, with 90c. regular f.o.b quoted. Off standards are offered freely at 85 to 87½c. f.o.b. and standard 2s at 67½c. Gallons are quoted at from $3 to $3.10. The demand is reported quiet on the spot, little important movement being noted. Writing from Baltimore under date of Saturday, Strasbough-Steckel-Hewitt Co. say of the situation:

"One of the more important features of the week has been the strong position taken by holders of desirable lines of tomatoes against concessions under their figures. By a large number of holders of thoroughly desirable lines repeated offers at a shade under their figures have this week been repeatedly turned down, so that whatever shading has been done has been confined to lines showing irregularity or other less desirable features. Several unsettling features of the tomato market which prevaled during the last half of October and the first half of this month, among them, anxiety to sell among some holders, adjustment of rejections and a lack of confidence in the market's ability to sustain quotations around 90c. for standard 3s. All of these are more and more being removed, and in their place we find a good, healthy undercurrent among leading interests, based on a more intelligent estimate of stocks in first and second hands than it was possible to arrive at prior to this time."—N. Y. Journal of Commerce, November 18.

OYSTERS IN BALTIMORE.

Dredgers and packers are complaining that oysters are unusually scarce. Already what may be called the entire summer crop of oysters has been collected, that is, there is nothing of the smallest kind of stock to be had off the bay; and many cargoes are being rejected by the packers because they are two-fifths shells without any oysters in them. It is certain from this that the cold weather of February will see much higher prices for Cove oysters, and that it will join the list of the high-priced articles in canned goods.—The Trade, Baltimore.

REFINED SUGAR IN NEW YORK.

The general report continued of a better undertone to the market and a steadily growing belief that prices on their present basis were safe. Advices were received from New Orleans reporting that refiners in that market had advanced prices 5 points, so that they were on the same basis as quoted by New York refiners, also had a favorable influence. The volume of business transacted was reported as reaching fair proportions, there being a good call for shipments on outstanding contracts, and there was a fair run of new orders. No changes were made in list prices. The market closed firm. The first arrival of the domestic beet granulated was reported, and it was learned that this sugar will be stored and not offered at the present market prices. —N. Y. Journal of Commerce, November 18.

RAW SUGAR IN NEW YORK.

Willett & Gray have the following to say of raw sugar in New York:

"The desire to obtain 1-16c. advance at the close of last week on a cargo of Javas, then on the market, resulted in the cargo being put in store, rather than accept the then current quotation of 3⅝c. for 96 deg. test centrifugals. The decision showed the wisdom of the owners, as buyers during the current week have paid 1-16c. advance for centrifugals. The cargo of Javas is now held by the owners at 3⅝c., with a fair prospect of obtaining it soon, though, for the present, the extreme of the market must be considered as strong at 3 11-16c. for 96 deg. centrifugals. European markets during the week, show slight fluctuations, closing at 1½d. higher, with beet sugars at 7s. 6⅜d. for November-December delivery. The whole tone and tendency of the raw sugar market is in favor of sellers.

"Mr. Licht's cables to ourselves through the week, simply repeat that the prevailing conditions regarding the beet crop remain entirely unchanged.

"Meltings for the week were reduced 9,000 tons, against receipts of 50,583 tons, resulting in an increased stock to 185,219 tons, against last week, 165,636 tons. The reduced meltings are caused by the discontinuance of large shipments of refined to the west, preceding their sale, in order to take advantage of the low freight rates. Meltings will remain smaller for the balance of the year. Refiners are now storing several cargoes of Java sugars which arrived for their account sooner than needed."

NUTS FOR NEW YORK.

The second shipment of new-crop Grenoble walnuts is due to arrive per steamer Kronland, due November 23, and offerings are available at 12½c. and for shipment first half of December 12c. can be done. The first of the new French arrived on the ss. Philadelphia and offer at 10½c. A small lot is due per ss. Majestic on Wednesday, and offer at the same price. On the direct steamer due here about December 1, 10½c. can be done. The last of the new crop Chili walnuts arrived on the ss. Pretoria, and offer freely at 9½c.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

WHAT SORT OF GOODS TO PUSH.

AT one of the conventions held by retail grocers the question was asked: Should we, as retailers, push trust or anti-trust brands of goods of any and all characters? The reply was—Push the goods that give the best satisfaction and a legitimate profit. Therein lies the secret of success, says Retail Merchants' Review. Let the first thought be quality and service, so that customers have no chance for grumbling. Satisfy them in those respects, and there will be no trouble over prices. The question of profit as it relates to special lines is one to be determined by the conditions or circumstances surrounding the individual retailer. There are grocers who find it profitable to sell certain lines at absolute cost; a policy indefensible in others.

During the past week when creamery butter was 19½c. in large lines, a well-known retailer advertised it at 19c. per lb. That is no reason why 8,000 other retail grocers in the territory affected should do the same. The conditions governing the cut are radically different from those under which the majority of the grocers do business, and for them to throw away their profit on a leading article such as butter, would be foolish and do them harm. Their policy should be to sell the finest butter the market affords at a fair profit; see that the service is irreproachable. The difference in price will encourage the belief that the higher-priced article is superior and tend to confirm the customer's faith in the seller.

LAKE OF THE WOODS COMPANY.

AT the annual meeting of The Lake of the Woods Milling Co., held in Montreal, the shareholders decided upon an unprecedented piece of business, namely, not only increasing, or doubling, but of tripling their original capitalization!

This company have made such a name for themselves by the excellence of their "Keewatin" flour, which is now known all over the civilized world, that they have thus confessed themselves unable to cope with their business with the present capital stock, and hence the sensational action at the annual meeting. That the stock will be snapped up as soon as it is put on the market is a foregone conclusion—though our Ottawa correspondent makes a broad hint that the great bulk of the new issue will never see the brokers' hands, as it was no doubt spoken for by the original shareholders before the meeting took place.

The question as to what the company will do with the million of dollars must be patent to everyone. They will build more flour mills and more elevators, for the money that is to be made by "Keewatin Flour," which has for years been persistently advertised and consistently kept up to the standard of excellence advertised, could not be made so fast by any other means than by increasing the output to fulfil the demand for an article which has been established as the best, not only in Canada, but in the world.

Pears' soap people spend millions of dollars annually to establish a name. Once established, then the name of a firm is everything. When John Mather was organizing his company to harness the Tunnel Island water-power, which is in the town of Rat Portage, he knew what he was doing when he named it the Keewatin Power Co. He is a director of the Lake of the Woods Milling Co., and he knew that the day was not far distant when the name of "Keewatin Flour" would become as much a household word as Pears' soap, and that to supply the demand it would be necessary to build more mills. Keewatin flour, manufactured at the Keewatin Power Co.'s dam on Lake of the Woods, is now the only place for the Lake of the Woods Milling Co. to build additional mills to manufacture Keewatin flour.

Our correspondent says the company could build an addition to the present mill at Keewatin, using the same power, and so arranging the machinery that it would not be necessary to duplicate the present crew to turn out double as much "Keewatin Flour" as is now being produced. He calculates that an additianal two-fifths more labor would suffice—but he adds:

"If this was all the Lake of the Woods Milling Co. intended to do it would not have been necessary to even double the capital stock, much less triple it, as less than a quarter of a million of dollars would have been sufficient for this purpose. Therefore," he argues, "when they called for that million they knew just where it was going to be put, and after the explanation given above about the name of "Keewatin Flour" there is only one conclusion to be drawn and that is that they intend to build at The Keewatin Power Co.'s dam. Men do not subscribe $1,000,000 unless they get dividends for it, and the quickest way The Lake of the Woods Milling Co. know of making those dividends is by manufacturing 'Keewatin Flour.' It may be stated that during the past year The Lake of the Woods Milling Co. have paid the C.P.R. over $1,000,000 in freight charges."—Rat Portage Miner.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, November 17, 1902.

DURING the last week the grocery business, which for some time had been very satisfactory, was very active, and the wholesalers are quite satisfied with the way goods are moving, all their energies being taxed to promptly fill and ship the rush of orders coming in. A heavy business is being done in fancy groceries as the country merchants are already preparing for a heavy Christmas and New Year's trade. Fancy biscuits and confectionery are in great demand; also the various dried fruits and peels which enter into the Christmas cookery. Payments still continue satisfactory, and especially good reports of the general business activity of the Maritime Provinces are coming in from all quarters.

Flour and the various kinds of millfeeds are all firm. There is still only a small quantity of hay moving, and the price is somewhat unsettled as yet. Oats have been coming in in large quantities from Prince Edward Island, but the producers are holding out for higher prices. In fact, oats are quoted 2 or 3c. higher now than 10 days ago. This possibly denotes even higher prices later on. The standard quotation now is 41 to 42c. During the last 10 days a very large quantity of Prince Edward Island potatoes have also come in, but nominal prices quoted two weeks ago are not materially affected. Prince Edward Island stock is quoted at 35 to 38c.; Nova Scotian, 40 to 45c.

On account of the high quotations on cheese, the factories have kept on making that article considerably longer than usual, and this has had the effect of cutting short the usual supply of butter that comes in at this season of the year. Butter is consequently very firm, and best grades have advanced 2c. since November 1. The supply of the cheaper grades is made up by the importation of western butter. Eggs are also firm and have advanced 1c. per doz. for case eggs. Fresh are still retailing for 30c. and over.

The dullness prevailing in the fish business, already reported, still continues. Markets in the south have not materially improved. Large quantities of Newfoundland cod are coming here as the price is very low in the Ancient Colony. Wholesalers now have large stocks on hand and are not anxious buyers. In fact, they can simply make their own prices.

The sugar market, which has been fluctuating more or less for some time, is not yet settled, and changes may come at any time. There is a good demand at this season of the year, and considerable trade is being done. During the last 10 days the following lots of sugar and molasses have arrived here: From Antigua, steamer Druro, 138 bbls., 241 bags; from Demerara, 14,970 bags for Montreal; from St. Kitts, 238 bags; molasses from St. Kitts, 4 hhds., 79 puns., 50 bbls. A sailing vessel also brought 195 puns. and 52 tierces molasses from Porto Rico.

CARELESSNESS IN RETURNING GOODS.

WHEN goods are returned, no matter for what reason, it is only reasonable to demand that they should be put up in packages that will insure their reaching their destination in proper condition. That this is not always done has been demonstrated to THE CANADIAN GROCER on several occasions lately. In some instances the goods were of delicate texture and the only protection they had from dirt and carelsss handling was the paper box or the paper in which they were originally wrapped for display on the shelves of the retail merchant. As a result, in many instances, the thin covering was torn and the goods exposed and damaged by contact with wet and mud. Naturally the wholesalers to whom the goods were returned were annoyed.

As long as goods are bought and sold the practice of returning them will exist to some extent, for we have not by any means yet reached the millennium when wholesalers make no mistakes in selling or in shipping and retailers no mistakes in buying. But to return goods in the way those were to which we refer is simply inexcusable. And in some instances it is impossible to conceive that the merchants who returned the goods could have been cognizant of the gross carelessness which was exhibited by those to whom they had entrusted the work of returning the goods.

It is evident from what we have cited that in some retail stores specific instructions need to be issued to those upon whom the duty of returning goods devolves.

COMPETITION vs. MONOPOLY.

WHILE it is only natural that men should try to create monopolies in order to escape competition, the latter is none the less the life of trade. Competition has no doubt its defects just as everything else of human creation. But business would suffer more from its absence than from its presence.

"A certain competition," says Emerson, "balances every gift and every defect." Competition is to many in business a defect. But the keener the competition the higher is the standard of business men it produces. This is its compensation.

Never in the history of the world was competition greater than it is to-day, but it is creating conditions in the commercial world that demand a higher state of efficiency in those who move and live and have their being therein. And this, fortunately, is not narrowing opportunities or minimizing ideals.

Opportunities for the attainment of success in the commercial world were never better than they are to-day, while the prizes were certainly never more attractive. One has, perhaps, to strive a little harder for them, but that, of course, naturally follows.

SHARP ADVANCES IN SUGAR.

Sugar advanced on November 18 in New York 10c. all around, followed by a similar advance in this market. Just as we go to press we heard of another advance of 10c. in both markets. Our prices current on refined sugar should, therefore, be 20c. per 100 lb. higher all around.

Raw sugars in New York have advanced 1-16c., and are now quoted on the basis of 3¾c. for 96 per cent. centrifugals. Beet sugar f.o.b. Hamburg has advanced 3d. per cwt., and is now quoted at 7 to 9¾c.

THE BEAN SITUATION IN AUSTRIA AND ONTARIO.

FROM reports received by one of Montreal's largest dealers in beans from Austria and Ontario, we have gleaned the following :

The report from Austria states that the crop of beans turned out uncommonly poor this year. In consequence of bad weather the yield was hardly 25 per cent. of the average. Pea beans were a total failure, being only about 5 per cent. of last year's crop. When once news of the failure of the crop in the United States was received prices went up by leaps and bounds till the highest figures known for beans were reached. Fully 60,000 to 75,000 bags of beans have been sold to America. With the combined demand from America and Europe it is estimated than the whole of this year's crop is disposed of, and possibly oversold.

Reports from Ontario state that the market is very quiet both in east and west, and the trade is not disposed to stock up at the high prices prevailing. It is impossible to make any predictions in regard to the future of the bean market. The crop this year has been exceedingly light and most of it is now in the hands of dealers. Jobbers have deferred laying in their stocks until now they are actually compelled to make their purchases, and the stocks at the distributing points are very much lighter than they have been for a great many years. When the colder weather commences there is every reason to believe that there will be a very brisk demand for beans. The situation in Michigan and New York is much the same as in Canada.

SPICE SITUATION.

The outside spice situation all around is strong in pepper, cloves, nutmegs and mace. The total stocks of black pepper in Europe on October 1, 1902, were 206,300 bales, against 280,800 bales on the same date 1901, and 331,100 in 1900. There were 58,349 bales of cloves on November 1 in Holland and London, as compared with 58,349 bales on October 1, 1901, and 90,704 in 1900. The receipts of cloves from Zanzibar, August to October of this year, were 25,000 bales, against 50,000 bales for the same time last year, and 29,000 for the corresponding period 1900. In Holland the total stocks of nutmegs for 1900 were 116 tons, against 293 tons for 1901, and 342 tons in 1900, and on November 1, 1902, there were 22 tons of mace, as compared with 43 tons in 1901 and 40 in 1900 in Holland.

THE PACIFIC CABLE AND TRADE.

WHILE from the Imperial standpoint the completion of the cable across the Pacific Ocean, connecting Canada and Australia, is a matter of no small moment, its chief importance to Canadians, after all, lies in its existence as an aid in developiug the trade and commerce of the country. And while in thus giving prominence to the commercial aspect of the matter one may be open to the charge of utilitarianism, we must not forget that we live in a commercial age and that the commercial interests of the country usually take precedence over others, except when the national honor is in question.

The stations of the new cable are wholly on British territory. This is scarcely of less importance to the commercial interests of the Empire than to its naval and military interests. This must be evident to everyone who has followed the discussion of the Pacific cable question during the past decade or two. The chief desideration sought, however, was cheaper cable rates. Owing to the monopoly possessed by The Eastern Extension Telegraph Co. the rates in the past have been excessive and an obstacle to the development of trade with Australia and the Orient. And had it not been for the machinations of this company it is altogether likely that the Pacific cable would have been in existence years ago.

The question has been more or less a topic of discussion for many years. At the conference in London in 1887 of representatives of the Imperial and Colonial Governments, and again at the Colonial Conference in Ottawa in 1894, it occupied a large share of attention, and resolutions favorable to the enterprise were adopted in both instances. In the former year a survey of the route was ordered to be made, but it was not until 1899 that it was completed. A committee, representing the Imperial and Colonial authorities, which had been appointed in 1896, reported in 1899, recommending the laying and maintenance of an all-British Pacific cable, the cost to be borne by the Mother Country and the colonies directly interested. Finally, in 1890, tenders were called for, the cable to be laid from Vancouver to Fanning Island, Fiji and Norfolk Island, branching from the latter island to New Zealand and Queensland. The tender was awarded to The Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Co., the cost to be £1,795,000, the line to be completed by the end of 1902. In July of last year the British Government announced that it would advance £2,000,000 for the construction of the cable, and that the maintenance charges would be borne as to five-eighteenths by the Home Government and as to the remainder by the colonies concerned. It was at the same time announced that the Board of Management would consist of three representatives of the Imperial Government and two representatives of Canada, and two of Australia and New Zealand.

Already the benefits of the new cable are being realized, a rate of about 56c. a word from Canada to Australia having been fixed, against 99c. by The Eastern Extension Line; in fact, before the new cable was started the rate was $1.50 per word.

It is a matter for congratulation that the chief promoter of the Pacific cable is a Canadian, Sir Sanford Fleming. In season and out of season, when the interest of many was cold and the opposition formidable, his zeal was untiring. And if anyone is deserving of the thanks of the business men of Canada it is Sir Sanford Fleming.

APPLE STATISTICS.

THERE are being placed in storage this year about 350,000 barrels of Ontario apples of good quality, the greater part of which will be exported. The yield of apples altogether was an immense one, but many, estimated at over one-half the crop, were unfit for sale.

From Nova Scotia there will not be over 100,000 barrels of apples exported this year, as against 300,000 barrels last year, and, in the opinion of Mr. Bigelow, of Wolfville, the president of the Nova Scotia Fruit Growers' Association, there may not be 50,000.

Shippers are now commencing to export their fruit by way of Portland and St. John, N.B., instead of Montreal, as navigation will shortly close at the latter port.

A despatch from Messrs. Woodall & Co., Liverpool, to Mr. Eben James, Toronto, under date of November 19, says of the Liverpool market:

"12,000 barrels sold and the market is showing great activity, and the prices are hardening, especially for good quality which advanced 2s. and continued firm at the advance."

During the week ending November 15, the total shipments of apples to European ports were as follows:

SIR WILLIAM TESTIFIES

ONE of the most important witnesses before the tobacco commission in Montreal was Sir William Macdonald, whose evidence was taken on November 13.

Sir William testified that he had been a tobacco manufacturer for 44 years, having begun in a small way and worked his business up. He had never resorted to the exclusive contract system. He reached the retail trade through the wholesale houses, which he thought was the best channel for getting the goods to the customers. He considered that if there were a monopoly of the tobacco trade that it would be very profitable to be the monopolist.

It depended entirely upon the moderation of the monopolist whether such a contract as he understood this of the American Tobacco Co.'s to be, was in the interests of the consumer. Competition was the life of business, and a monopoly did not tend to give the grower the best price.

In 1860 Sir William made an experiment with Canadian leaf, but, after a year's trial, discontinued it, confining his manufacturing solely to the American leaf.

He had had great competition which sometimes forced him to reduce prices below what he considered reasonable. He had bought out two small rival concerns, both of which, being offered to him, he bought for the purpose of closing them. He did not know that there had been an arrangement among the grocers regarding the exclusive handling of his goods and Mr. Tuckett's, or of the distribution of territory between them.

When the wholesalers spoke to him regarding their raising prices he told them that was their business.

He did not believe in encouraging the production of Canadian tobacco as it was now encouraged by the Government.

Sir William, continuing, said that he had sometimes refused to sell to retail merchants who wished to buy direct from the manufacturers. He did this because he wished to sell through the wholesale trade. The largest drop he had ever made in prices was during the American War, in 1864, when he dropped from 28 to 19c. No such drop had ever occurred since. He considered it quite legitimate for a man to get the best channel he could for the sale of goods. He knew of nothing to prevent arrangements being made with wholesalers to handle the goods of the American Tobacco Co. exclusively. He took entire exception to the statement that he had killed off competitors. If anybody had killed them off it was themselves. If the merchant who bought and the merchant who sold made an agreement to deal together according to the law of the country, he did not see how he could prevent it, even though it injured his trade. The man who bought his goods and paid his price could do as he liked with them.

THE OPENING OF TORONTO'S NEW MARKET.

THE new St. Lawrence Market, Front street, east, Toronto, presented an animated scene on Saturday, November 15, the day set for its formal opening. Morning, afternoon and evening saw increasing crowds flocking through the new building. All who visited it, for whatever purpose, appeared to be satisfied. The building was nicely decorated with flags, bunting and pictures for the occasion.

The morning was given up to business. Crowds of farmers brought in large quantities of produce, the disposal of which occupied but a short time—everyone having sold out before 11 o'clock. Those who handled meats and vegetables did a splendid business and are certain of the new market's future success. The stock of flowers had to be replenished four times ere the crowd had finally left the building late in the evening. In fact, everyone doing business in the building was well pleased with the amount of the first day's sales.

In the afternoon still larger crowds were in attendance. The Grenadiers' band had been engaged and discoursed music from a raised stand at the south end of the building. Mayor Howland, the members of the city council, and the prominent tenants of the market delivered addresses.

The evening performance was the most largely attended. Until a late hour crowds continued to pour into the market to promenade to the strains of the band which had been retained for the evening.

Those who had the management of the opening in hand were highly pleased at its success, and at the number of people who took an interest in the proceedings.

A short description of the interior of the building may be of interest to readers of THE CANADIAN GROCER. It is 340 ft. long and 136½ ft. wide; has a clear roof space 138 ft. 4 in.; is well lighted, well ventilated and roomy, and has smooth concrete floors. There is a large room on the east side of the entrance called the "basket-room." It is 50 x 60 ft., and is set apart for farmers handling butter, eggs and poultry. Of a corresponding size is the flower-room directly opposite — a light, cheerful room in which all varieties of flowers in season are kept. Massive palms, beautiful chrysanthemums and carnations at present predominate. The basement is divided into many departments which at present are used for storage, but which will be rented as small commission houses later on. There are 10,000 barrels of apples stored in that part of the building now. Radial cars, it is expected, will shortly be running there. The stores on the main floor are large, clean and commodious. Seventy-five merchants have already secured business places, and it is expected there will shortly be others.

Ex-Ald. Frame is the genial, obliging superintendent of the market. His office is nicely fitted up and is on the west side of the entrance.

Altogether it is a market of which any city might be proud. It is a credit to Toronto, and a place to which a visit is well-repaid.

STE. CUNEGONDE ELECTS MR. FABIEN AS MAYOR.

More interest than usual was manifested yesterday in the election at St. Cunegonde, where the mayor was chosen by a vote of the property-owners. Formerly the aldermanic board selected the chief magistrate of the town. Two aldermen of the outgoing council, C. P. Fabien and Joseph Roy, contested the mayoralty, and the former was elected by a majority of 25. The successful candidate received 140 votes and Mr. Roy 115.

OILS ADVANCING.

There have been rapid advances in petroleum during the past three or four weeks, and now the price of Canadian crude is higher at the wells than it has been at any time during the past 15 years. The refined article has gone up during the past two or three weeks 1½ to 2c. per gallon, and heavy advances have been made in the prices of napthas, benzine, and gasolines. Only a small percentage of these are taken from the crude oil.

NEW STARCH WORKS.

The Imperial Starch Co., Prescott, Ont., have nearly completed their factory, and will soon have their product on the market. As their mills will be of large capacity, the price of starch will likely be kept down, and not go up, as was anticipated by the trade generally through the prices of corn being so high.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, November 20, 1902.

GROCERIES.

A FAIRLY active tone pervades the grocery market in all lines this week, with few new features to report. The mild weather has had the effect of keeping back trade to some extent, but the volume of business seems to be larger than last year. The travellers keep on sending in fair-sized orders and report the outlook bright in all quarters for a successful year's business. There has been a decidedly firmer tone to the sugar market and prices advanced 10c. early in the week. Previous to this they had declined 5 points last week, so that in reality our prices are 5c. higher than last week at the time of going to press. The product of the new sugar refineries, at Berlin and Wallaceburg, Ont., are now on the market and are listed at $3.80 Montreal and $3.88 Toronto. Canned goods are rather quiet and there have been no special changes in the prices of any in the list. The Grecian currant market is hardening and the prices here are stiffer in consequence. Valencia selected raisins are a little easier for fine off-stalk and selected stock, but layers are scarce and firm. New dates are now in stock and there are now a few more orders comimg forward for them. Indian and Ceylon teas are stiffer in tone in sympathy with an advancing English market.

CANNED GOODS.

There has been no change in the prices of any lines of canned goods and the market is active for peas, corn and beans at firm figures. One leading wholesale house astonished the trade by filling all the orders for tomatoes it had received. There is still an active inquiry for that article, and it is reported that one grocer imported some from the south of France. Advices from Victoria, B.C., state that 37 of the salmon canneries of the Fraser River, which refused to join the British Columbia Packers' Association last spring when that company was formed, are now organizing themselves into an opposition combine. This new concern, it is stated, will be backed by English capital. Not all the outside canneries on the Fraser River are believed to be included in this new combine. A majority of the Fraser River salmon canneries are said to be small concerns, packing individually a small output.

COFFEES

A moderate demand continues for all coffees, principally green Rios, and the prices are unchanged. The outside markets are dominated by an easier tone and for contracts, prices have weakened considerably. We quote as follows: Green Rios, No. 7, 7¾c.; No. 6, 8c.; No. 5, 8¼c.; No. 4, 9c.; No. 3, 10 to 12c. per pound.

NUTS.

A fair call is reported for nuts for the approaching holiday trade. Walnuts on the outside markets are strongly held.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

Quite a number of orders are coming in this week for rice and tapioca. There is a firm situation in fancy head and choice Japan rice in the south. Tapioca outside is dull. We quote as follows: B rice, 3½c.; Japan, 5½ to 6c.; sago, 3¾ to 4c.; tapioca, 3¼ to 3¾c. per lb.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrups are moving out actively and a fair amount of business keeps up in molasses. The outside refiners are at present showing no anxiety to trade in syrups unless at full prices, and consequently few sales are being made.

See pages 35 and 36 for Toronto, Montreal, St. John and Halifax prices current.

SPICES

Nutmegs are firm owing to strong cable advices from the East, where the stocks are reported to be exhausted. Pepper is steady and in fair demand. The other lines are moving out steadily at unchanged prices.

SUGAR.

There has been an advance of 10c. per 100 lb. all round in the prices of sugar for the Provinces of Quebec, Ontario and Manitoba this week. All refiners are firm in their views at the advance, and the prices are still believed to be abnormally low. Raw sugars for the week have advanced 1-16c. and business has been transacted on the basis of 3 11-16c. for 96 deg. centrifugals delivered in New York. Transactions there are rather small owing to the firmness in the ideas of the holders, 3¾c. now being asked for 96 deg. centrifugals. Should this appreciation be affected the margin of the refiners in the market of the United States will be reduced to about 45c. This is exceptionally low and it is believed it would not cover the cost of refining. However, a slight advance in American refined is anticipated in the near future, as the Californian beet shipments have been withdrawn from the market.

Cable advices quote 88 deg. beet sugar at 7s. 6¾d. f.o.b. Hamburg, or an advance of 2¼d. for the week. This quotation is equal to the parity of $3.88 for 96 deg. in New York. The receipts for the week at the four United States ports amounted to 50,583 tons, and the meltings were 31,000 tons, leaving the total stock in the four ports at 185,215 tons, as against 165,583 tons last week and 173,508 tons last year. The stocks in Europe are 1,182,519 tons, as against 942,655 tons last year at the same uneven dates, and 1,377,900 tons at the even date of October 1, 1902.

Ontario beet sugar from the Berlin and Wallaceburg refineries is now offered to the trade and is in the hands of some Toronto wholesale dealers. These sugars are offered on the same terms as the eastern, and are quoted at the same prices as the Redpath and St. Lawrence granulated. The base price is $3.80 f.o.b. Montreal and $3.85 f.o.b. Toronto per 100 lb.

TEAS.

A fairly active business has been doing in Indian and Ceylon black and green teas during the week and the prices of these are gaining strength here on the reports of hardening markets in London, Eng. Higher prices are now asked, as cables from London on November 15 and 17 show an advance of ¾d., or 1½c. on black teas at and below 6d. Finer teas are, in some cases, stronger, and those of good flavored that were quoted at 10d. are now worth 11½d. to 1s. 1d. Similar teas that were worth 7d. are now held at 8½d. Mail advices from London stated that a better tone was generally noticeable in Indian teas, and the bidding was not quite so restricted. The market there seemed to be affected by advices from India, stating that there was a strong probability of the season closing early, and this, with the small outturns during October, seems to indicate that the crop will be considerably smaller than expected. There was a recovering in the market for all grades of Ceylons, except the commonest descriptions. For the month the offering of Indian teas were heavier than a year ago. The supplies of Ceylon tea have been only of moderate amount and the volume of business passing in China teas has been small, but in the latter, prices show no important change.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

CURRANTS.—The primary currant markets, according to latest advices, are stiffening a little. The local business is moderate in volume at unchanged prices.

We quote: Fine Filiatras, 5½c. up; Patras, 6¼ to 6¾c. and Vostizzas, 7 to 8c.

VALENCIA RAISINS.—A fairly good demand is reported for Valencia raisins. Additional supplies of fine off-stalk and selected have come forward and prices are a little easier in consequence. Some of the Spanish houses, however, have notified their customers that they will not be able to completely fill their orders, and one house, it is said, is short 10,000 boxes. We quote as follows: Fine off-stalk, 7 to 8c.; selected, 7½ to 9½c. and selected layers, 9c. per lb.

SULTANA RAISINS.—There is not a great demand as yet for Sultana raisins. The prices are unchanged. We quote 9 to 13c. per lb.

DATES.—Stocks of jobbers here are now about complete with the dates of this year's crop, and a fairly active market is now reported. Hallowees are worth 5½ to 7½c.; Sairs, 4½c. and Fards, 7½ to 8c. per lb.

PRUNES.—Coast advices report a slow movement of the early sales of the large sizes of prunes. A satisfactory number of orders are coming in on the local market and the prices are steady. Quotations are as follows: Californian prunes, 100-110s, 4c.; 90-100s, 5 to 5½c.; 80-90s, 6 to 6½c.; 70-80s, 6½ to 7c.; 60-70s, 7 to 7½c.; 50-60s, 8 to 8½c.; 40-50s, 8¾ to 10c. per lb.

CALIFORNIAN SEEDED RAISINS.—A scarcity of cars is causing delays in the shipping forward of seeded raisins. The prices on the Coast have advanced 1c. per lb. The local trade continues fair. Prices are unchanged. We quote: 7½ to 8c. for 3-crown and 8 to 8½c. for 4-crown seeded raisins.

CALIFORNIAN EVAPORATED FRUITS.—An active market for peaches and apricots continues. The prices are as follows: Peaches, 9 to 11c. and apricots, 9 to 13c. per lb.

GREEN FRUITS.

Trade in fruits this week is moderate with no special features to note in any line. There is still quite an export demand for apples at the present quotations with no indications of an advance in prices. The market for oranges is showing an improvement. ### BUTTER AND CHEESE.

BUTTER.—Not a large quantity of choice qutter is coming in this week, but what is arriving is finding a ready sale. The export movement still keeps up and the market in England has improved for choice creamery-made goods and is firmer with a tendency to advance. ### POULTRY AND GAME.

SEEDS.

There is not much doing in any lines on the list of seeds this week. For red clover, at outside stations, $6.50 to $6.75 will be paid. Alsike is worth $6.50 to $7 and timothy is nominal at $1.50 to $1.75. Higher prices will be paid for samples of extra fine quality, while inferior and lower grades would have to be bought at lower prices than the above to yield a fair margin of profit.

All grades of refined sugars have advanced 10c. per 100 lb.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, November 20, 1902.

GROCERIES.

THIS has been a very busy week among the wholesale grocers, and shipments have been exceedingly heavy. Among the changes are Canadian cheap pickles, in bottles and wood, the former being 10c. per dozen higher and the latter 5c. per gallon higher. The cordage companies have cancelled the trade discount, and are now selling at a net price, which means an advance of about $\frac{5}{8}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$c. per lb. on sisal ropes. "Anchor" brand compound lard has been reduced $\frac{1}{2}$c., and ham and bacon are also $\frac{1}{2}$c. lower. Canadian and American coal oils have gone up 1c., prices now being: Silver Star, 17$\frac{1}{2}$c.; Imperial Acme, 19c.; Standard Acme, 21c.; Pratt's Astral, 22c. Draft cod, which is still scarce on the market, is selling at 3$\frac{3}{8}$c. per pound. Canned corn and peas and string beans have been advanced in price.

SUGAR.

On Tuesday morning all sugars went up 10c. for Quebec, Ontario and Manitoba. Previous to this, on the 12th inst., there was a decline of 5c. At present No. 1 granulated sells for $3.80 and No. 2 for $3.60, while yellow sugars range from $3.15 for No. 1 to $3.65 for extra bright. There is a good business doing.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There has been no change in the market for corn syrups, which are moving somewhat slowly. Prices are as follows: In bbls., 3c.; in half bbls., 3$\frac{1}{8}$c.; in $\frac{1}{4}$ bbls., 3$\frac{3}{4}$c.; in 38$\frac{1}{2}$-lb. pails, $1.40 and 25-lb. pails, $1.10. Barbados molasses is unchanged in price. There is a moderate inquiry. We quote: Barbados, 23 to 24c.; New Orleans, 16$\frac{1}{2}$ to 17c.; Antigua, 24c. and Porto Rico, 38c. per gallon.

SPICES.

The market for nutmegs is stronger and prices are expected to rule somewhat higher. There is a sufficient supply, the good demand being accountable for the firmer feeling. A decreasing production, however, is reported in both the East and West Indies. In other lines there has been no change of importance, and our quotations are as follows: Nutmegs, 35 to 55c. per lb., as to size; penang mace, 45 to 50c. per lb., as to quality; pimento, ground, 12$\frac{1}{2}$ to 15c.; cloves, 15 to 25c.; pepper, ground, black, 17 to 22c., according to grade; white, 25 to 27c.; ginger, whole Cochin, 15 to 17c.; Japan, 13 to 14c.; Jamaica, 16 to 20c.; Afghan, 12 to 13c.; ground, Japan, 15c.; Cochin, 16 to 17c.; Jamaica, 20 to 22c.; and Afghan, 13 to 14c.

TEAS.

Low-grade Ceylon and Indian black teas have advanced about 1½c. during the past few days, and the tone of the market is firmer. There is a good demand for Ceylons, and shipments this week to country points have been quite heavy. Several arrivals of Japan teas at this market are reported and a fairly good business is doing at continued firm prices. Green teas are still firm.

CANNED GOODS.

Californian canned apricots and cherries are now on the market in 2½-lb. cans. The apricots are quoted at $2.55 per dozen; white cherries, $3.10 and black cherries, $2.80. Tomatoes at the present price of $1.50 went too fast, the jobbers say, and they have been advanced 10c. per dozen. With one large dealer, Simcoes are the only brand in stock, and they are quoted at $1.75, at which price they are reported to be going well. Corn has advanced 10 to 15c. per dozen. There has been some demand from American buyers, and a fair amount of business transpired. It is expected that corn will go as hign as $1 before long. Green peas are up 7½c. and string beans are 5c. higher. We quote: Tomatoes, $1.60 to $1.75; corn, 95c.; peas, 90c. to $1.27½ string beans, 87½c. to 90c.; strawberries, $1.45 to $1.60; blueberries, $1.25; raspberries, $1.45 to $1.60; gooseberries, $1.45 to $1.60; pears, 2's, $1.60 to $1.70; 3's, $2.10 to $2.15; peaches, 2's, $1.65 to $1.70; 3's, $2.50 to $2.75; 3-lb. apples, 85 to 90c.; gallon apples, $2.10 to $2.20; 2-lb. sliced pineapples, $2.20 to $2.30; grated pineapples, $2.50; pumpkins, $1 per doz.; spinach, $1.50; sugar beets, 95c. to $1.00; salmon, pink, 92 to 95c.; spring, $1.25; Rivers Inlet red sockeye, $1.30; Fraser River red sockeye, $1.40.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

CURRANTS.—The local market is firmer in sympathy with the primary market. There has been no advance in prices here. Quotations are: Fine Filiatras, 5⅛ to 5½c. in cases; cleaned, 5⅝ to 5¾c.; in 1-lb. cartons, 6½ to 7c.; finest Vostizzas, 6¼ to 7c.

MALAGA RAISINS.—Malaga table raisins have advanced 2s. on the primary market, and the present selling prices on the local market are low. There is a good demand. Importers this year have not been as busy as usual, buyers having decided to try and avoid any slump after the holiday season. Quotations are as follows: London layers, $1.50 to $1.60; "Connoisseur Clusters," $2.10 to $2.20; ½'s, 65 to 70c.; "Royal Buckingham Clusters," $3.15 to $3.25; ¼'s, $1; "Excelsior Windsor Clusters," $4.50 to $4.60; ¼'s, $1.30 to $1.40.

FIGS.—A Smyrna cable recently received quoted 43s. per cwt. for regular proportions on figs. Only 90 cases were offered at that figure. Locally there is no change. Figs are none too plentiful and this year's prices are about 20c. per tapnet higher than those of 1901. We quote as follows: Eleme figs, 10½ to 20c. per lb., according to size; Comadres, $1.20 per tapnet.

NUTS

No changes in prices have been made on the local market during the week. There is no quotable change. The market continues active. Draft cod is now on the market and is selling at 3⅝c. per lb. It is still scarce. Our quotations follow: Haddies, 6 to 7c.; smoked herring, 9c. per box; fresh haddock and cod, 3½c. per lb.; dore, 7 to 7½c.; pike, 6c.; halibut, 12c.; salmon, 15c.; No. 1 herring, Nova-Scotian, $5.50 per bbl and $3 per half-bbl.; No. 1 Holland herring, $6.50 per half-bbl.; No. 1 Scotch herring, $6.50 per half barrel and 95c. per keg; Holland herring, 70 to 80c. per keg; No. 1 green codfish, $5.50 to $5.75 and mackerel, $20 per barrel; boneless cod, 1 and 2-lb. blocks, 6c. per lb.; loose boneless cod, 5c. per lb. in 40-lb. boxes; dried codfish, $4 to $4.50 per 100-lb. bundle; British-Columbian salmon, $12.00 per barrel; standard bulk oysters, $1.40 per gallon; Marshall's kippered herring, $1.15 per dozen; Canadian kippered, $1.00 per dozen; Canadian ¼ sardines, $4 per 100; canned Cove oysters, No. 1 size, $1.30 per doz.; canned Cove oysters, No. 2 size, $2.20 per doz.; Malpeque shell oysters, $6 to $8 per barrel.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

BUTTER.—The market still maintains its firmness and sellers seem to be rather undecided as to what price to quote for spot transactions. Fine creamery is scarce and as high as 21c. was paid for it on this market. Finest quality Quebecs is quoted at 21 to 21¼c., and finest Townships at 21½c.

Shipments of butter from the port of Montreal during the past week amounted to 5,269 packages. This is 11,590 less than for the corresponding week of last year. Since May 1 the total shipments have been 499,094 packages, or 94,693 more than for the same period last season.

CHEESE.—While the volume of business is not very great the market continues in a healthy condition. It is reported that holders are not over eager to sell as they anticipate better prices in the future. One large house in Montreal offered to sell Quebecs at 12¼c. and Ontarios at 12½c. The ideas of other sellers did not coincide with this concern's and demanded ¼c. and higher.

Cheese shipments for the week ending November 15 were 30,996 boxes, being 11,874 boxes less than for the same week last year. Since May 1 there have been 1,902,928 boxes shipped, or 268,751 boxes more than for the same period last year.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

POULTRY.—While there is a good demand for poultry the supply is not equal to it. The market is firm in tone. All arrivals are eagerly sought for. There is a scarcity of really choice fat turkeys, and what are now coming forward are selling at 10½ to 11c. If choice birds were procurable 12½ to 13c. would willingly be paid. Choice chickens are also in demand and would bring 10½ to 11c., while ordinary stock sells for 8 to 10c. Ducks are quoted at 9 to 11c. and geese at 7 to 8c. per lb.

BEANS.—The situation in beans is unchanged. The market is firm. Prices are $2 per bushel for primes in car lots and $2.05 to $2.10 in a jobbing way.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.—Trade in maple products is slow and the prices are unchanged. We quote: Syrup, in large tins, 70 to 80c.; in small tins, 50 to 60c.; in wood, 5 to 5½c. per lb. Sugar, 8½ to 10c. per lb.

HONEY.—Business continues slow in honey. Prices are steady. We quote as follows: White clover in comb, 11 to 11½c. and white strained, 8 to 8½c. per lb.

POTATOES.—The market is steady under a good demand from local and western purchasers. Trade is unusually active. Prices are much as before. Carlots of choice varieties sold for 72 to 75c.; ordinary stock, 63 to 68c. in a jobbing way.

ASHES.—There is very little doing in this article. We quote: First pots, $4.35 to $4.40; seconds, $3.60 to $3.70; pearls, $6.25 per 100 lb.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

FLOUR.—Manitoba spring wheat patents and strong bakers' flours have advanced 10c. The market is active with a good demand for spring wheat flours. We quote: Choice Manitoba spring wheat patents, $4.20; seconds, $3.90; strong bakers', $3.50; straight rollers, $3.50 to $3.60; winter wheat patents, $3.75 to $4.00.

GRAIN.—Buckwheat is still easy and is lower this week. Oats are 1c. higher and the tone of the market is firm. We quote: Rye, 56c.; peas, 80c.; corn, 70c.; buckwheat, 56 to 57½c.; barley, 49c.; oats, 37 to 37½c. ex-store.

OATMEAL.—The price of rolled oats has advanced considerably. The market is firm under a fairly good demand. We quote: In small quantities, barrels, $4.60; bags, $2.25. In carlots, barrels are now quoted at $4.35 and bags, $2.10 to $2.12½.

FEED.—Prices of bran and shorts have advanced all round from $1 to $2. Owing to limited offerings the market is firm. We quote: Manitoba bran, $17 to $18; shorts, $19 to $20; Ontario bran, $17 to $18; shorts, $19 to $20; mouillie, $23 to $30, according to the quality.

BALED HAY.—There is a good business doing at unchanged prices. We quote: No. 1 timothy, $9 to $9.50; No. 2, $8 to $8.75; clover, $7 to $7.50 per ton in carlots.

NOTES.

Sugar is 10c. higher.

Canadian cheap pickles have advanced.

An advance has been made in canned tomatoes, corn, peas, and string beans.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, N.B., November 16, 1902.

THE fall number of "The Canadian Grocer" is to hand since our last report was written and fully sustains the high standard already attained by this paper in its special numbers. This is the verdict of the trade here, the very handsome cover calling out from all especial words of appreciation. Business here is particularly active. Merchants are at their wit's end to get their orders out promptly. In markets, there is little new. Beans have again turned upward. Sugar, in spite of a firm market, keeps very low. Hops are held firm at the advanced figures. Cream of tartar is again moving up.

OILS.—In burning oils the sale continues very large and prices are very firmly held. Lubricating oils are quiet, though a fair business is reported. There is little sale for paint oil, the market is easy and the outlook for spring is for lower prices. Turpentine is firmly held. Seal oil is unchanged. Cod oil has not been as freely received as in some years. The season is about over.

SALT.—In Liverpool coarse none has been landed for some time, but a fair stock is held and a cargo is due next week, about 7,000 bags. Prices are held firmly. In fine salt there is a fairly steady sale and the prices are unchanged. Canadian has the demand, and we now quote: Liverpool coarse, 55c. to 60c.; English factory-filled, 95c. to $1.00; Canadian fine, $1 per bag; cheese and butter salt, bulk, $2.40 per bbl.; 5-lb. bags, $2.75 to $2.85 per bbl.; 10-lb. bags, $2.60 to $2.65 per bbl.; 20-lb. wood boxes, 22-23c. each; 10-lb. wood boxes, 14c. each; cartons, $2 per case of two dozen; English bottled salt, $1.25 to $1.30 per doz.; mineral rock salt, 60c. per 100 lb. (Selected lumps.)

CANNED GOODS.—The short delivery of tomatoes is still of chief interest in the canned goods. Full prices are asked and there is no doubt the high figures will affect the demand. Eastern packers are as short as those in the west. There is some inquiry for both corn and peas, and the prices are held firm. Blueberries are firmly held at the full figures, there not being enough to go round. Squash is scarce and has some demand. Pumpkin are a light stock here and rather higher prices are expected. Pork and beans are quite full stock. In peaches and pears a new size is offered this season, in 2½-lb. tins. There are quite good stocks of gallon apples here. There is a firmer market. There is a larger stock of Singapore pineapples here than ever before and the market tends higher. Salmon are unchanged. In finnan haddies the demand is for the round tin. Herring are freely offered. Domestic sardines are quite light in supply. The western demand is good and prices keep low.

GREEN FRUITS.—Apples are freely offered. Very much of the Nova-Scotian stock is poor. Some nice Ontario apples have been received, chiefly Northern Spies. Jamaica oranges are freely offered, and lemons are higher. There is a good sale of the latter. Bananas are a very light business. Cranberries have a good demand, the imported being preferred, as they stand up better than the domestic. Little is done in sweet potatoes. In grapes, while a few Ontario are offered, Malagas are more freely bought. A few pears are still offered.

DRIED FRUITS.—This is the active line. There have been free arrivals of Californian prunes, evaporated apricots and peaches. Loose muscatels are daily expected, but seeded will be late. In raisins, prices tend upward. Currants are much lower than last season, but rather higher prices are looked for. The new dates received are of fine quality. Figs have a good sale and are held firm. Peels are freely sold, but stocks are not large. In evaporated apples there have been quite free arrivals, and prices are unchanged. Onions are lower and the market is overstocked. The western dealers killed the business by claiming a short supply early in the season.

DAIRY PRODUCE.—Eggs are more freely received and there is a better sale. The prices are firmer. Butter is also firmer and best stocks finds ready sale. Stocks are not large. Cheese is firm at the full figures and the stock is light.

SUGAR.—The low price continues. It is low simply on account of competition, as the price of raw is high in proportion to refined, and higher prices are looked for.

MOLASSES.—There is a steady sale at rather better figures. A fair stock is held, chiefly Porto Rico.

FISH.—Business is quiet. Dry cod are quite plentiful, but pollock are scarce and firm. Pickled herring are unchanged and the stocks are ample. Finnan haddies have a large business, chiefly for the west. Smoked herring are a very light supply, and high prices rule. Kippered herring are freely offered. We quote as follows: Haddies, 4½ to 5c.; smoked herring, 9½ to 10c.; fresh haddock and cod, 2 to 2½c.; boneless fish, 4 to 5c.; pollock, $1.60 to $1.70 per 100 lb.; pickled herring, $2 to $2.25 per ½ bbl.; dry cod, $3.25 to $3.35; pickled shad, per ½ bbl., $6.00.

FLOUR, FEED AND MEAL.—In flour, the prices are unchanged. A good business is done at full figures. Feed is scarce and rather higher, and there is a steady demand therefor. Oats and oatmeal are firmly held at rather higher prices. Beans have turned higher and a firm market rules. Barley is unchanged. Split and blue peas are still scarce. We quote as follows: Manitoba flour, $4.70 to $4.75; Ontario, $4.25 to $4.30; oatmeal, $4.50 to $4.60; cornmeal, $3.20 to $3.25; middlings, in small lots, $26 to $28; oats, 40 to 44c.; handpicked beans, $2.35 to $2.40; prime, $2.25 to $2.30; yellow eye beans, $2.80 to $3; split peas, $5.15 to $5.25; barley, $4.40 to $4.50; hay, $9 to $10.

ST. JOHN NOTES.

Bowman & Angevine are landing new Californian prunes.

Baird & Peters have received a further large shipment of their well-known brand of "Reindeer" lard.

Jones & Schofield received a large shipment of evaporated apricots and peaches this week, shipped by The J. K. Armsby Company.

"The Grocer" extends its sympathy to J. A. Tilton, one of our leading brokers. Mr. Tilton's brother died last week in Milwaukee. The funeral was held in this city this week and was very largely attended.

A. S. Bowman in conversation with "The Grocer" reports the largest sale of canned goods this season ever made by him, though for years he has sold very freely. Mr. Bowman represents The Simcoe Canning Co.

MONTREAL.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, Man., November 15, 1902.

BUSINESS shows few new features for the week. Trade is good, and the increasingly cold weather and the fair amount of sleighing is enabling farmers to get about better. Interest throughout the country is still centred in the wheat movement before navigation closes. Traffic is badly congested at nearly every point, and the number of cars passing the inspector's office is greatly diminished, not having averaged 200 per day for the week.

Probably owing to the difficulty in getting wheat marketed collections are not quite up to expectations this week, although they are on the whole good.

CANNED VEGETABLES.—The situation shows no improvement over last week. Heavy consignments of canned tomatoes are coming in from the American side, to fill orders already taken, but this is certainly no relief to the price. Jobbers are quoting $3.50 to $3.65, but even at these figures there is practically nothing in them for them. Corn is firmer in tone, though no actual advance is quoted, but it is doubtful if a carlot could be bought at $2 to $2.10, the prices at which corn is quoted. Peas are firm and unchanged at $2; beans at $1.75. In canned fruits there is moderate activity and no change in price.

CANNED MEATS.—These are fairly active, and a list of prices at which they are sold may be of interest: Corned beef, 1-lb., $1.70, do, 2-lb., $2.90; brawn, 2-lb., $2.80; roast beef, 1-lb., $1.65, do, 2-lb., $2.90; pigs' feet, boneless, 2-lb., $2.85; pigs' feet, whole, 1-lb., $1.15; chipped beef, 1-lb., $2.85, do, ½-lb., $1.70; boiled mutton, 1-lb., $1.95, do., 2-lb., $3.30; roast mutton, 1-lb., $1.95, do, 2-lb., $3.30; lunch tongue, 1-lb., Clark's, $3.25; do, 2-lb., do, $6.50; lunch tongue, 2-lb., Rex, $7.50; tongue, lunch, 1-lb., Clark's, $2.70; ox tongue, 1½-lb., Rex, $8.50; do, 1½-lb., Clark's, $6.80; do, 2-lb., Clark's, $7.35; veal loaf, 1-lb. tins, Libby's, $2.50, ½-lb. tins, Libby's, $1.25; ham loaf, 1-lb. tins, Libby's, $2.50; ham loaf, ½-lb. tins, Libby's, $1.25; beef loaf, 1-lb. tins, Libby's, $2.50; beef loaf, ½-lb. tins, Libby's, $1.25; cottage head cheese, 1-lb. tins, Libby's, $2.50; cottage loaf (veal), 1s, $2.25; cottage loaf (veal), ½s, $1.15; chicken loaf, ½-lb. tins, Libby's, $1.75; jellied hocks, 2-lb. tins, $2.85; premium soups, 1-lb. tins, Libby's, $1.10; Cambridge sausage, Clark's, 1-lb., round tin, $1.55; do, 2-lb. do, $3; Geneva sausage, 1-lb. square tins, $1.80; do, 2-lb. do, $3.15; turkey, 1-lb., Aylmer and Delhi brands, $2.40; chicken, 1-lb., Aylmer and Delhi brands, $2.40; duck, 1-lb., Aylmer and Delhi brands, $2.40; potted ham, ¼-lb., 55c.; do, ½-lb., $1.05; devilled ham, ¼-lb., 55c.; do, ½s, $1.10; potted tongue, ¼-lb., 50c.; do, ½-lb., $1.05; potted chicken, ¼-lb., 60c.; potted turkey, ¼-lb., 60c.; Armour's sliced ham, 1-lb., $3.25; Armour's sliced breakfast bacon, 1-lb., $3.25; Libby's sliced breakfast bacon, ½-lb., $1.75 per dozen; pate de foie gras, 7-oz., per tin, 50c.

CEREALS.—Rolled oats are still quoted at $1.75 for 80 standard, and granulated, $2.80 per sack of 98 lb.; cornmeal, $1.80; white beans, $2.40; split peas, $2.70; pearl barley, $3.35; pot barley, $2.20; rolled wheat, $2.25.

EVAPORATED AND DRIED FRUITS.—New Sultana raisins have arrived and prices are unchanged. Valencias are firm and unchanged. We quote: New crop, fine off-stalk, Valencia, per box, $2.25; muscatel, 2-crown, 7c.; ditto, 3-crown, 7½c.; ditto, 4-crown, 8c.; ditto, seeded, 1-lb. cartons, choice, 9½c.; ditto, seeded, 1-lb. cartons, fancy, 10c. per lb.

CURRANTS.—The market is active and the prices are unchanged. We quote: Fine Filiatras, 5c.; cleaned, 6c. and Vostizzas, in cases, 6c. per lb.

FIGS.—Choice cooking figs, in bags or tapnets, 4¾ to 5c.; apples, 7½ to 8c.; dried, 6¼c., with a rather weaker market.

SUGARS.—These are unchanged at $4.40 for granulated and $3.80 for bright yellows.

LOBSTERS.—The finer grades of lobsters are particularly scarce. Lobsters, in glass, are almost unobtainable. Burnham's, in New York, are practically the only people with a supply, and to bring them in from there would make the price prohibitive. The whole lobster market is high and firm.

MACKEREL.—Good Canadian mackerel is also scarce. It would seem as if the American market absorbed the best of the fish caught, leaving the inferior grades to the Canadian trade. At least, this is the view of some of the buyers here.

POULTRY.—Supplies are increasing and all offerings are now in the shape of dressed. Turkeys make a fair showing at 12½c.; geese and ducks, 10c. and chickens, 10 to 11c. per lb.

DAIRY MARKET.

BUTTER.—The situation shows no new features and prices are without change. Very little is being done.

CHEESE.—All stocks are now Ontario, and the price is firm at 13 to 13½c. per pound.

OTTAWA TRADE GOSSIP.

THE weather here has been wet all week, causing business to be very slow among retailers. Wholesalers are still pretty busy handling goods which are arriving every day this time of the year, but business is reported only fair with them.

Sugars advanced 10c. to-day, although since last week's report they had dropped 5c. The price now is $3.87 for granulated and $3.22 for yellows.

Raisins are reported to be firmer, and currants are the same as last week.

No change of importance has taken place worth mentioning, except that illuminating oil has advanced again. Best American is now 20c. and Prime White Canadian, 16c.

The tomato situation is about the same as last reported. You hear so many stories in regard to it that you don't know where you are. The prices quoted are from $1.50 to $2 per dozen. It is believed that after the excitement is over about $1.50 will be the price.

In green fruits, at the Exchange, the sale on Monday was a clean-up one and consisted mostly of No. 2 stock. Prices were fair. Lemons are very scarce and in few hands. The price is $3.50 to $4 per box. Cranberries have advanced to $10.50 per barrel for Cape Cod stock.

Flour and rolled oats are in good demand. We quote: Hungarian patent, $4.10; strong bakers', $3.80; Family, $3.70; rolled oats, 80s, $1.60 per bag. Potatoes are selling on the market here from 75 to 80c., and are very scarce.

Coffee trade is reported brisk with the wholesalers here; also a demand for spices. Buyers are replenishing their stocks for the Christmas trade.

NOTES.

H. G. Gardiner, of Kilgour Bros., is in the city.

Frank Mallette, of Park & Blackwell, is on his regular trip here.

The executive committee of the Ottawa Grocers' Association are arranging for a euchre party to be held in Booth's Hall in a couple of weeks.

J. McGregor, of J. C. Wilson, Montreal, is going the rounds to-day. He reports a drop in wrapping paper by his firm, owing to their being out of the combine.

The Bank of British North America have purchased the Leslie property on Sparks street, right in the centre of the business portion, and intend moving at an early date from Wellington street, where they have been for years.

G. W. Hunt, of the Ottawa Fruit Exchange, left a few days ago for Winnipeg with the intention of sizing up the situation so as to establish an exchange there. Western shippers as well as Californian, Jamaica and importers of Mediterranean fruit have been pressing Mr. Hunt for the past two years to do this, claiming that it is the best way to get a big fruit trade in the West. If it works as well as it has in Ottawa under the management of Mr. Hunt, it will be a boon to merchants and consumers in the West. A few years ago only wealthy people could buy fruit in Ottawa, as the business was in the hands of a few who only brought in a limited supply. Since the inception of the Exchange, and selling by auction every day, it has become an enormous business.

The Ottawa Cheese and Butter Board held their annual banquet on Friday night last in the Hotel Gilmour. The function was largely attended by public men, professors, dairymen, buyers, sellers and exporters. Its success reflects great credit upon the committee in charge. The spacious dining-room was tastefully decorated, the menu was the very best, and a "Kipling" toast list had been prepared.

The annual report of the season was presented by the treasurer, W. H. Dwyer, which showed that the season just closed has been the most successful in the history of the Board, since its organization five years ago. The total number of cheese boarded amounted to 32,814 boxes made up of 21,651 white and 11,163 colored. The highest price paid was 11⅜c. and the lowest 9¼c., or an average price of 10⅛c. per lb. It was estimated that about $266,000 were paid to farmers in the Ottawa Valley and district alone during the past season. A report from the inspector was also received dealing with the making of cheese in each factory.

The toast list consisted of "Our Dairying Industry," "Agriculture," "The City of Ottawa," "Export Trade," and "Transportation." All were responded to by eloquent speakers, after which a hearty vote of thanks was tendered to the chairman, John R. Reid, president of the Cheese Board. The banquet was then brought to a close by singing "God Save the King."

EARLY-CLOSING IN MONTREAL.

J. B. E. POIRIER, secretary of the Grocery Clerks' Association of Montreal, has written to a local paper as follows, regarding the movement for early closing in that city, to which we have at different times referred :

Sir,—The clerks of Montreal of different lines of business have organized themselves into an association called the "Early-Closing Society," of which I have been elected chairman.

The object of our organization is to induce our fellow-merchants and patrons to close their stores at a reasonable hour after 6 p.m. The movement has already been endorsed by the Grocers' Association of Montreal, which has asked its members to close their stores at 7 p.m. every Thursday night. The boot and shoe merchants and the retail dry goods merchants have also joined cause with us. The good work has already started and being put in operation in different parts of the city, especially in Point St. Charles. The merchants there are well contented because they can close their stores one night a week and are able to enjoy themselves with their families like other good citizens, and they hope that the movement will be kept up. Only they seem to have a certain fear that the movement will have a hitch, as one merchant, who has signed the agreement and has closed during three months, threatens to open his store on Thursdays, notwithstanding his agreement to join the others. This would be very serious, as one man opening his place of business forces his neighbors to do so as well, and so the whole line has to open up. As this merchant resides on Wellington street, right in the centre of business, I hope that he will stand by his agreement and not force all his confreres to open their places of business just on account of his opening his.

I would ask all ladies and buyers who generally do their shopping at night to be good enough to buy all their requisites during the day hours. By their doing so the merchants will have no pleasure in keeping their stores open at night. This is a favor I demand in the name of all the clerks of Montreal. The motto of all lady-buyers should be : "Day-shopping."

J. B. E. POIRIER,
Chairman of the "Early-Closing Society."

CANADA AT FOREIGN FAIRS.

THE following exhibitions in which Canada is expected to take part will be of great interest to our readers. There are to be two in South Africa, one at Cape Town a year hence, and one at Johannesburg during the latter part of 1904. Canada has not yet decided, as a Government, in participating. but communication is being held with Lord Strathcona regarding the scope and importance of these two exhibitions. And action must be delayed until these communications are received.

The Government will be represented at the Osaka, Japan, Exhibition in 1903, and will occupy its own building. The Government will make a large display of agricultural and food products and in fruits and forestry, and the rest of the space, which is small, will be devoted to manufactured articles. It is somewhat difficult to determine what articles to exhibit to promote trade between two countries, but articles selected by the Government and commission will have freight charges paid, and an agreement made as to value so that in case of loss the matter could be adjusted without difficulty.

The Government has a collective exhibit or St. Louis in 1904 of our four great natural resources, namely, agriculture, horticulture, forestry and minerals. The rules and regulations preclude a collective exhibition of manufactures, as all articles have to be shown under their respective groups. Space will be supplied free to manufacturers who apply through the com mission, and any information can be obtained at the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. Mr. Hutchison, Exhibition Commissioner, will be in Toronto this week to confer with intending exhibitors.

A GREAT SALE.

A line of goods that no up-to-date grocer should overlook for his Christmas and holiday trade is the assortment of crystallized fruits from France which Henri Jonas & Co. advertised in last week's GROCER. From that advertisement many inquiries were received, and the goods sold rapidly. It would be difficult to find goods put up in a more tasteful style than these. The colorings of the different fruits are natural, and in an assorted box the contrasting shades produce a very pretty effect. They will make a striking display, and practically sell themselves. All sorts of fruits are put up in this way. They are very delicious. They are now going very quickly, and no one in the trade should fail to stock some of them.

There being a great scarcity in labor The Ontario Sugar Company have sent 150 Chinamen and a large number of Indians to the sugar-beet farms throughout Ontario.

But enough Allison Coupon Books to last a year won't cost as much as the amount you will lose by the carelessness of your clerks in forgetting to "charge up" numerous small purchases; and disputed pass-book entries, where you have to allow your customer's kick, or lose him.

IF A MAN WANTS CREDIT

for $10, give him a $10 Allison Coupon Book, charge him with $10, and there you are. No trouble at all. If he buys a plug of tobacco for ten cents, just tear off a ten-cent coupon—that's all. And so on for all his purchases up to limit of the book. NO PASS BOOK. NO WRITING. NO TIME LOST. NO KICKING. There are other Coupon Books, of course, but why not have the best? # INTERIOR AND WINDOW DISPLAYS.

MANY grocers are now only beginning to perceive in this generation the value of interior displays in building up their businesses. Some of the ones who have achieved the greatest success in their vocation recognized long ago the importance of these displays as a means of selling their goods, and took advantage of the fact. The customer comes in the store to buy sugar, perhaps, and on a stand or the counter some breakfast food which he has seen advertised extensively, and determines then and there to bring it home and give it a trial. The purchase is made, but if the customer had not seen the article in the display it would probably never have been sold. Hundreds of cases like the above occur every day, and the grocer should be on the watch continually to take in as much custom as he can.

INSIDE AND OUTSIDE DISPLAYS.

As a means of showing off goods to advantage interior displays far surpass those made outside. The goods which are put out in front of the store generally catch the dirt and dust which is sure to be blown from the street, which much impairs their value. People dislike to see food exposed to the sun, the wind, the dust and the rain, and unless outside displays are well looked after the store front is disfigured. Goods standing outside are liable to be stolen; indeed, many grocers lose a good deal of money through their goods being taken in this way.

A Simple, but Attractive Display of Spices, Pickles and Vinegars.

GOODS ARE KEPT CLEAN

Interior displays avoid all the above loss. Goods can be kept clean and away from the sun, dust, and rain and are in better condition for selling. Customers often dislike to have delivered them goods that have been outside, as they are often dirty, perhaps, have lost their freshness, but if they are displayed inside and proper care taken of them, they are kept in better condition, and so will give the user more satisfaction.

CHANGING INSIDE DISPLAYS.

In regard to inside displays, they should be changed once a week, or at least once in two weeks. The goods should always be kept well dusted, and the flys kept away from them as much as possible. Some fine cotton netting thrown over the display will serve to exclude the insects and at the same time the goods can be seen plainly. The grocer should always have handy a quantity of the articles shown so that when a customer orders anything shown in the display he will not have to remove it from the stand, thus preventing the display from being disarranged.

USE OF STANDS.

A stand is always suitable for displays inside of the store. It is useful, especially for canned goods, pickles, bottled goods, and goods in jars and packages. There should be four or five shelves in the stand to enable a large quantity of stuff being displayed on it without too much crowding, and it should be kept clean and neatly painted or stained, a dark color being preferable. A stand is always handy, occupies little space, and can easily be removed to any part of the store desired.

TABLES AND COUNTERS.

Many grocers utilize tables and counters a good deal for their displays, and nice piles of canned goods and similar articles can be made on these, but it is not wise for a grocer to take up too much of his counter with displays of goods as he is thus often much hampered for room and often the goods are knocked over and damaged by being in the way of someone. Showcases also are much used in the store for displaying goods and are especially useful for such stuff as candies, etc.

In the fall and winter the grocer usually displays canned goods, bottled goods and such articles, and in the summer, fruits. He should always be seasonable in his displays and not crowd up too much with them his floor space. Also, by adopting interior displays in his store the grocer can better utilize this floor space and carry a much larger stock of goods than otherwise he would be able to do.

A PICKLING WINDOW.

When the autumn season commences the house wife's thoughts turn in the direction of pickles, and what is passing in the housewife's mind is naturally reflected in that of the grocer, and he strives, by means of an attractive display in his windows, to show that he has in stock just what is wanted for the manufacture of the finest pickles.

The grocer who arranged the display from which our cut is taken has been very successful along these lines, and has just put in an attractive window that is sure to draw custom, as not only is it well and effecti.ely arranged, but he impresses on the public mind, by way of neat and plainly-written tickets, that his vinegar is pure and not acid, and his spices are of the best—two very import and points to consider in making pickles.

It would be superfluous to describe the arrangement of the barrels, etc., in the window, as the cut explains itself.

The up-to-date merchant would be likely to draw attention to this display by means of some special advertisement.

TO DETECT OLEOMARGARINE.

IN New York grocers and others have to be careful in selecting their butter as there is lots of oleomargarine on the market. The following from The New York Herald tells how to distinguish the two products :

"It seems curious to me that so few people are able to tell the difference between butter and oleomargarine," said an old butter tester a few days ago. "There is a very simple and easy method of distinguishing them.

"The test of which I speak will serve when a good chemist would fail after he has made a chemical analysis, for good oleomargarine has very nearly the same components butter has, even under chemical analysis. There is, you know, good and bad oleomargarine, as well as different qualities of butter.

"Doubtless you have noticed, after you have eaten a piece of very fat meat or gravy made from fat meat that there remains in your mouth a greasy taste. It may not be strong, but it is distinct. This is also true of cheap ice cream, in which lard is used. Well, this same taste remains in your mouth after you have eaten oleomargarine.

"When an expert dealer considers the purchase of a lot of butter, he has one of the packages opened. From this he takes a sample about as big as one of the patties that are served at restaurants. Placing this in his mouth he mashes it around and lets it grow soft from the heat of his mouth, until it is what you might call 'mushy.' He then ejects it.

"If this substance is oleomargarine a lardy taste will remain. There will be a little grease sticking to the membranes of his mouth, no matter how finely the imitation may be made. If it is pure butter there will be no taste or grease.

"That is a test which any housekeeper can make at her grocer's. After she has tried it several times the grocer will learn to offer her nothing but pure butter."

SAMPLES OF NEW SUGAR.

"The Canadian Grocer" has received from Hugh Blain, of The Eby, Blain Co., Toronto, president of The Ontario Sugar Company, Berlin, Ont., a sample of the granulated sugar made at their factory from sugar beets grown in Canada. The sugar is of excellent quality, and those who have tested it have everything nice to say about it. The capacity of the factory is 60 tons per day, and cost $600,000. The managing director is J. S. Williams, and James Fowler, of Toronto, is secretary.

In the Minister of Finance's official statement of the Colonial Conference there appears the following: The Canadian representatives contended that if Canada gave British goods a preference, their Canadian goods reaching the British markets must be exempt from existing duties. Unless such a reciprocal arrangement was agreed on, then Canada must be free to take such other steps as circumstances must justify."

VICE-ROYALTY VISITS CANADA'S GREAT CANNING FACTORY.

HIS EXCELLENCY the Governor-General is evidently desirous of thoroughly familiarizing himself with those Canadian industries which tend to promote the prosperity of his people, especially the agricultural classes.

The other day, accompanied by his aide-de-camp, Capt. Bell, he visited the head office of The Simcoe Canning Company, at Simcoe. This company, by the way, is the most extensive one of its kind in this country, possessing several factories, nearly all of which are situated in the peninsula between Lakes Erie and Ontario, known as "The Garden of Canada."

His Excellency spent an hour in and about the factory at Simcoe, inquiring eagerly into the detail of the manufacture of the different products, and he evinced marked interest in following the processing from the time the raw materials went to the operators' hands until they came out canned and ready for shipment.

His Excellency expressed himself as being very much pleased and impressed with his visit, and also stated that a visit to the canning factory should have been included in the itinerary of the Boer delegates to Canada.

Before leaving, the Governor-General expressed a desire to have some samples of canned goods to take with him, and agreeable to his request, these were sent to his private car.

Bell & McCaul's general store, Dominion City, Man., was robbed of about $25 last week.

The merit of the Black Teas has established them high in popular estimation. They are drunk wherever the English language is spoken. They follow the flag and drive out less meritorious growths.

But some consumers are wedded to light drawing kinds, with pale liquor and without the full body and richness of the black kinds.

The Green Teas of Ceylon and India are made expressly for this trade. In Make, Quality and Price they challenge comparison with other growths.

They are grown, prepared and packed with the same skill by the British Planters who have revolutionized the black tea trade.

Our latest biscuit, LEIBNIZ, is the kind that people take a second one of, when they are passed around—the kind your customers will ask for again and again. Leibniz is perhaps the tastiest biscuit we have ever produced. You'll find it crisp, sweet, dainty and light —48 to the pound. It's a biscuit we're proud of. Ask the travelling men about it.

GOOD ADVERTISING.

Notes by Miss Nora Laugher, Toronto.

DON'T rail against your competitor in your ads. If you do, people will form the conclusion that he is hurting your business, and this would hardly be possible unless he handles a better grade of goods, or by larger purchases can offer his goods at lower prices.

Remember that the more you advertise an honest article the more it will advertise you. Honesty is the best policy both in the matter of reliable goods and the way you advertise them.

John Wanamaker, that king of advertisers, has always pursued that policy. He is a living illustration of what fair methods and honest dealing can do. Many merchants would think it a little overdone in an instance that came before my notice recently. A Toronto gentleman, with whom I am well acquainted and whose veracity cannot be doubted, while visiting New York called at a large store, intending to purchase a tea-gown to take home as a present to his wife. The saleswoman displayed some very handsome gowns, but the one he set his heart upon purchasing was quite unlike any of the rest—a very artistic garment priced at $27. He selected this one and tendered the amount for payment. As he intended taking the next train home to Toronto, he, of course, desired to carry the parcel with him. He was rather chagrined, after waiting some few minutes to see the saleswoman return to him, not with a neat parcel, but with the chosen gown still hanging over her arm. He was still more surprised when she explained that he could not purchase that particular tea-gown, as it had a tiny flaw at the extreme edge of the hem. The $27 was handed back to him and at first he began to think himself the victim of a small swindle. Wanamaker did not wish to sell the gown at the price. He demanded to see the supposed blemish. It seemed so trifling when brought to his notice that he still wished to possess the gown at the figure named, but the saleswoman declared she would not be allowed to sell it at any price. He persuaded her to go back to the manager of that department, and was exceedingly surprised to find that, as he desired it, they would make the price $17. Of course, he took the gown, and as it was too long and had to be shortened, the tiny hole in the hem did not signify.

Honesty in business is not, however, confined to the United States, nor to the great Wanamaker. It is the basic principle of hundreds of large and small stores in our own fair Dominion, and they find it a paying principle, too. Not long ago in one of the largest departmental stores in Toronto, a young man one bargain day (no doubt instructed by his better-half), purchased a pretty and jaunty little coat for his wife. When it arrived home it proved to be a little too large, and was returned to the big store for alteration. Unfortunately, by mistake, it was sent away to another lady, some miles out of town, and for the time seemed irretrievably lost. The young man was naturally much annoyed at its non-arrival. Upon interviewing the manager of the mantle department, he was shown several other coats with the request that he would select one. He did so, selecting a stylish coat priced $11, and was agreeably surprised to find that he was not charged one cent extra. He had purchased a coat for $3 in the first instance and the slight delay had not really inconvenienced his wife: yet here was one offered him, better and smarter in every respect and out of new stock which had just arrived from New York. In due course the first coat was returned, and he was at once advised by mail that he could have it also at the price originally paid.

The Thanksgiving turkey is hardly digested when the progressive merchant begins to consider the all-important question of Christmas advertising. He naturally desires to do even more business than he did the previous year. He realizes that his large volume of trade must increase if he gives both goods and ads. the careful study they merit. Good advertising and good display not only bring a greatly increased business, but give a chance to swell the number of regular customers when prices and selling methods are what they should be.

Many merchants have the erroneous idea that the easiest time of the year to advertise is Christmas time. They think that people are in the buying humor and that anything in the way of an advertisement is good enough to catch the public. Those people never made a greater mistake. Don't do slipshod advertising at Christmas. Don't do it at any time of the year.

Do your best to help people in their purchasing. Have your goods displayed in the most attractive and suggestive manner. Display your gift-goods for man, woman and child separately — a great aid to buyers. If your advertising space is large enough talk various lines and keep each line apart with a separate heading. Tell why each is especially desirable if you have room. Take each line and present its good qualities as forcibly as possible. Talk it up plain and well.

The progressive merchant will see the wisdom of good booklet, folder, or circular advertising as an aid to his newspaper advertising. I believe that at no time of the year is a well-gotten-up booklet or concise, well-written circular more valuable than just before or at the commencement of the Christmas trade season. A highly important part of advertising nowadays is the booklet, folder or circular. But it must tell just the right story—it must contain a maximum of description in a minimum of space. Attractive type and good illustrations must be used in the booklet to secure first attention, then careful perusal, otherwise the booklet will be 'flat, stale, and unprofitable," and soon find its proper level in the waste-paper basket.

With regard to Christmas newspaper advertising, it is a good idea to make a list of the various gift-goods—make a separate list, one for man, one for woman, one for child. State prices on list if possible.

Many merchants find it feasible to offer to lay aside any article upon payment of a small deposit and deliver at the customer's convenience. Remember that at no time of the year is satisfactory service and prompt delivery so much appreciated as during the holiday time. It is well to promise this in your ads. and it is better still to keep your promise.

WINDSOR RETAIL MERCHANTS.

At the annual meeting of the Windsor, Ont., branch of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, held recently at Windsor, the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, A. E. Edgar; vice-president, C. C. Schumacher; secretary, B. G. Davis; treasurer, Geo. H. Wilkinson; auditor, A. J. McTavish. The board of directors will consist of the officers and the following merchants: James Pennington, J. E. D'Avignon, N. J. Clinton, W. A. Sweet and Geo. H. Nairn.

President A. E. Edgar.

The meeting was an enthusiastic one and the association promises to make itself known in the welfare of the city.

The association has done much in the past year in the way of removing objectionable schemes from trade and spreading sociability among its members.

ON THE QUI VIVE FOR CHRISTMAS.

Up-to-date merchants do everything in their power to facilitate buyers in selecting gift goods during the holiday season. For displaying small articles attractively nothing is half so appropriate as Boeckh's adjustable display tables, which can be used as either tables or shelves. They are the most useful things extant for the Christmas store, and are as ornamental as they are useful. United Factories, Limited, Toronto, have issued a booklet of these goods which is cheerfully furnished to dealers on request.

A PIONEER IN THE MOVEMENT.

ONE of the first of Montreal's grocers to announce his willingness to give shorter hours to the clerks was M. J. McKerley, of 120 Park avenue. Mr. McKerley's stand had, no doubt, much to do in influencing others in the trade to adopt the early closing on one night in the week, and it is to be hoped that other grocers will follow his example in closing early every night but Fridays and Saturdays. Mr. McKerley announced his intention to his customers in the following well-worded circular:

After long and seriously meditating the long hour question, I have come to the conclusion that when a clerk has served from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. he has, if faithful to his employer, earned his wages. My intention is to close my place of business from October 1 to May 1 next at 7 p.m., so that my employes may have at least a few hours to themselves in the evening, Friday and Saturday nights excepted.

I know that my customers will agree with me and help me to carry out the idea by placing their order for the day or evening in time that we may do so.

Thanking you for your past kind favors, I solicit a continuance. M. J. McKERLEY.

Honesty Goes Hand in Hand With Prosperity.

If you are not honest you may prosper for a short time, but your fall will be swift and sure.

If you are honest and find that you do not prosper your case will stand investigation, and in nine cases out of ten the reason the honest grocer does not prosper is because he uses old and infirm scales in his business, and when he thinks he is selling a pound of sugar or rice, or anything else, he really is parting with about a pound and a quarter for the price of a pound.

Are you prospering as you should?

If not, it might be a good thing to look into the scale question. We have a Ball-Bearing Computing Scale which is HONEST. We guarantee this scale and sell it on easy terms.

AND COLD STORAGE NEWS.

PORK PACKING IN P.E. ISLAND.

THOUGH Prince Edward Island is the smallest of the Maritime Provinces—in fact, the smallest Province in the Dominion—its importance from the agricultural point of view is great. There is hardly a foot of its soil, from end to end of its limited length, and much more limited breadth, but is fit for cultivation, and will grow the finest crops of hay, oats, wheat, potatoes and other root crops. Add to this that the farmers there farm scientifically and one will see that the tight little Island may well merit the name—"The Garden of the Gulf."

Nearly every part of the Island has the convenience—to the farmers, the necessity of a butter or cheese factory. The farmers recognize that if they take crop after crop out of the soil they must give back something in return, and they thus keep well-filled barns of stock to supply the requisite quantity of manure for their farms. The stock not required is sold off in the spring as the best of fat beef. In fact, there is no season of the year when a butcher may not cross to the Island and bring back any quantity of the finest beef ever handled. Every farmer knows what is salable in the markets in Charlottetown, Sydney or Pictou—not to mention the larger one at Halifax—and they cater to this market. On their special market day, Tuesday, a visit through the Charlottetown market is one of interest, and would be a wonderful lesson to many of the farmers in Nova Scotia and elsewhere. At the close of the market every one has sold out his or her stock—because they take nothing there which is not salable and in the pink of condition.

Five years ago a new industry was inaugurated on the Island when N. & M. Rattenbury established their pork-packing establishment at Charlottetown. Seeing a ready market for their stock the thrifty Islanders went to hog raising, and last year the total number raised and sold is reported at better than 50,000, of which Messrs. Rattenbury handled over 20,000.

A short time ago the Rattenbury interest was purchased by The Dominion Packing Co., composed of prominent Montreal and Halifax capitalists. This company is capitalized with $1,000,000 common stock and $250,000 bonds. On $100,000 of these bonds the P.E.I. Government have passed an Order-in-Council guaranteeing 5 per cent., and the City Council has recommended that the company be exempt from all civic and Provincial taxation for 20 years. The enlargement of this industry will be a great boon to Prince Edward Island, if it turns out what is predicted for it by the promoters.

At present the new company has a capacity for slaughtering and taking care of 500 hogs per day, which they turn into barrelled pork, bacon, hams and sausages; while the offal, formerly almost entirely useless, will be converted into valuable by-products. The company expects to be able to handle at least 40,000 of the 50,000 hogs at present raised on the Island, and eventually increase the capacity of their plant to much greater proportions.

Cattle and sheep have already been slaughtered to some extent, and converted into canned meat or disposed of fresh in the local market. The company intends to go into this branch of the business more largely in the future, and will cater particularly to the Halifax, Sydney, St. John's, Nfld., and St. John, N.B., markets in the line of fresh meats. Warehouses will be erected at the chief distributing centres, and, eventually, the trade will be carried on by their own steamers thoroughly equipped with up-to-date cold storage. They expect, eventually, to be able to handle 20,000 head of cattle and the same number of sheep per year. What supply is lacking will be imported on the hoof to the Island. Poultry is another branch which will be taken up.

The new company commenced operations on October 28, the business being under the management of J. M. Wilie, formerly with Armours, and up to last week had handled 7,000 hogs and a small number of cattle and sheep.

If the present intentions of the company are fully carried out, the industry will be of incalculable benefit to the Island, and all parts of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, especially the country lying along the Gulf shore.

VENISON LICENSES.

The butchers' licenses to handle venison expire on December 5. The demand for that kind of meat has been brisk this season, but very little profit has been realized from its sale on account of the $15 license. The larger shops are obliged to handle it for the convenience of their customers. The regulations governing the sale of venison are strict.

DOINGS AT THE NEW MARKET.

The tenants of Toronto's new St. Lawrence Market provided a treat for those who visited that building Saturday evening, November 22, by engaging the Glionna-Marsicano orchestra to play from 7.30 to 10.30. The music was appreciated by the large number who availed themselves of the opportunity to visit the market when the special attraction was there.

Last Saturday morning the "basket-room" at the market was filled with produce and it took but three hours to dispose of it all. The room was thronged with purchasers.

The butchers did an enormous business the same morning. Many claim that their sales were larger than they ever were at the old market. They are enthusiastic over the success with which they are meeting. The displays of dressed meat to be seen at their stands are a tempting inducement to purchasers.

When the market becomes settled the butchers intend to further improve their places of bnsiness. As nice butcher shops as can be found in the city will shortly be seen in that commodious building.

THE PROVISION MARKETS.

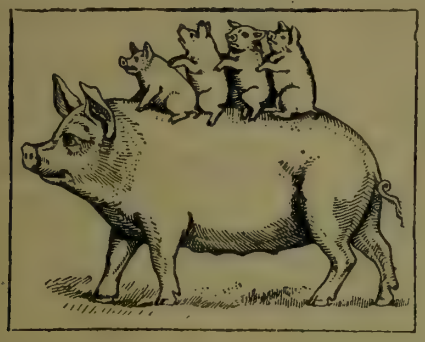
TORONTO.

A large number of cattle are being received at the Western Cattle Market this week. Some days the shipments reached as high as 75 loads. The demand for all grades is brisk, and the quality is reported as good. The big run of hog shipments still continues, and dealers say the quality is extra good—better, in fact, than it has been for some time past. Nearly 5,000 have been received in the course of the past week. The weather is now more favorable for the handling of dressed meats, and more carcasses are being received as a result. The market in that line continues steady. We quote: Dressed hogs, $7.00 to $8.25; beef carcasses, $5.00 to $10.50 per 100 lb.; hind quarters, $6.00 to $9.00 per 100 lb.; front quarters, $4.00 to $6.00 per 100 lb.; veal, 5 to 9c., and lamb 6¾c. Choicest export cattle are quoted at $5.00 to $5.50; medium, $4.70 to $4.85, and rough, $4.40 to $4.60; feeders, best, $4.30 to $4.60; medium, $3.60 to $3.75, and butchers' best, $4.25 to $4.60, and medium, $3.40 to $3.65. Best live hogs, heavy weight (160 to 200 lb.), are worth $6.00 to $12.00, while light weights sell from $5.00 to $7.50.



The provision merchants are busy and some experience a difficulty in keeping their shipment demands up. Hog products are at present in good demand. The sale of smoked meats and lard is contiuuing better than usual, considering how late in the season it is. The quantity of venison received this year was much larger than that received last year. It is sold by the carcass at 6 to 8c. per lb. Other lines are active. PORK PACKERS,

TORONTO, ONT.

MONTREAL.

The demand from both local and country buyers has been fairly good, all lines moving well. No quotable change has been made in provisions. In dressed hogs somewhat higher prices rule. For fresh-killed, abattoir-dressed stock the price is $8.50, and for country-killed, $7.50 per 100 lb., which prices are about 25c. higher than last week. We quote: Pure Canadian lard, $2.37½ to $2.40 per pail; Fairbank's "Boar's Head" lard compound, 9⅝c. tierce basis, with extras as follows: 60-lb. tubs, ¼c. over tierce; 20-lb. tin pails, ¼c.; 20-lb. wood pails, ½c.; 10-lb. tins, ¾c.; 5-lb. tins, ⅞c.; 3-lb. tins 1c. Snow White and Globe compound, $1.80 to $1.90 per pail; Cottolene, 11¼c. for 20-lb. pails, and 11⅛c. for 60-lb. tubs, for Quebec and Ontario; hams, 12 to 14c.; heavy Canadian short cut mess pork, $24.50 to $25; Canadian short cut clear pork, $23.50 to $24; American short cut clear pork, $24 to $24.50; American fat back, $24.50 to $25; bacon, Wiltshire, 14 to 15c. per lb.; extra plate beef, $14.50 to $15 per bbl.

WINNIPEG.

CURED MEATS AND DRESSED MEATS. The demand for cured meats continues very strong, and prices for some lines are slightly in advance of last week. Hams, for instance, are now quoted at 15½ to 16c., as against 15½c. Bacon, too, is higher being 16½c. for bellies, while backs are unchanged at 15c. Lard in 20-lb. pails is quoted at $2.60; other lines of lard are unchanged.

BEEF—City dressed is worth from 5½ to 6½c.; mutton, 8 to 9c.; dressed hogs, of which offerings have increased, have dropped to 7½ to 8c.

ST. JOHN, N.B.

Chicago prices for barrelled pork are a little lower. Beef is unchanged. In both lines the local supply is larger and dealers use it freely. In lard, the market is very lightly supplied. Quite large stocks of pure bought, but shipments come forward slowly. The same is true in compound. The price is very firm and higher figures are looked for. The fresh beef market is easy and the supply of domestic quite large. Pork is also offered more freely and at lower figures. Mutton and lamb are low. We quote as follows: Mess pork, $23.00 to $23.50; clear pork, $23.00 to $26; plate beef, $14 to $16; domestic beef, 4 to 7c.; Western beef, 7 to 9c.; lamb, 6 to 6½c.; mutton, 5c.; veal, 5 to 7c.; pork, 7 to 7½c.; pure lard, tubs, 12c.; pails, 12¼c.; compound, tubs, 9¼c.; pails, 9½c.; Fairbank's refined, tubs, 10¼c.; pails, 10½c.

The Wm. Davies Co. have a large quantity of pure lard overdue to our trade.

Geo. E. Barbour has a supply of "Climax" lard just received.

THE TOBACCO INQUIRY.

THE evidence before the Tobacco Commission sitting in Montreal, is now all in, and the final hearing comes up this week.

Among the chief witnesses towards the close of the examination was Mortimer B. Davis, president of The American Tobacco Company of Canada, and The Empire Tobacco Company. He testified to the coming into force of consignee agreements, under which those handling the company's cigarettes and tobacco for the retail trade were paid various commissions. The agreements originated for the purpose of giving a uniform rate to the retail trade.

Both companies, said Mr. Davis, were under his immediate direction, and the affairs of both were conducted from Montreal, although there were offices at Granby also. He was a member of the firm of D. Ritchie & Co., which carried on the manufacture of cut tobacco, plug tobacco and cigarettes. At that time they were all foreign-leaf tobaccos. At that time there was also an American Cigarette Company, which was a manufacturer of tobacco in Canada. It manufactured under license from Kenney Bros., an American concern, which had since been merged into another company in the United States. The business of Ritchie & Co. was acquired by The American Tobacco Co. of Canada in 1895, through Mr. Butler, of The American Tobacco Company of the United States. The Canadian Company got a federal charter before starting operations. The American Tobacco Company of Canada became the manufacturers of "Sweet Caporal" cigarettes, which The American Cigarette Company used to make. The American Tobacco Company of Canada acquired the manufacture of all the brands of cigarettes that were being made in Canada in 1895, with the exception of those manufactured by Mr. Fortier, who was in the cigarette business before The American Tobacco Company of Canada was formed.

The American Tobacco Company of Canada manufactured cigarettes and cut tobaccos. The American Tobacco Co. of Canada controlled The Empire Tobacco Company, although there were other stockholders in both companies. The factory of The Empire Company was at Granby, and Mr. Archibald was the proprietor when it was purchased by the present owners. It manufactured plug tobacco, made out of Canadian combination leaf, and it was the competition in foreign leaf that forced it to manufacture Canadian plug.

Three years ago the Joliette factory was acquired, but it was closed last spring, as it was preferred to manufacture at Granby, where the leaf was kept. The business of L. Larue was acquired in 1896. It was a Canadian cut tobacco factory and was still used, Mr. Larue being manager.

The American Tobacco Company of Canada manufactured the same cigarettes in Canada as The American Tobacco Co. of the United States made. The former company manufactured under license from the latter. It was in 1900 that the "exclusive" contract was started. It was not the company that started it, but the Grocers' Guild asked for it, and it started in London, Ont., and extended over the Province of Ontario.

It was afterwards started in the Province of Quebec, but it had not yet gone to any of the other Provinces. He would not be surprised, however, if the jobbers in the Lower Provinces asked to have the agreement put in force, as there was a benefit to be got out of it.

The contract relating to the handling of cut tobaccos was a verbal one only. Those who handled the company's Canadian cut tobaccos got 12 per cent. on the sales; those who handled other tobaccos as well, only got 5 per cent. The wholesale grocers in the west did not want the optional clause in the contract; they unanimously preferred the "exclusive." He did not consider the number of selling agents had anything to do with the demand from the consumer, who seemed to want The Empire Tobacco Company's tobaccos.

The consumer got 60 per cent. more plug, chewing and smoking tobacco, for his money, when that tobacco was manufactured from the Canadian leaf, than when it was made from foreign leaf; the wholesaler made double the profit that he made on the foreign leaf, and the retailer made 10 per cent. more.

Mr. Davis denied that the company had a system of spies to report whether consignees kept their agreements with the companies or not. This was not necessary as the consignees were perfectly satisfied with the present system. The company's cigarette business had greatly increased, and it now amounted to about 75 per cent. of the whole. The proportion of the sales of The American Tobacco Company of Canada and of The Empire Tobacco Company were far in excess of all the others, and it ought to be, for these companies took hold of the trade when in a crude condition, and had spent a lot of money in developing it. The companies had about 60 per cent. of the cut tobacco business.

Before he went into the business of The Empire Tobacco Company, Mr. Davis said the Ontario farmers did not know how to cure their tobacco, and it went bad on their hands. Since the Empire factory was purchased from Mr. Archibald, it had been developed, and the company had helped in growing and curing Canadian leaf tobacco. The natural channel of distribution was to the retailers direct, without the middleman. The "exclusive" clause in the contract was put there so that the company would know that their agents were selling the goods in the proper way, and not because they feared competition. He declined to say how much, and whether or not, anything, was paid to The American Tobacco Company in the United States for the license granted the Canadian company, in which refusal he was upheld by the court.

The system of coupons and tags in connection with the prizes were given to increase the consumption and draw the consumer away from the foreign to the domestic leaf. The company had just put a new brand of chewing tobacco on the market, called "Stag," which they sold at 26c. per lb. He would not say whether the company got any profit out of it at that price. Mr. Davis produced a list of The American Tobacco Company's consignees, showing the names of 435 persons, and also a list of The Empire Company's consignees, which bore the signatures of 200 persons. He said that the cigarettes were made in Canada, but were wholly manufactured from foreign leaf. He did not know of any jobbers or dealers who handled the cigarettes on the 2 per-cent. basis. Any person could get them on that basis, provided he was a large enough distributor. It would not do to make too many distributors of that class, as they would take away business from the other consignees. The company's wish was to encourage the use of Canadian leaf tobacco, and in order to do that, they gave prizes, coupons, and contracts.

The business had increased three-fold since the company started at Granby, and they were considering the advisability of opening again at Joliette.

To issue "exclusive" contracts was commonly done in other trades, such as the match, tanning, cordage, axe, scythe and edge-tool business, the rice business, and the "Force" food business. He thought there were about 25,000 to 30,000 retailers of tobacco in Canada, and so far as he knew there were no contracts which affected the trade.

On reassembling after luncheon on Friday, Mr. Justice McTavish remarked that he had received by mail copies of resolutions passed by wholesale grocers' guilds at London, Ont.; Toronto, Kingston and Hamilton. He intended to acknowledge receipt of them through Mr. Owens, Secretary of the Commission, and to state that the matters to which they referred would be mentioned in due course. He thought, however, that in the meantime it would be well to postpone final action on them until the investigation was actually over, but interested parties would be given communication of them.

Albert Hebert, of Hudon, Hebert & Cie, was the first witness on Saturday. His firm was a consignee of both companies and had no reason to complain of the contract. He had signed similar contracts with other firms, and said that it was a common practice in all lines of business.

Mr. Perrault, secretary of the companies, gave figures in regard to the advertising done, which showed that in the last four years The Empire Company had spent for this purpose over $250,000, and The American Tobacco Company of Canada, in the past seven years, nearly $270,000, making a total of over $500.000, while the amount spent by The Empire Company before being purchased from Mr. Archibald, was only $2,308.66.

LET US BE PATIENT.

The following letter, dated November 21, was received by L. Chaput, Fils & Cie, Montreal, from Chicago. It speaks for itself:

The patience of some of our customers is being severely tried this fall by delays in the shipment of merchandise. Less the blame be laid at the door of the innocent, it is best to be informed as to the causes. During the last year some 80,000 cars were added to the rolling stock of the transportation companies. But, in spite of this remarkable precaution, these companies are now called upon for 59,000 cars in excess of the supply. There has never been anything in the history of the railroading to compare with this inundation. To swell the trouble, very aggravating conditions in California have blocked in the dried fruit and raisin shipment in an especial manner, labor strikes, the inability to pack or obtain the large sizes of prunes, etc. To illustrate: One Chicage house, with 30 cars of these two items sold to retailers on contract, found itself, about November 20, with 27 cars unshipped from the Pacific Coast.

Let it be clearly understood, no wholesale house, east or west, north or south, escapes. No jobber is in the least blameworthy. No human agency could have foreseen this choking of the avenues of distribution. No retailer (it is hoped) will lose his temper after these conditions are understood.

We shall come out from under the crush, and expect to see daylight before competitors do. It is preeminently a time for all concerned to keep sweet-tempered. We ask your forbearance and rely upon your cooperation.

Grocers' Wholesale Co., Limited, Hamilton, have had many inquiries for their Canadian tomatoes recently, samples from the United States not being satisfactory. They still advertise Canadian goods.

"How do you feel?" asked the physician of the parson.

"I feel for-giving," replied the good man.

"And you?" he asked of the auctioneer.

"As usual, for-bidding," answered the red-flag follower.

"And you?" queried the M.D. of the Kentucky colonel.

"Oh, you know me, doc," replied the Kentuckian. "I'm always for-g t-full." Exchange.

OTTAWA TRADE GOSSIP.

BUSINESS is reported among retailers to be only fair, but some better than last week, owing to finer weather. Wholesalers are pretty busy, but no great rush. Sugars are now $3.97 for granulated and $3.32 for yellows. The coffee trade is brisk. Teas are moving well. Retailers in the city are not complaining as much now about the peddlars as during the summer. They find that the trade is improving some.

Salmon is holding its price, good brands being quoted at $1.40 to $1.50. In canned goods tomatoes are worth $1.50 to $1.75. Corn and peas, 90c. Corn is very firm and likely to go to $1. New muscatels and Californian raisins arrived on this market this week. Four-crown are selling at 8 to 8½c.; 3-crown, 7½ to 8c. and 2-crown, 7 to 7½c. Seeded raisins are worth from 9½ to 10½c. Sultanas are quoted from 9 to 10c.; shelled almonds and walnuts are in good demand, and prices have advanced. Almonds are worth 28½ to 29c. and walnuts, 24 to 26c. Syrups and molasses are selling faster, but the prices are the same. Fine Filiatras currants are quoted at 5 to 5½c.; Vostizzas, 6½ to 7c. The quality of the fruit is very good this year.

Butter is scarce. Good creamery is worth 22 to 23c.; choice dairy, 18½ to 19½c.; rolls, 18 to 19c. The receipts are not as large as at this time last year. Cheese is quoted by jobbers at 12½ to 13c. Eggs are advancing. Limed stock is worth 19c.; fresh selected, 20. Brooms are still high at $2.25.

---

Flour and rolled oats are looking up; all grades of flour have raised 10c. a barrel, and some of the mills have advanced rolled oats and oatmeal the same figure. Patents are now quoted at $4.20; bakers', $4; rolled oats from $3.20 to $3.60, in bags, and 20c. higher in small lots.

---

Apples at the Fruit Exchange are still selling at good prices: Greenings, No. 1, $2.25 to $2.75; ditto, No. 2, $1.75 to $2; Spies, No. 1, $3.25 to $3.65; ditto, No. 2, $2 to $2.75; Baldwins, No. 1, $3 to $3.50; ditto, No. 2, $2.25 to $2.50; Rib. Pippins, No. 1, $2.25 to $2.10; ditto, No. 2, $1.75 to $2.25; Kings, No. 1, $3.25 to $3.65; ditto, No. 2, $2.50 to $2.70. Some 37,000 barrels of apples are stored in the building just now, and they are arriving in large quantities.

NOTES OF THE TRADE.

G. W. Hunt, of the Ottawa Fruit Exchange, has returned from Wionipeg. It is understood he intends to open an exchange there.

---

The Ottawa Milling Co., since its inception some months ago, are working up a large export trade. They have been shipping their "K. Y." rolled oats to Glasgow, Scotland, and Copenhagen, Denmark, they receiving word this week that their goods were easily taking the lead on the Glasgow market.

---

The Canada Biscuit Co. have appointed Mr. Stuart de la Ronde as their representative for the city. Instead of keeping a stock in store here they will merely canvass the trade and ship from Toronto. Mr. Wagner, of the firm, called on all customers here and straightened up matters, so as to give Mr. de la Ronde a clear start.

---

The Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association are holding a Euchre and Smoker in Booth's Hall, Somerset and Arthur streets, on Tuesday night next. They want to see as many grocers and their friends turn out as is possible. Tickets are only 25c. Music and refreshments will be supplied, and an enjoyable evening is expected.

---

Bate & Co. are going to enlarge their Sparks street store by the addition of two storeys to the building. Llewelleyn Bate says they figure on using the upper part as a warehouse and a central depot for supplying their retail branches. They will make the Sparks street store, which is now the main one, a branch as well as the rest, and all the retailers will be supplied from the new warehouse.

At the Ottawa Fruit Exchange last Friday, Mr. McNeill, Fruit Inspector, gave an interesting address to the buyers present on the working of the Fruit Marks' Act. He was listened to very attentively. He also demonstrated with several barrels of apples what constituted No. 1 fruit, and how apples should be packed according to law. The Grocers' Association expect to have Mr. McNeill address them at their next regular meeting in December, when he will go very full into the matter.

DSESDEN'S SUGAR FACTORY.

The first barrel of sugar made by The Dresden Sugar Factory has been disposed of. This new establishment, which has just been completed, is equipped for turning out daily hundreds of tons of standard granulated sugar. Over 200 men are employed about this factory, which cost $600,000 to build.

The methods employed by this refinery in manufacturing sugar are about the best that the ingenuity of man has yet devised for that purpose. Everything is done automatically from the time the beets leave the bin until they are turned out into sugar and molasses.

The president of the company is Capt. James Davidson, of Bay City, Mich; the treasurer, James E. Davidson, and the manager, Geo. Elsey, jr.

PROSPECTS FOR CUBAN SUGAR.

A HAVANA cable to The New York Sun says: "L. E. G. Carden, the British Consul-General, in his report for 1901, speaks very hopefully of the prospects for Cuba. He says that during the year Cuba had little or nothing to fear from the competition of other countries in the production of sugar, whether cane or beet. There is every reason to expect that when the bounties on beet sugar are abolished Cuba will regain the dominant position she formerly occupied in the world's markets.

"The recent crisis was of immense service to the Island, as it forced planters to adopt economical methods, with the result that whereas three years ago it was thought impossible that sugar could be made profitably at 8s. 6d. per cwt., the planters are now hopeful of bringing the cost down to 8s.

"During 1901, 1,434 vessels entered Havana, of which 163, with a tonnage of 215,469 tons, were British. The American vessels entering numbered 974, with a tonnage of 1,078.419 tons; Spanish, 170, with a tonnage of 226,964 tons, and German 28, with a tonnage of 51,660 tons. As a commercial nation, we cannot afford to be a mere passive spectator of the prosperity of a country which already imports two-thirds as much as the richest Spanish-American republic.

"Mr. Carden says there is a strong feeling that Cuba will market raw sugar in England next year. It is also felt that none of the evils which it has been predicted will follow the failure of reciprocity with the United States will come about."

STRONG POSITION OF SUGARS.

We learn as we go to press that raw sugars in New York have advanced 1-16c. with large sales on the basis of 3 7/8c. for 96 deg. centrifugal.

Beet sugars of 88 deg. are now quoted at 7s. 10½d. per 100 lb. f.o.b. Hamburg, and there are renewed reports of damage to the roots in the ground by frosts. Mr. Licht estimated Tuesday that the European beet crop had been damaged to the extent of almost 5 per cent. by frost, and gave out that he had reduced his estimate of the outturn by about 90,000 tons.

The British Government accepted the terms of the Brussels Convention on November 24.

As yet no advances have been made on the Toronto market, but prices there are firmer with an upward tendency.

PRICE LIST MAKES CONTRACT.

ON November 20, Judge Morson handed down a written judgment in a case tried by him in the Divisional Court, Toronto. The E. W. Gillett Co., of Toronto, sued W. H. Gillard & Co., of Hamilton, to get $19.84, balance on a yeast bill, having sent the usual circular of prices. These prices, the defence maintained, were raised, or, rather the price of the yeast, the only line of Gillett's goods bought by Gillard, was raised, because that was the only line bought by the Hamilton firm. The Toronto firm denied this, and relied upon its published catalogue of prices, which has a clause stating that prices are "subject to change without notice." The judge said: "There is no question but that any vendor can sell at what price he pleases, and can change these prices from time to time as he sees fit; but this he cannot do if he has fixed his prices by contract with his customers. In this case the sending of the price list was an offer to sell the yeast at the prices mentioned in it; and the ordering of yeast by the defendants was an acceptance of that offer, and that constituted a contract at prices quoted; and the shipping of the yeast must be taken as having been done under this contract, which fixed the price and which price the plaintiffs, therefore, could not change as they sought to do. The plaintiffs can charge the defendants only the price quoted in the wholesale list; which the defendants paid before action, and the plaintiffs cannot recover the increased price claim, which is $19.16. I find judgment for the defendants, with costs."

VISITED BERLIN REFINERY.

Two large excursion parties from Newmarket and St. Catharines, on November 26, visited the factory of The Ontario Sugar Co., Limited, Berlin, Ont., inspected the works and saw granulated sugar turned out from the beets.

The first sugar was made in this refinery a month ago and since then over 500 tons of sugar have been turned out. Over 15,000 tons of beets have been received from the farmers and as much more is expected to come in this season.

Speeches were made by Hon. E. J. Davis and others, stating the importance of this industry to Canada and the room there was for many more such factories in the country.

A FIRMER TEA MARKET.

The Grocers' Gazette, London, under date of November 15, has the following in regard to Ceylon tea:

"With a strong demand and not enough tea printed for the trade's requirements all prices were again up on Tuesday. Common tea showed another ¼ to ½d. per lb. advance, while for fine kinds it was difficult to say where the jump in prices would end. The upper grades were often 1 to 2d. per lb. up from late sales of the same marks, and with small auctions in the near future the position looks all in favor of the importer. A few of the blenders can between them easily snap up 15,000 to 16,000 packages a week, and this is all we are getting now at auction, although a good deal has been sold privately without coming to the hammer at all."

Charles McKillop, confectioner, of Vancouver, B.C., is succeeded by Theodore & McKillop.

The stock of the estate of W. J. Bawlf, liquor merchant, Winnipeg, has been sold to A. Joly.

Marcello Magnone, confectioner, Cumberland, N.W.T., has sold out to Mrs. D. Anthony.

Every Little Helps

Salt is a little thing but it can do your trade a lot of harm or good as you elect —"the trifles make perfection." The woman who finds impurity in the salt she buys or the woman who loses her temper because the salt "cakes" isn't going to think pleasantly of the grocer who sold her that salt.

Windsor Salt

is as good as a Salt can be, because it is prepared in the only safe way—by the Vacuum process. Every drop of moisture is dried out of it by intense heat—it can't possibly cake. ## GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC.

IT has been officially announced by Mr. Hays, the general manager, that the Grand Trunk Railway System is to be expanded into a transcontinental line. The vast stretch of territory north of the boundary line between Lake Superior and the Pacific Ocean is to be traversed by a third parallel line of railway at some distance north of the two other lines. The new road will be known as the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, but will remain a part of the Grand Trunk Railway System.

Big as the project is, it will by no means be as great an undertaking as was the building of the Canadian Pacific Railway. The Canadian Northwest is now a land of great possibilities and boundless resources for the growing of wheat and cattle, and abounding in mineral wealth. It possesses a wheat belt larger than that of the Western United States. The Peace River Valley, hitherto almost unopened to commerce, is capable of producing the finest wheat on the continent of America.

Commencing at either Gravenhurst or North Bay, the new transcontinental line will traverse New Ontario, rich with minerals, timber and fisheries; Manitoba, which is only just beginning to grow wheat on the scale it can be produced there; the Saskatchewan Valley, the recesses of which have hardly yet been explored by the white man; the rich wheat producing districts of the valley of the Peace River, a very small fraction of the land surface of which has as yet been subdued by the plough; the district of Northern Alberta with its vast areas of woodland and much coal, to probably pass over the Rockies at the Pine River Pass, 500 miles north of the International boundary line, and 220 miles north of the Yellow Head Pass, which will probably be used by the Canadian Northern.

This new line is to be completed in about five years after the surveys are made. And by that time the output of the Northwest of last year of 70,000,000 bushels of wheat will be greatly expanded.

The railway accommodation in the Northwest is no longer equal to the task of moving the grain crop of that part of the country.

There is every indication that as soon as the Grand Trunk reaches the Pacific it will bid for a share of the trade of that ocean. No doubt but that a great part of the products of the country it will traverse will be carried off to the British and other markets from ports on the Pacific.

The terminals of this railway, as well as those of the Canadian Pacific and Canadian Northern, will become great shipping ports, the importance of which will be enhaced by the completion of the Trans-Isthmian Canal.

The importance the building of this great road will have on the trade of this country is too vast to contemplate. The millions of dollars spent on the building of this great transcontinental line means work for thousands of laborers, activity in our great steel industries and expansion of business for the merchants of Canada. A large home market will be provided for the products of the garden and the dairy, the common articles of food dealt in by the merchant. It means a heavy increase in population which will give our merchants more than they can do to attend to its wants.

RECIPROCITY WITH CANADA.

IT is gratifying to note the interest that is being manifested in Canada lately by the business men of the United States. Perceiving that the rapid expansion of the Great West, and the industrial activity prevalent from sea to sea has created a valuable market in this country for various products of the factory, foundry and the mine, a movement has been started in the Northern States of the Republic having for its object the effecting of reciprocity with Canada.

The National Reciprocity League, a newly-formed organization officered by prominent men of the Western States will hold a convention at Detroit on December 10 and 11, to consider the question fully and formulate plans for the conducting of a vigorous campaign to bring about the desired result.

At this convention the United States workers for reciprocity with Canada are expected to unite their forces to make a demand on Washington to request the reconvening of the Joint High Commission which adjourned in 1898. Should that body assemble, the supporters of this plan believe that there would result a trade treaty acceptable to both countries. It is claimed that during the past year there has been a radical change in the sentiment of the United States as to having closer trade relations with Canada.

The rapid way in which Canada is being invaded by settlers from the United States during the past two years, and the consequential great commercial and industrial growth of the country, have caused the merchants and manufacturers of the United States a desire to gain admittance to this market to sell their goods. There is now growing up in their minds a fear that this country will go elsewhere for outlets for her surplus products and buy where she sells her goods, if the United States Administration persists much longer in her attitude towards this country in regard to the high tariff which they are at present maintaining.

The value of our imports from the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, amounted to $120,814,750, while to the United States we exported $71,196,505.

DISSATISFACTION WITH CUSTOMS RULINGS

WHEN the late Hon. Clarke Wallace, M.P., took hold of the Customs Department he made radical changes in the administration. He had been a successful general store keeper and miller. He worked on business principles. His predecessors followed red tape and rules, and seemed to consider most importers unconvicted criminals.

Hon. Mr. Paterson, as THE CANADIAN GROCER anticipated, has followed in Mr. Wallace's footsteps. He was a good business man himself, and the important appointments have, as a rule, been given to experienced business men.

In the last few years there has been less friction than at any time. The officials have been generally fair and reasonable in their dealings with the public.

There has, however, been more or less dissatisfaction with many of the rulings by local appraisers and by the decisions from Ottawa. With less prosperous times there will be much more complaint.

Importers at one point have had to pay a much higher duty than those at another. We know of cases where Montreal importers found it more profitable to have some invoices passed in Toronto or at some other point, and vice versa. These differences often enable one importer to undersell another and still make a nice profit.

Rulings have come from Ottawa that have been most inconsistent and showed positive ignorance. One week a special ruling will be sent out for the guidance of collectors. A few weeks later upon an appeal from another port an entirely different decision will be given on practically the same question.

It is not the fault of the officials at Ottawa. It is the fault of the system.

Long ago a remedy was urged in these columns. Its adoption was promised, and an attempt was made to carry it out.

It was that the special appraisers at the leading ports should meet at regular intervals to discuss all questions on which there was a difference of opinion. Their conclusions should be submitted to the Minister for final action.

Generally he would concur, but there would be cases where he might hear the importer and, looking at the matter from the broader standpoint, decide against the view of the Board of Appraisers.

THE GERMAN SUGAR KARTELL.

TO defeat the purpose of the Brussels Sugar Convention is the task to which the German Sugar Kartell has set itsef. A round robin appeal was made recently by that body to the sugar syndicates of Austria-Hungary, France, Holland and Belgium, urging the creation of an international sugar middle European syndicate which could maintain an arbitrary high price and a limited supply of sugar on the markets of the world, and protect the beet-growers and refiners of sugar from low prices after the bounties have been retired.

Nearly three-fourths of the European beet-sugar supply is produced by the countries interested in this scheme, and the growers and refiners have to unite to grapple with the problem of disposing of their surplus products on the markets of the world after the bounties expire. That event will be on September 1, 1903, and then the profits realized will be much lower than they were under the bounty system.

Germany, the largest sugar-exporting nation of the world, produces about one-third of the sugar produced in Europe. The German Sugar Kartell is therefore the leader in the above movement, as they will have to face a decreased home consumption. They are also meeting with other difficulties. Their exports to the United States are yearly becoming less, owing to the increased production in Cuba, to say nothing of the development of the home beet-sugar industry. And, should Congress reduce or remove the duty on the Cuban product, the German trade in that direction would doubtless rapidly diminish.

The plans of the Kartell call for the presentation of a law to the German Reichstag providing for a higher import duty on sugar than is contemplated in the pending Bill. The last session of the Reichstag, in place of the bounty of .40 marks per kilogram, provided a duty of 4.80 marks to protect the home industry from importations chiefly from Austria and Hungary. The Kartell proposes to materially increase this import duty. This will enable the syndicate to hold up the German market to their hearts' content.

The prestige of the German Sugar Kartell has received a heavy blow in the repeal of the bounty, as the syndicate was able, by the markets at home being kept high, to place its surplus sugar on the British and other markets at prices which no other countries could touch. To keep its grip on the open market this Kartell will have to bring the countries of Central Europe into an international syndicate that will forbid sugar being exported to any country affirming the Brussels Convention. And unless they can carry out this project they will have to face a considerable reduction in the revenue, a big falling off in the exports and a congested market at home.

As our readers are doubtless aware, the British House of Commons a few days ago adopted a Bill concurring in the agreement arrived at by the powers at the Brussels Conference.

STRONG POSITION OF TEAS.

DURING the past three weeks the London, Eng., tea market has gained considerable strength, and all qualities of Indian and Ceylon blacks have advanced fully 2c. from the lowest points. Green teas of India, Ceylon, China and Japan have gone up about 1½c.

The closing of the Indian market at Calcutta a short time ago was earlier than usual, which, together with the small outturns during October, has created a shortage in Indian teas. Consequently buyers rushed to the Colombo market, where the demand suddenly became much greater than the supply, and the prices of the Ceylon product were also forced up. Added strength was given to the Colombo market by the probability of a moderate crop in that Island.

And the natural result of a scarcity in black teas was the increase in the demand for green teas, hence the appreciation in the volume of these.

Advices of recent date from Japan report that the third and fourth crop teas are now on that market, but are scarce and are selling at high figures. The quality is also said to be not up to the average.

Altogether the situation in teas of all descriptions is a strong one.

Wide-Awake Retailers.

Hints and Ideas of Interest.

DEALING WITH TIRESOME CUSTOMERS.

By A. W.

ONE of the many annoyances in the daily life of a merchant is the tiresome customers. Of these there are many kinds, from the lady who comes in to purchase a spool of thread and has most of the dry goods spread out on the counter before she leaves, to the garrulous old farmer who expects the merchant or his clerk to listen to an hour's talk about the crops, interrupting himself occasionally in an endeavor to "batter down" the price of some article he intends to purchase.

Then, there are the people who go from one store to another, not to buy, but to "price." They will go into a store, examine minutely certain articles, inquire the prices, consume half an hour of the merchant's time, promise to call again to-morrow or next week and go direct to the next store in that line and go through the same performance there. Having made the rounds, and finding that they cannot do better at one place than another, they go back to the first store and buy, unless in the meantime they have come to the conclusion that they did not want to buy at all.

Women are the worst offenders in this way; but some men are just as bad. It takes them an unconscionable long time a-buying, and while they are at it other customers are waiting impatiently for their turn, not to mention the traveller whose train leaves in an hour, and who is restrained by business etiquette from "breaking in" on a customer.

Some merchants have learned how to dispose of tiresome customers without offending them, but others allow themselves to be robbed of much valuable time every day without making any effort to save themselves from this annoyance which they seem to think is unavoidable, and a part of the business.

By keeping the customer to the point, and by not introducing any subjects that will distract the customer from the fact that he came to buy and not to talk, a merchant can do much to save his time and yet not offend the most sensitive customer.

Do not let your customer away before she has bought what she intended to buy and a few things that she did not intend to get, but get her into the way of making her purchases more quickly and with less loss of time to yourself. A tactful merchant can accomplish this without any loss of custom, and, indeed, can do it so as to please rather than offend a customer, who, after all, may be a slow buyer because the merchant is a slow seller. Then, when he remembers those customers who have been waiting for him to get through with the one ahead of them, and the traveller who has missed his train and won't get home till Saturday night instead of Friday afternoon, he will realize the value of time and make his customers realize it, too.

RETAILERS SELLING BY CATALOGUE

MUCH can sometimes be gained by following the examples set by the departmental stores in conducting their business. There are now in the United States a number of large retailers who have commenced sending out catalogues of their goods, and thus building up a mail-order trade.

According to a New York paper the cases recorded are chiefly from stores which conduct a business of from $100,000 upwards annually, and their trade is chiefly with well-to-do and wealthy families.

One of these catalogue dealers is located in Harlem, and has an annual business of upwards of $500,000; he orders new goods twice a week, at which time his catalogue is revised, showing the list price every Monday. When the goods are delivered on that day, these catalogues are given out.

They include nearly 1,000 different articles, and the prices of at least 200 of them are changed every issue. For this purpose the retailer has a small printing press on which the forms are kept constantly standing. It is, therefore, but little trouble to correct and strike off a few hundred sheets once a week.

But it is much of a novelty after all, and, no doubt, brings good results, or the dealer would not bother with it. It enables the customers who usually order their supplies from the house to keep posted on the change in prices—which is quite a convenience.

It would be of little service, however, to a retailer of the ordinary class, or, say, those who do an annual business of $10,000 or $15,000, for most customers of that kind order at the store and ascertain all changes in price there.

As the total cost is less than $4 a week, it need not be called extravagant nor a fanciful pastime on the part of the retailer.

STALE GOODS IN A STORE.

THE wide-awake retailer is always careful not to allow any surplus stock to accumulate in his store. Surplus stock means stale goods, and on this matter The Retailers' Journal has the following to say:

An experienced groceryman will be able to tell the moment he steps into a strange grocery store whether or not the proprietor is acquainted with his business. The store may be clean, the fixtures may be of the most modern pattern, the clerks neat in appearance, and there may be a good number of customers in the store. All this the experienced grocer takes in at a glance. But he looks a little further and in the next glance notices that the grocer is carrying a great lot of stale goods. At once he makes up his mind that the groceryman into whose store he has stepped has never learned his business.

And he is right in his conclusions. It takes considerable watchfulness on the part of a grocer to keep the stale goods from accumulating on his shelves and in every part of his store. Goods that are out of date, goods of a variety still popular, but so old as to have lost that freshness which is always attractive.

In most cases stale goods are the result of poor buying and want of care in management. There is seldom any need of a grocer loading himself up with a line of goods that is likely to get stale on his hands. If he knows his trade as he should, he can guage the quantity he ought to buy. If he buys a bargain he should know that a little extra pains is necessary to the preservation of the goods. They should not be piled up where patrons can see them day after day and week after week. People get tired of looking at a pile of goods, even if they are fresh. They get a stale look simply because they are ever present in the same place. Such goods should be changed about occasionally. In this connection the grocer might learn something from his good wife, who, when she tires of seeing her furniture and other furnishings always in the same place, shifts things about, giving to the rooms an air of freshness.

Any thoughtful grocer, seeing that he is accumulating a lot of stale stuff, can always get rid of it by a little effort. Certain of his customers, if he knows his trade well, he can select and offer them such goods at a bargain. Any way to get the old stuff out of the way and put new stuff in its place.

"And a few lines more on the same subject."

Do you, Mr. Grocer, realize that Japan Teas are passing through a crisis, and one that is shaking the very foundation of their existence? You should be fully cognizant of this. It will pay you to be.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, November 27, 1902.

GROCERIES.

A FAIRLY satisfactory volume of business has been transacted in wholesale groceries this week and trade seems equal to last year. Jobbers are busy with the last of their orders for shipment by water to western and northwestern points, and besides are receiving fairly satisfactory sorting orders from the country at large. There have been few changes in prices during the week, and sugar remains as it was at the time of going to press, the advance being fully maintained. Teas are higher in sympathy with appreciations on the primary markets, where all blacks of India and Ceylon are up fully 2c. per lb., and Indian, Ceylon, China and Japan greens are fully 1½c. higher. There has been a heavy business in all kinds of dried fruits this fall, and buyers in anticipation of this had bought freely. But many are experiencing difficulty in getting in their deliveries on time by reason of shortage in the crops or delays in shipment from the primary markets, owing to the scarcity of cars. Selected Valencia raisins are scarce and a little higher and Californian dried apricots are up 1c.

CANNED GOODS.

The prices of peas and corn continue firm and unchanged with a fairly active demand for them for the time of the year. Tomatoes are still scarce, high and much wanted. Armour's canned meats have advanced in the United States and are therefore firmer in tone here without any change in their prices. The demand for them is light. Fruits are quiet and steady. Sardines are firmly held and the domestic grades are showing a tendency to go up, owing to a reported shortage in their catch this year from the Atlantic Coast. Additional news of the proposed new combine of 37 salmon canneries of British Columbia, outside the present association, state that the new combine will issue better terms than those made by the present combine. The new concern proposes to buy out all the canneries for cash.

COFFEES.

The local coffee market is stronger on account of the increased strength of the Rio market in all grades, owing to advances in Brazilian exchange. The local trade keeps steady, with the bulk of the business doing in the cheaper grades. We quote as follows: Green Rios, No. 7, 7¾c.; No. 6, 8c.; No. 5, 8¼c.; No. 4, 9c.; No. 3, 10 to 12c. per lb.

NUTS.

Trade in nuts keeps improving with the advancement of the season, but the high prices prevailing this season are having the effect of curtailing their consumption to some extent. The prices are firmly maintained.

RICE AND TAPIOCA

A fair amount of interest prevails in rice and tapioca, but transactions are largely of the hand-to-mouth order, the orders being mostly for small lots. On the Southern markets the higher grades of rice are scarce but the offerings of the lower grades continue fairly free. The outside markets for tapioca continue dull. We quote as follows: B rice, 3½c.; Japan, 5½ to 6c.; sago, 3¾ to 4c. and tapioca, 3¼ to 3⅜c. per lb.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There is a good demand for syrups and molasses on the local market at steady and unchanged prices. The outside syrup markets were firm in tone and no attempt was made to hurry sales.

SPICES

Both white and black peppers are quiet and firm. Ginger is in moderate demand and the other lines are fairly active. Cable advices from Holland report an advance in prices for mace of 2c. per lb.

SUGAR

When going to press last week we were able to report advances both in New York and Canada in refined sugar and also an advance of 1-16c. for 96 deg. centrifugal, and a fractional advance in 88 deg. beet sugars. Since then the United States market has advanced 10c. for refined in New York and 20c. per 100 lb. in San Francisco, without having any further effect on Canadian prices, which remain at $3.98 for Redpath's, St. Lawrence, Berlin and Wallaceburg, and $3.93 for Acadia XXX standard. The local situation is quiet at the moment and the consumptive demand is light. However, dealers consider the situation worth watching, and it is expected in some quarters that an advance in New York refined would be followed by a similar movement here.

See pages 43 and 44 for Toronto, Montreal, St. John and Halifax prices current.

For the week cane sugars have advanced another 1-16c., large sales having been affected on the basis of 3 13-16c., duty paid, delivered in New York, for 96 deg. centrifugals. At the close there were no buyers or sellers at this figure, the sellers now holding out for 3⅞c. and offering little sugar at that price, so in view of the prospective requirements it is anticipated that we shall see 4c. per 100 lb. paid for 96 deg. centrifugals before long.

Beet sugar of 88 deg. test for the week advanced to 7s. 10½d. f.o.b. Hamburg, but has now reacted to 7s. 9⅜d. for November and 7s. 9d. for December shipments. These prices are from 8 to 9c. per 100 lb. above the parity of 96 deg. centrifugals, duty paid in New York. The recent advances in raw sugars are attributed to the scarcity of cane sugars in the hands of the United States holders and to the extreme frosts which have prevailed in the European beet sugar countries, causing fear that the roots which are still in the ground will be injured. Mr. Licht has further reduced his estimate of the new beet crop by 125,000 tons, leaving it now at 5,725,000 tons for all Europe, but since this estimate was issued the very cold weather has set in and a further modification in the estimate is looked for.

TEAS

The primary market this week has been strong for all grades of Indian and Ceylon greens and black teas, and prices have advanced for these and also for China and Japanese greens. Cheap Indian blacks are up 2c. from the low point and cheap Ceylons are up about 1½c. and the prices may shortly reach the parity of 7d. for leaf teas. Indian and Ceylon pekoes and pekoe Souchongs are from 6¼ to 7½d., and are strong, the finer grades of orange pekoes are scarce, and desirable catchy teas are in small supply. China teas have not been as high for years. The Japan market has closed, and anything offering of the third and fourth crop is poor stock. Prices for these are higher than for the earlier teas. There is also an active demand for greens from 6¼ to 7½d., in Indians and Ceylons. Mail advices from London, Eng., say that the late feeling of depression has been entirely removed and the prices of Indian teas under 6d. have advanced to the extent of fully ¼d. per lb. Better teas were also in improved demand and sold at improved rates. All grades of Ceylons showed advancing rates, common leaf being ¼ to ½d. dearer, while the better grades frequently showed a more pronounced rise.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

CURRANTS.—Shipments of currants continue to come forward from Greece. The crop this year has been of excellent quality and buyers on this side of the Atlantic have bought freely and in larger quantities than usual. The demand is keeping up well. We quote: Fine Filiatras, 5½c. up; Patras, 6¼ to 6⅞c. and Vostizzas, 7 to 8c. per lb.

VALENCIA RAISINS.—These are still scarce and wanted. A number of Canadian buyers have been making inquiries on the New York market, and negotiations are pending looking for the sale of a considerable lot. We quote: Fine off stalk, 7 to 8c.; selected, 8 to 9c. and selected layers, 9 to 10c. per lb.

SULTANA RAISINS.—There is an active inquiry for Sultana raisins, and we quote 9 to 13c. per lb.

DATES.—These are more in demand. Stocks of Hallowee and Khadrawee dates are reported to be about exhausted in London, Eng., and therefore it seems probable that the present prices of both these varieties are about as low as they will be this season. Quotations follow: Hallowees, 5½ to 7½c.; Sairs, 4½c. and Fards, 7½ to 8c. per lb.

PRUNES.—There is a good active demand for prunes at unchanged prices. Quotations are as follows: Californian prunes, 100-110s, 4c.; 90-100s, 5 to 5½c.; 80-90s, 6 to 6½c.; 70-80s, 6½ to 7c.; 60-70s, 7 to 7½c.; 50-60s, 8 to 8½c.; 40-50s, 8¾ to 10c. per lb.

CALIFORNIAN SEEDED RAISINS.—There is an active inquiry for seeded raisins and sales are being readily made at full prices. We quote: 3-crown, seeded raisins, 7½ to 8c. and 4-crown, 8 to 8½c. per lb.

CALIFORNIAN EVAPORATED FRUITS.—Peaches and apricots continue active and the prices of apricots have gone up a little. We quote: Peaches, 9 to 11c.; apricots, 10 to 13c. per lb.

GREEN FRUITS.

The volume of trade in green fruits on the local market continues moderate with an increasing demand for oranges, lemons, Malaga grapes, etc., for the Christmas trade. The local movement in apples is slow, but there is quite a quantity being forwarded for export. Cranberries are firmer in tone and have advanced, partially owing to the increasing strength of the primary markets. Prices follow: Pears, per basket, 30 to 35c. and apples, 10 to 25c. per basket and $1 to $2 per bbl.; lemons, $4.25 to $5 per box; onions, ordinary, 45 to 60c. per bag; Spanish, 65c. to 70c. per case; oranges, Jamaica, $2.50 to $2.75 per box; Floridas, $3.50 to $3.75 per box; Jersey sweet potatoes, $2.50 to $2.75 per bbl.; cocoanuts, $3.75 per sack; quinces, 30 to 35c. per basket; Cape Cod cranberries, $9.50 per bbl.; Nova-Scotian do, $9; bananas, $1.25 to $1.75 per bunch; grape fruit, $4.50 per box; lemons, Californian, $4.50 to $4.75 per box; Malaga grapes, $5.50 to $7 per bbl.

VEGETABLES.

Prices are steady on almost all lines of vegetables and the bulk of the demand is for potatoes. Quite a quantity of cabbage, cauliflower, etc., are going out and radishes are being no longer offered. We quote: Lettuce, 30 to 40c. per dozen; mint and parsley, 15 to 20c.; cauliflower, 50c. to $1 per dozen; cabbage, 30 to 50c. per dozen and $1 per barrel; pickling cabbage, 25 to 50c. per doz.; carrots, 40 to 50c. per bag; beets, 40 to 50c. per bag; potatoes, $1 to $1.20 per bag; celery, 50 to 75c. per dozen; squashes, $1 to $1.50 per dozen; pumpkins, 50c. per dozen; artichokes, 50c. per bushel; spinach, 40c.; parsnips, 40 to 50c. per bag; vegetable marrow, 30 to 50c. per doz.; citrons, 40 to 50c. per dozen.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EGGS.—Few strictly fresh eggs are arriving and high prices will be paid for selected stock. The bulk of the business is in the cold stored and pickled article. For fancy stock 25c. will be paid by some buyers. The range of quotations is as follows: Strictly new laid, 20 to 25c.; cold stored, 17 to 20c.; pickled, 17 to 18c., and second grades, 16 to 17c. per dozen.

BEANS.—Holders of beans are still firm in their views and buyers are holding off at the prospect of paying high prices. One mixed lot of 50 bushels of prime and handpicked stock was sold at $1.80 per bushel this week, but the majority of holders are asking $2 in large quantities. We quote choice handpicked beans, $2 to $2.15 per bushel.

DRIED AND EVAPORATED APPLES.—Evaporated apples are freely offered at 7 to 7½c., and a fair number of sales for future delivery are being made at that figure. There is no call for the dried article.

HONEY.—There is still a fair business being done in honey and the market is unchanged. We quote: Extracted, 8 to 8½c. for large quantities and 9 to 9½c. per lb. in small lots. Combs, $1.50 to $1.75.

POTATOES.—The receipts continue fairly large and transactions have been made this week on the basis of 75 to 80c. per bag in carlots on track here.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

BUTTER.—In butter there is reported a steady market for all grades with a firmness in creamery prints and solids on account of the stiffer markets in England therefor. There have been large receipts of large choice rolls of dairy this week, and sales have been made readily. Dairy tubs, freshly made, are in good demand. We quote as follows: 1-lb. prints, 17 to 18c.; choice large rolls and tubs, 16 to 17c.; secondary grades, tubs and rolls, 14 to 15c.; bakers', 13 to 14c.; creamery prints, 21 to 22c. and solids, 19½ to 20c. per lb.

CHEESE.—The market opened higher this week both in Canada and Great Britain, and then eased off a trifle. The stocks here and in the Old Country are lighter than they were and a high market is anticipated until the end of the season. We quote: Finest, 12½ to 13c. and seconds, 11¾ to 12c. per lb.

POULTRY AND GAME.

POULTRY.—There is a big demand for dry picked poultry of all grades. The arrivals have been fair. The following are the quotations: Turkeys, 10 to 12c. per lb.; geese, 6 to 7½c.; young chickens, 8c.; or 45 to 70c. per pair; ducks, 7c., or 60 to 90c. per pair, and old fowl, 6c. per lb. For live poultry we quote as follows: Turkeys, 8c.; geese, 5c.; ducks, 7c.; chickens, young, 7 to 8c. and old, 5 to 6c. per pound.

GAME.—The arrivals of game have been large but the demand is still very poor, resulting in an accumulation of stock. The prices are unchanged. We quote as follows: Teal, 20c. per pair, and pin tails, 30 to 35c.; black ducks, 70 to 75c.; butterballs, 30 to 35c.; red heads, 60 to 65c. and blue bills, 20 to 30c.

FISH.

There has been considerable buying of Lake Erie herring by United States buyers for shipment to New York, where at present there is a scarcity of trout. The prices advanced rapidly, sales being made at as high as 13c. in large quantities, but the market has settled down lately to a steadier basis, the prices now ruling being 6 to 8c. per lb. There is a good demand for oysters, owing to the colder weather, but the catch at Baltimore is reported to be short this season, and the prices therefore may rise. Other lines of fish are a little quiet, and frozen fish are coming on the market in increasing quantities. Prices are as follows: Frozen fish, trout, 7½ to 8c.; whitefish, 7½ to 8c. Fresh fish—Lake Erie herring, 4 to 5c.; perch, 4 to 5c.; pike, 6c.; British-Columbian salmon, 15 to 20c.; mackerel, 15 to 20c.; halibut, 15c.; blue pike, 4c.; live lobsters, 25c. per lb.; oysters, $1.25 to $1.35 per wine gallon; selects, $1.50 to $1.60; Digby herring, 50c. per bundle of 6 baskets; finnan haddies, 7½ to 8c. per lb. in 15-lb. boxes; codfish, $4.50 for 25-lb. boxes and $1.80 for 2 doz. box; quail on toast, 5½c. in boxes; boneless cod, 4½c per lb.; ciscoes, $1.25 per basket; kippered herring, $4 per case of 4 doz. tins; Labrador herring, in half-barrels, $3 and lake herring, $4; salt sea salmon, $8 to $10 per 100-lb. bbl.; salt sea mackerel, $2 per kit (20-lb. pail.)

GRAIN, FLOUR AND BREAKFAST FOODS.

GRAIN.—The market for grain is steady and unchanged. We quote prices on track, Toronto: Red wheat, 72c.; white wheat, 72c.; barley, 40 to 45c.; oats, 34c.; peas, 76c.; buckwheat, 52c.; rye, 50c. per bush. The arrivals so far this fall have been light.

FLOUR.—The market for flour is steady and unchanged. The demand is good. We quote: Onatrio patents, in bags, $3.35 to $3.65; Hungarian patents, $4.10 to $4.20; Manitoba bakers', $3.75 to $3.90; straight roller, $3.40 to $3.50 per barrel.

BREAKFAST FOODS.—An active demand continues for oatmeal and rolled oats and the prospects are for steadier prices until the end of the year with possibilities of an advance. We now quote: Oatmeal, standard and granulated, in carlots on track here, $4.45; standard rolled oats in carlots on track here, $4.25 per barrel; in wood, 15c. extra; broken lots are 25c. per bbl. extra; rolled wheat, $2.25 in 100-lb. bbl.; cornmeal, $4; split peas, $4.75; pot barley, $4.25 in 196-lb. bbls., or $4.10 in bags.

HIDES, SKINS AND WOOL.

HIDES.—There is a steady business doing in hides, with an accumulation of stock. We quote as follows: No. 1 green, 8c.; No. 2 green, 7c.; No. 1 green, steers, 8½c.; No. 2 green, steers, 7½c.; cured, 8½ to 9c. per lb.

SKINS.—These find a ready sale on the market. Quotations are as follows: Veal skins, 6 to 14 lb. inclusive, No. 1, 10c.; No. 2, 8c.; do, 15 to 20 lb. inclusive, No. 1, 9c.; No. 2, 7c.; deacons (dairies), 60 to 70c. each; sheepskins, 65c.

WOOL.—The Old Country market for wool has improved much this fall, enabling holders here to get rid of their accumulated stock and as this better feeling continues, the market here is much stronger and prices of fleece wool have advanced ½c. We quote: Fleece wool, 14c. and unwashed wool, 7½c. per lb.

TALLOW.—This market is quiet and prices are likely to be lower. We quote 6¼ to 7c. per lb.

SEEDS.

Trade in seeds continues quiet. Prices at outside stations are unchanged at $6.50 to $6.75 for red clover; $6.50 to $7 for alsike and $1.50 to $1.75 for timothy.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, November 27, 1902.

GROCERIES.

ALTHOUGH trade is still quite active among wholesale grocers, there is not the rush for deliveries that characterized the market a fortnight or so ago. Among the active lines are Christmas goods of all sorts, which this year have started off unusually well. The market has been fairly steady throughout the week, a notable exception being sugar. Those of our readers who are interested in the raw fur business will find these goods included in our list of market quotations this week, and in the future we will endeavor to keep collectors posted as to the city markets.

SUGAR.

On the 20th inst., Montreal refined sugars went up another 10c., making 20c. during that week, and prices are now $3.90 for No. 1 granulated; $3.70 for No. 2 granulated, and $3.25 to $3.75 for yellows. The last advance upon the Montreal market followed upon a rise of 10c. in New York. The market at present appears firm at the advance, and under the higher prices an increased volume of business has been done, though there has been considerable speculation. The foreign markets for raw beet are still strong, which doubtless has its effect on the market for the refined article.

ta which has been reported, 27,600 packages of Indian blacks were offered, the largest of the season. The quality was not changed, but there was a strong demand for all grades and prices were firmer. In greens, 750 packages were offered. There was no advance in rates, but the tone of the market was firmer. Unfavorable weather conditions have prevailed in the tea districts of late, and it is becoming doubtful if the crop will be as large as last year. Prices are, however, still lower, but no one is expecting any decline. The exports of Indian teas from April 1, 1902 to November 1, were 107,018,796 lb., as against 98,407,541 lb. for the corresponding months of 1901. American buyers have been increasing their purchases considerably, the increase amounting to about 4,000,000 lb. Ceylons and Japans show no change on this market. The latter are still high and very firm. Offerings are exceedingly light, and prices range from 18½c. up to 22 and 24c. per lb.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There is nothing new to report in corn syrups. The movement is slow and prices are as follows: In bbls., 3c.; in half barrels, 3⅛c.; in ¼ barrels, 3⅜c.; in 38½-lb. pails, $1.40 and 25-lb. pails, $1.10. In Barbados molasses there is some business doing, but nothing like what one expects at this season of the year. We quote as follows: Barbados, 23 to 24c.; New Orleans, 16½ to 17c.; Antigua, 24c. and Porto Rico, 38c.

SPICES.

Importers of spices have had an unusually good season this year, although their business is now slacking up to some extent. Jobbers are still doing a good business in spices, and this is expected to keep up until close to the Christmas season. No changes in prices are quoted on the local market. The crop of mace on the Banda Islands for 1901 has been 2,409 piculs, and of nutmegs, in shell, 14,076 piculs, a very much smaller crop than that of 1900. For 1902-1903 the crop will likely be very light, owing to the damage done by the long drought. Large nutmegs and prime Banda mace are scarce. The primary market all round is very firm, prices showing an advance of 10 to 12 per cent. for nutmegs and mace. Locally, there is no quotable change. We now quote: Nutmegs, 35c. to 55c. per lb., as to size; penang mace, 45 to 50c. per lb., as to quality; pimento, ground, 12½ to 15c.; cloves, 15 to 25c.; pepper, ground, black, 17 to 22c., according to grade; white, 25 to 27c.; ginger, whole Cochin, 15 to 17c.; Japan, 13 to 14c.; Jamaica, 16 to 20c.; Afghan, 12 to 13c.; ground, Japan, 15c.; Cochin, 16 to 17c.; Jamaica, 20 to 22c.; and Afghan, 13 to 14c.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

The movement in both the above lines keeps up fairly well at unchanged prices. Our quotations are still as follows: B rice, in bags, $3.02½; in half bags, $3.07½; in ¼ bags, $3.12½; in pockets, $3.17½. In 10-bag lots an allowance of 10c. is made. CC rice, $2.92½ in bags; $2.97½ in ½ bags; $3.02½ in ¼ bags and $3.07½ in pockets. In the open territory prices are about 10c. less. Patna rice is worth 4 to 5c. per lb. and tapioca, 3⅛c.

CANNED GOODS.

The situation in canned goods is still strong, though no actual changes in prices have been made during the week. Tomatoes remain at $1.50 to $1.75, most of what business is doing being under the latter figure. Corn and peas remain firm at the advance of last week. It is reported here that the entire make of one cannery was sold to a firm in Toronto at $1.41 delivered in that city. Locally, we quote as follows: Tomatoes, $1.60 to $1.75; corn, 95c.; peas, 90c. to $1.27½; string beans, 87½c. to 90c.; strawberries, $1.45 to $1.60; blueberries, $1.25; raspberries, $1.45 to $1.60; gooseberries, $1.45 to $1.60; pears, 2's, $1.60 to $1.70; 3's, $2.10 to $2.15; peaches, 2's, $1.65 to $1.70; 3's, $2.50 to $2.75; 3-lb. apples, 85 to 90c.; gallon apples, $2.10 to $2.20; 2-lb. sliced pineapples, $2.20 to $2.30; grated pineapples, $2.50; pumpkins, $1 per doz.; spinach, $1.50; sugar beets, 95c. to $1.00; salmon, pink, 92 to 95c.; spring, $1.25; Rivers Inlet red sockeye, $1.30; Fraser River red sockeye, $1.40

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

CURRANTS.—The situation in Greece is reported brighter. Shipments to all parts from Greece up to November 1, amounted to 91,500 tons gross, as against 73,000 tons gross last year. The market in Greece remains firm. On the local market there is no change. We quote as follows: Fine Filiatras, 5¼ to 5½c., in cases; cleaned, 5½ to 5⅝c.; in 1-lb. cartons, 6 to 7c.; finest Vostizzas, 6¼ to 7c. per lb.

SULTANA RAISINS.—The price is unchanged at 9 to 10c. per lb. for fine fruit.

VALENCIA RAISINS.—Another advance has been made in the price of these raisins, and the prices are very firm. Selected are scarce on the market at present. We quote: Finest off-stalk, 8c.; selected, 8½c.; layers, 8¾c. to 9c., according to brands.

MALAGA RAISINS.—The tone of the local market is strengthening in sympathy with the situation on the primary market and an advance is expected shortly. We quote: London layers, $1.50 to $1.60; "Connoisseur Clusters," $2.10 to $2.20; ¼'s, 65 to 70c.; "Royal Buckingham Clusters," $3.15 to $3.25; ¼'s, $1; "Excelsior Windsor Clusters," $4.50 to $4.60; ¼'s, $1.30 to $1.40.

FIGS.—A London report states that shipments from Smyrna to England have not exceeded 8,000 bags. The market is firm at 19½ to 20c. per lb. for Eleme figs, according to size, and $1.20 per tapnet for Comadras.

DATES.—There is a fair demand. Hallowees are now quoted at 4 to 4½c. per pound CALIFORNIAN RAISINS.—Arrivals of Californian seeded raisins are reported on this market. The fruit is said to be of good quality.

PRUNES.—No quotable change has been made. The market is still firm, and we quote: 8½c. for 10-50s; 8c. for 50-60s; 7¾c. for 60-70s; 7½c. for 70-80s; 6⅞c. for 80-90s; 6½c. for 90-100s. Italian prunes are offered at the following prices: 40-50s, 7½c. to 7¾c.; 50-60s, 7 to 7½c.; 70-80s, 5½ to 5⅝c.; 90-100s, 4½ to 4⅝c. per lb.

NUTS.

The market is unchanged as to price. Arrivals of new Grenoble walnuts are reported. We quote: Walnuts, 12½c.; Tarragona almonds, 12 to 13c.; shelled walnuts, 24 to 26c.; shelled almonds, 29 to 30c.; filberts, 9½c.; Pecans, 15c.; Brazil nuts, 14 to 15c. per lb.

Business in the seasonable lines of green fruits and vegetables is fairly good. Jamaica oranges are higher this week. In new dates a reduction of ¼c. per lb. has been made. Other lines are unchanged. We quote as follows: Jamaica oranges, in barrels, $5.00 and in boxes, $3.00; Messina lemons, $4 per box; cocoanuts, $3.50 per bag of 100; bananas, No. 1, $1 to $1.50 and 8-hands, $1; Canadian cabbage, 25 to 40c. per dozen; potatoes, $1.15 to $1.30 per barrel; plums, $1.50; pears, $3.25 and limes, $1.50 per box; Canadian apples, in barrels, $1.50 to $3 and in baskets, 20c. to 30c.; egg plant, 50c. per basket; Canadian pears, 10c. per basket; Spanish onions, 60c. per crate and $2.25 per case; sweet potatoes, $3.00 per bbl., and Malaga grapes, $5.50 to $7.00 per keg; cranberries, $10 per bbl.; red onions, $2 per bbl.; chestnuts, 9 to 10c. per lb.; Boston lettuce, $1.15 per doz.; wax beans, $2.50 per basket; green beans, $2.50 per basket, and cucumbers, $2.25 per doz.; pineapples, 24s, $4 to $4.50 per crate; Tokay grapes, $3.25 per box; grape fruit, $6 per box; new dates, 4¼c. per lb.; figs, 14c. per lb.

FISH.

The movement in fish this week is not active, as many of the boats have stopped running for the season, and retailers have secured all they will need for the present. Dore, pike, halibut and salmon are all quoted lower, as frozen fish is now being brought on the market. Smoked herring have advanced considerably, and No. 1 green cod, which has been tending higher during the week, is now worth $6 per barrel. B. C. salmon is 50c. per barrel higher. Canadian ¼ sardines are from 25 to 50c. per 100 lower. Quotations follow: Haddies, 6c. to 7c.; smoked herring, 15c. per box; fresh haddock and cod, 3½c. per lb.; dore, 6 to 6½c.; pike, 5c. halibut, 9c.; salmon, 9c.; No. 1 herring, Nova-Scotian, $5.50 per bbl. and $3 per half bbl.; No. 1 Holland herring, $6.50 per half bbl.; No. 1 Scotch herring, $6.50 per half bbl. and 95c. per keg; Holland herring, 70 to 80c. per keg; No. 1 green codfish $6.00 and mackerel, $20.00 per barrel; boneless cod, 1 and 2-lb. blocks, 6c. per lb.; loose boneless cod, 5c. per lb. in 40-lb. boxes; dried codfish, $4 to $4.50 per 100-lb. bundle; British-Columbian salmon, $12.50 per barrel; standard bulk oysters, $1.40 per gallon; Marshall's kippered herring, $1.45 per dozen; Canadian kippered, $1.00 per doz.; Canadian ¼ sardines, $3.50 to $3.75 per 100; canned Cove Oysters, No. 1 size, $1.30 per doz.; canned Cove oysters, No. 2 size, $2.20 per doz.; Malpeque shell oysters, $6 to $7.50 per bbl.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

BUTTER.—Butter appears to be a little firmer this week. Finest Quebec is now quoted at 21½c. and finest Townships, at 21⅜c., with occasionally a pet factory obtaining 22c. Secondary grades sell according to quality. There is a fair demand, and receipts are comparatively light, owing to the factories, contrary to custom at this time of the year, still making cheese. The big price of cheese is no doubt to a great extent responsible for the make of butter at present, and it is not thought that the quantity of butter will equal that of last year. A small amount of business in second grades has been done with United States buyers.

CHEESE.—The cheese market has eased off a bit in price, though owing to the fact that business at present is on a poorer quality of fall goods, the lower figures, which amount to about ½c., do not have much significance, and earlier cheese would bring about ½c. more than present rates, all round. Prices on the wharf at the first of the week were from 11⅜ to 11⅞c. Quebecs are now quoted at 11⅞ to 12c. and Ontarios, 12⅛ to 12¼c., which prices are for November cheese. The factories are still making cheese. The demand has slackened somewhat. English firms continue to make inquiries, but are not altogether willing as yet to pay the price asked. An advice from the London market, however, indicates that buyers will not be able to hold off much longer.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EGGS.—An advance of 2c. has taken place in the price of selected eggs, and candled stock are also higher, as both these lines are in good demand and offerings are not heavy. The movement in limed and cold storage stock is active. Our quotations are as follows: Selected, 21c.; candled stock, 19½ to 20½c.; Montreal limed, 18c. in a jobbing way; straight receipts, 18½ to 19c.; Montreal limed, 17½c.; cold storage stock, 17½c. and western limed, 16½ to 17c. per doz.

POULTRY.—Offerings of poultry are still limited and the market remains firm, though no quotable change is reported. There is a fairly good inquiry, but not much business has transpired, owing to the light receipts. We quote as follows: Choice turkeys, 12½ to 13c.; ordinary, 10½ to 11c.; choice chickens, 10½ to 11c.; ordinary, 8 to 10c.; ducks, 9 to 11c.; geese, 7 to 8c. per lb.

BEANS.—No quotable change has been reported. Business is somewhat quiet though prices are well maintained and primes in carlots are worth $2 and in smaller lots, $2.05 to $2.10.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.—There is no change and the market is very quiet. Our prices are as follows: Syrup, in large tins, 70 to 80c.; in small tins, 50 to 60c.; in wood, 5 to 5½c. per lb. Sugar, 8½ to 10c. per lb.

HONEY.—There is only a light demand for honey and the market is quiet but steady. We quote: White clover in comb, 11 to 11½c. and white strained, 5 to 8½c. per lb.

POTATOES.—Some advance is noted in the price of carlots of ordinary stock, although choice potatoes are unchanged. A fairly good business is doing and prices are firm. We quote: Choice stock, in carlots, 72 to 75c.; ordinary, 65 to 68c., and in small lots, 90c. per bag.

ASHES.—The market is dull and featureless. Prices are: First pots, $4.35 to $4.40; seconds, $3.60; pearls, $6.25 per 100 pounds.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

FLOUR.—The only quotable change occurs in straight roller flours, which have advanced 10 to 15c. The feeling in almost all lines is firm. The demand is still good and an active trade is doing. We quote: Choice Manitoba spring wheat patents, $4.20; seconds, $3.90; strong bakers', $3.50; straight rollers, $3.60 to $3.75; winter wheat patents, $3.75 to $4.00.

GRAIN.—A further decline is noted in buckwheat and though the market appears a little steadier, the price is by no means firm. Peas have dropped off some in price, but are firmer at present. Trade is quiet in grain on spot; the export season being near the end shippers are not inquiring for spot stuff. Prices are as follows: Rye, 56c.; peas, 80c.; corn, 70c.;

buckwheat, 53c.; barley, 49c.; oats, 37 to 37½c. ex-store.

FEED.—Though no actual changes in price have taken place the market is still firm under an active demand. Prices are as follows: Manitoba bran, $18, and shorts, $20; Ontario bran, $17 to $18, and shorts, $19 to $20; mouillie, $23 to $30, according to the quality.

OATMEAL.—The market for rolled oats is somewhat unsettled. Trade is quiet. We quote, in small lots, barrels, $4.60; bags, $2.25. In carlots, barrels are quoted at $4.30 and bags at $2 to $2.05.

BALED HAY.—A fairly good business is doing on this market. No. 1 timothy is quoted 50c. higher this week, while clover has gone lower. Although shipments from this side to England have been heavier than the demand warranted this year, advices state in the new year a much greater demand will be felt. We quote: No. 1 timothy, $9 to $10; No. 2, $8 to $8.75; clover, $6.50 to $7 per ton in carlots.

RAW FURS.

We give below the prices ruling for raw furs for the next three months. Offerings of furs are fairly good in all lines, excepting coat coon skins, which are likely to be scarce. The report for the October, 1902, fur sales, shows a decline from last March of 20 per cent. in red fox, silver fox, and bear; an advance of 10 per cent. in lynx; a decline of 10 per cent. in otter; while marten, mink and fall muskrat realized old prices. Taken as a whole, however, prices paid this year are fairly good. We quote:

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, N.B., November 24, 1902.

THE weather here is very unusual for the season, being so warm. The river is still open. It has been the longest open season on record. The river opened very early in the spring. The first of the winter-port steamers are here and from now out we will have several each week. Business is very active. The lateness in the arrival of Californian raisins, particularly seeded, is a great inconvenience to the trade. Generally, prices are higher, sugar showing quite a sharp advance. Hops are very much higher than the ruling price for some time past. Smoked herring are higher than for years. Canned goods have much interest this week, but the bulk of the inquiry was for peas.

SALT.—The Wholesale Grocers' Guild is proving a very active body. Several lines are now sold at list prices. Salt is the last line to be included. This refers to the Canadian article. The prices are a little higher than have ruled, but afford only a fair profit. In fine salt, Canadian has the market. In Liverpool coarse, prices are firmly held. The higher freights affect the market. There is a steady sale and the market is quite well supplied. We quote: Liverpool coarse, 55 to 60c.; English factory-filled, 95c. to $1; Canadian fine, $1.50 per bag; cheese and butter salt, $2.25 to $2.35 per bbl.; 5-lb. bags, $3.10 per bbl.; 10-lb. bags, $2.85 per bbl.; 20-lb. wood boxes, 25c. each; 10-lb. wood boxes, 15c. each; cartons, $1.90 to $2 per case; English bottled salt, $1.25 to $1.30 per dozen; mineral rock salt, 60c. per 100 lb. (Selected lumps.)

OILS.—In burning oils prices have been again advanced and are firm. Dealers having largely bought should have a nice profit. This refers to the country dealers, as the city retail trade is supplied by the tank wagon and are much less likely to have stock. In lubricating oils a fair business is reported but paint oils are dull and the market is rather weak.

CANNED GOODS.—While in the west peas do not seem as high as corn, on the local market the latter are rather scarce and there has been quite an effort to get further supplies. Prices are higher. Corn is in quite a good supply. Prices are firm. In tomatoes, some American are due. They cost high and spot prices must advance. Fruits have a steady sale and gallon apples are firmer. The local market is lower than the western. Strawberries are rather firmer. Blueberries are very scarce and higher prices are asked. Other lines are unchanged. Oysters are slightly higher. Salmon are unchanged and have a fair sale. In domestic packed fish prices are rather firmer. Sardines, which are the larger line, are a lighter pack than usual.

GREEN FRUITS.—The apple situation is very different from that which is usual at this season. Quite a quantity of United States and Ontario apples are here and are offered at reasonable prices. In United States apples, chiefly Baldwins are offered in fine apples, and from Ontario, Northern Spies. The Nova Scotian crop is short. Some of the stock arriving is poor and for good stock high prices are asked. Oranges are meeting with a fair sale. Jamaicas hold the market. Lemons remain high and about the only line offezed are Malagas. In cranberries, as the season advances there is a wider range in prices. Natives get rather lower and imported advance; this is because they are the harder berry. Few bananas are seen. In grapes, Malagas have a good sale.

DRIED FRUITS.—The raisin market is higher. The rebate of 1c. allowed the Canadian trade on Californians has been withdrawn, and besides this, prices are higher. The non-arrival of seeded places the trade in a most unpleasant position, but it is expected to have them for the Christmas trade. The prices are higher and it is impossible to get prompt shipment. This is particularly the case with choice. Malaga loose are also higher. There is a fair stock here of Malaga and Valencia. The market is well supplied with prunes. The prices are low. Coast advices report a rather firmer market. New evaporated apricots and peaches are on the market. Dates are low and figs are firm. Peels are not a large stock. Evaporated apples are lower. Onions are lower; they are a large stock. In nuts, except peanuts, prices are quite high. In walnuts, the supply is light.

DAIRY PRODUCE.—Eggs are higher with a light supply. They have a fair sale. Butter is rather dull and selling slowly. The price is unchanged. Cheese is very firm and the stocks are light.

SUGAR.—There was quite a sharp advance this week. Fair stocks are held and the retail trade are well supplied. The market is very firm. It is not thought that the extreme low prices will return for the present.

MOLASSES.—There is a fair stock held here, chiefly Porto Rico. The prices are well maintained and there is a steady sale. Some Barbados is still offered.

FISH.—The high price and very firm market in smoked herring is a feature. Prices have advanced about 100 per cent. in a short time. The supply this season is very light. Finnan haddies have been in light supply but they are now more freely offered. Dry fish are unchanged. Pickled herring are rather easier. We quote: Haddies, 4 to 5c.; smoked herring, 12 to 12½c.; fresh haddock and cod, 2 to 2½c.; boneless fish, 4 to 5c.; pollock, $1.60 to $1.70 per 100 lb.; pickled herring, $2 to $2.15 per half bbl.; dry cod, $3.25 to $3.35; pickled shad, per ½ bbl., $6.00.

FLOUR, FEED AND MEAL.—In both Manitoba and Ontario flours the market is firm at the higher prices, and now the regular change to winter freight rates adds still further to the cost. Feed is higher and scarce. Oats and oatmeal are firmly held at full figures. Beans are again tending higher, though they have not recovered their former position. Cornmeal, while lower, seems to be again tending higher. Changes for some time have been slight. We quote: Manitoba flour, $4.75 to $4.80; best Ontario, $4.30 to $4.35; medium, $3.95 to $4.00; oatmeal, $4.50 to $5.60; cornmeal, $3.00 to $3.10; middlings, in small lots, $26 to $28; oats, 40 to 41c.; handpicked beans, $2.35 to $2.40; prime, $2.25 to $2.50; yellow eye beans, $2.80 to $3.00; split peas, $4.55 to $5.25; barley, $4.25 to $4.40; hay, $9 to $10.

ST. JOHN NOTES.

The rebate of 1c. per lb. on Californian loose muscatels to the Canadian trade has been withdrawn by the Association.

The first car of Californian loose muscatels to arrive here this season, were shipped by The J. Armsby Co.

A. F. Randolph & Sons, Fredericton, N.B., have a car of Californian dried fruits due — the celebrated "Griffin" brand. They are fortunate in having new seeded, of which there are practically none in St. John.

The St. John Wholesale Grocers' Guild is becoming a strong organization, and the trade are finding much direct benefit therefrom in the way of fair profits. This was the more needed as our market is not large and there are a large number of jobbers. On the following lines there is now an agreement in regard to prices: Macdonald's tobaccos; sugar, flour and Canadian salt.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, November 23, 1902.

THE situation does not show much change for the week. The little snow that fell last week has all disappeared and this has not tended to help business, as it has spoiled the roads to a great extent. Jobbers, however, state that business is satisfactory and collections are coming in very fairly, though not as fast as they would like.

SUGARS.—The principal item of interest for the week is the advance of sugars in sympathy with the New York market. The advance makes the present prices $4.50 for granulated and $3.90 for bright yellows.

CANNED GOODS.—The canned goods situation has not altered materially. The high price of tomatoes and the consequently increased demand for corn has advanced the price of corn, and although it is now quoted at $2, shipments received this week cost almost that to lay down and it is expected that higher prices will be quoted next week. Tomatoes are quoted at $3.60 to $3.75 per case.

COFFEE.—Coffee is steady and firmer in tone and looks as if it might go higher. No. 5 Rios are quoted at 8¼ to 8⅜c.

TEA.—Notice has been received of an advance in tea prices generally, amounting to about a penny per lb. The Manitoba market shows a considerable increase in the amount of Japan tea being sold this season, which is attributed to the large number of Americans who have come in during the year. Until the last two or three years practically nothing but black tea was sold in this market.

DRIED FRUITS.—Word has been received that the customary discount of 2½ per cent. on muscatel raisins will be discontinued. This notice coupled with an advance of ½c. in the primary market looks as if the prices would be higher here. At present we quote 7c. for 2-crown; 7½c. for 3-crown and 8c. for 4-crown fruit. Valencia raisins and new currants are without change.

EVAPORATED FRUITS.—Californian apricots are firm at 8½ to 10c., according to size.

GREEN FRUITS.—Californian navel oranges have arrived and are quoted at $5.50 to $6; Mexican oranges, $5, and lemons, $6. The interest of the market continues to be centred in apples, for which there is a large and steady sale. Spies, owing to scarcity of good stock, have been advanced to $4; other varieties of winter apples are quoted at $3.50.

DAIRY PRODUCE.—The business is now confined to dairy butter chiefly, and the supply of fresh-made is much below the demand. Dealers are offering as high as 16 and 17c. for fresh tubs of well-made sweet dairy. There is a liberal supply of second grade, for which there is no demand.

CHEESE.—The stocks are all Ontario of excellent quality, and jobbers are holding at 13½c.

EGGS.—In spite of the weather having turned very mild the scarcity of eggs continues and there is no prospect of increased supplies. Dealers quote 22c. Winnipeg for fresh eggs, subject to candling.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, November 23, 1902.

DURING the last week the wholesale grocery business has been remarkably good, and all dealers are kept constantly busy making up and shipping fall and winter orders which are coming in regularly, and of good volume, from the travellers on the road, or by mail. The markets show no signs of weakness and there is every confidence that the present good business will continue. With the general sale of farm produce now going on the country seems well supplied with money and purchases are made with great liberality. The jobbers throughout the country, anticipating a good trade through the winter season, are stocking up freely. For the past month a heavy trade has been done in this city with the shore ports which have no rail communication, and are shut in by ice for a portion of the season, but this trade is about over. Navigation is still open; in fact, we have had no frost and only one slight flurry of snow, but the fact that the close of navigation along the coasts is uncertain causes the bulk of this trade to be out through before the middle of November.

Last week an advance of 10c. on sugar was noted in New York, and as this article is easily affected, the advance will be made here in full, though at present only 5 cents advance is quoted. Molasses is in good demand, and full quotations given earlier in the season are being realized.

Flour is still firm with an advancing tendency, some brands of Manitoba being quoted at 10c. higher during the past week. Rolled oats are very firm and have advanced 50c. during the last month. Cornmeal is also firm with an upward tendency. Bran costs $2 per ton more than a month ago, and all mill feeds are firm. This is the season when considerable trade is done in feeds preparatory to the winter season, but stocks in the city are not heavy.

The fish markets are still dull, on account of no improvement having taken place in the Southern markets. The wholesalers are not anxious to buy, having already large stocks on hand sufficient for their requirements. Holders are now accepting a price they refused a month ago. This is accounted for by the fact that a very large quantity of Newfoundland fish have been brought here—and once here they must be sold at any price the markets will afford. Stocks of herring are light, the catch being below the average, and good fat grocery are worth 25c. more than a week ago. Mackerel are easier, as there was a fairly good catch. Two dollars decline is quoted from the high price of a few weeks ago.

A large quantity of P. E. Island potatoes, oats and turnips are now coming forward and the prices remain fairly steady. No doubt, there are large quantities purchased now which will be stored, and when the importations are stopped by the close of navigation higher prices will be quoted. Oats are now 40 to 43c.; P. E. Island potatoes, 38c.; Nova-Scotian, 45 to 50c.

Hay is an article on which there is a great difference of opinion among dealers—it all depending on whether they want to buy or sell. The export demand this season will be less than last; this means, no doubt, lower prices. Then, again, the crop in Nova Scotia has been large, and that in Quebec remarkably so. The sellers quote to-day $10, while the buyers are not prepared to take large stocks off the hands of producers, while Quebec hay can be purchased for $9, and it is said the quality of the Quebec crop this season equals that of the Maritime Provinces. In all probability the quotation will set tle down to something like $9 to $10.

The ss. Ask, which arrived Saturday from the West Indies, brought 8,775 packages of fruits for this port, New Brunswick and the Upper Provinces. Twenty-three carloads left here yesterday (Sunday) for the latter places. The ss. Dahome, which arrived yesterday from the West Indies, brought a large quantity of sugar for the Woodside Refinery.

The apples shipped by the Elder-Dempster ss. Lake Champlain were the finest ever seen in Liverpool, the mammoth size surprising English buyers.

Every inch of space at Yorkton, Man., is filled with wheat, but the blockade is only temporary as the construction trains are being filled with the grain.

J. W. Mitchell, for the past two years Dominion Superintendent of Maritime Creameries, has resigned and will take the position of manager of the Kingston City Dairy Co.

Swift & Co. will expend $200,000 in enlarging the premises of Fowler's Canadian Co., Hamilton, which they have just bought. It is their intention to make it the largest plant of its kind in Canada.

Allen McIlroy has purchased the Gretchell saw and grist mill at Waterville, N.B., for $2,000.

Mr. Jardine, trade commissioner in South Africa, has sent a report to the Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa, in which he states that Great Britain is getting a great deal of the trade, and if Canadians would only push their products enough, they would get a lot of that which is now going to the United States.

The R.M.S. Miowera left Vancouver, B.C., on November 16, with the first consignment of oats for Australia. Dealers in grain there are receiving numerous inquiries as to the possibility of securing Canadian wheat for the Australian markets. The shipment on the Miowera consisted of 50 tons, and if the undertaking proves successful larger shipments will be sent.

RESULTS OF ADVERTISING.

MR. M. B. DAVIS, president of The American Tobacco Co. of Canada and The Empire Tobacco Co., in his evidence before the Royal Commission, said that he was a great believer in newspaper advertising, and that the companies had contracts for advertising with over 850 publications. The success of the two companies he considered was due, in a great measure, to their advertising, which is not only very extensive, but also judiciously placed.

The former proprietor of The Empire Tobacco Co., Mr. Archibald, spent $2,308.66 in advertising. Selling out to the present proprietors, The Empire tobaccos have become among the best known and most used in Canada, being pushed forward with advertising amounting to $250,579.36 since the first part of 1899. This sum is only about half of what the two companies have spent. The results of this advertising have well justified the expenditure. In no other way could these two companies have obtained such a firm hold on so large a number of dealers and consumers as by using the advertising columns of those publications that go direct to probable purchasers.

INQUIRIES ABOUT CANADIAN GOODS,

Among inquiries received by the Canadian Section of the Imperial Institute are the following :

A firm of merchants in London are open to take up a first-class Canadian lawn mower, and invites correspondence from manufacturers of same.

A Dublin house asks for names of Canadian dealers who can supply turkey quills in considerable quantities.

A London house would like to hear from Canadian owners of slate quarries who could ship large quantities of roofing slates of first-class quality.

[The names of the firms making the above inquiries can be obtained on application to the Editor of THE CANADIAN GROCER.]

ADULTERATED FOODS IN BRITAIN.

The annual report of the British Local Government Board for the year on the adulteration of foods shows that 67,841 samples were analyzed. Of these 5,989 were of goods that violated the pure food law of Great Britain, known as the Food and Drug Act. Milk furnished 2,938 of the offenders, or 11.2 per cent. of the samples of milk taken. Butter furnished 1,234 of the total of food adulterations found, or 10.3 per cent. of the samples examined. Milk and butter, therefore, yielded together 4,163 of the 5,989 adulterated samples found. The English cheese is relatively pure, Only 18 adulterations were found out of 1,652 samples taken.

TWO GENERAL STORES.

THE village of Thedford, Ont., contains two very neat general stores. One is owned by A. Beattie & Co., of St. Marys, and is managed by E. Newkirk, a young man, enterprising and businesslike. Your correspondent had a look all over this store and was surprised to see how well arranged and displayed the goods were. The stock carried is quite large, but room is found for adequate display. Altogether this store is a model of neatness and shows in every part of it evidences of the care and attention expended upon it by Mr. Newkirk and his staff of clerks.

The other general store at Thedford is conducted by Mackenzie & Meldrum, both young men of bright ideas and up-to-date methods. The building is quite new, which fact has given the opportunity for the employment of modern ideas in the arrangement of goods. The grocery stock is so arranged as to be within easy reach at all times, and placed in such a way that every article can be seen at a single glance. The window dressing was particularly good.

These two young men and Mr. Newkirk deserve credit for having made it possible for the village of Thedford to boast of having two of the best general stores of any village of the size in Ontario.

THE FRUIT MARKS ACT.

The Department of Agriculture at Ottawa is persistent in its efforts to prevent the fraudulent packing of fruits by shippers, and is continually happening upon some new evidence that this practice is widespread. Two fruit inspectors have been visiting several of the wholesale firms in the capital examining barrels of apples. They found some barrels of some consignments marked No. 1, when their real grade was No. 2, and other wrong markings of a similar nature. It is the intention of the Department of Agriculture to prosecute those shippers who offend in this way.

This close surveillance and prompt punishment is likely to result well before long; and fruits will really be what the grade mark represents them to be.

TRADE IN COUNTRIES OTHER THAN OUR OWN.

TEAS IN NEW YORK.

RUMORS were current of increased interest being shown in the market for greens and that negotiations were under way on a fairly good-sized block. Offerings of black teas were small, importers, generally, being indifferent sellers. The firm and advancing market for Indian and Ceylons was expected to favorably influence the market for Congous. The line business continued fairly active. —N. Y. Journal of Commerce, November 24.

ORANGES IN CALIFORNIA.

Mail advices from Los Angeles, Cal., say of oranges: "Oranges are coloring gradually, but the indications are that there will not be nearly as many in shape for shipment for the Christmas trade as during the past several seasons. The navels are a good average run of sizes, but the seedlings are small, a good many of them running 200s to 250s, inclusive.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

CANNED GOODS IN BALTIMORE.

There is little to note in the canned goods market. The more the situation develops under the statistician's glass and pencil the more certain it becomes that canned corn is going to be the scarcest of all things in this line of business, and that tomatoes will not be a larger crop than it was last year, which was known to be less than a year's requirement, on the basis of previous annual prices. And some few strange things are developing in respect to this article. We do not believe that there has ever been a year throughout the country, among people acquainted with the tomato canning industry, when California was expected to put up so large a pack. Coming as a second season of high price and wide demand, especially from the middle-West for canned tomatoes, it was to be expected that California would outdo herself this year. But now that the season is completely closed there, it develops that the Californian pack will not be as large as it was last year, and that there will be little or none to spare for sections east of Salt Lake.—Baltimore Trade, November 21.

SUGAR IN NEW YORK.

Late on Friday refiners advanced prices for all grades 10 points. Subsequent to the advance they refused to take orders on the basis of previous quotations. The market opened on Saturday firm at the advance. Brokers stated that they had numerous orders to be placed at old quotations, but refiners would only sell at full quoted prices. Arbuckle Brothers and The National continued to give seven days' delayed shipment, with prices guaranteed on day of arrival. The American, however, would accept orders for prompt delivery only and gave no guarantees of prices. Confidence in the situation was general and before the close of the day a fair demand sprung up and considerable business was transacted at the advance. The close of the market was strong and as the difference between prices for raw and refined is only a narrow one, well informed interests in the trade expect another advance in prices on either Monday or Tuesday. The sugars from the Pacific Coast continued to be held out of the market.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce, November 21.

FIGS IN LONDON.

Figs are again slightly dearer, and the quality of the latest arrival is anything but satisfactory. The top layers appear good, but, unfortunately, this is not continued right through. The supplies are practically over, and the stock is too short to admit of any alteration in the present values. Tap figs are remarkably cheap, considering that there are no good naturals to be purchased under 30s.; in fact, there is nothing else but taps to supply the popular 3d. ticket. The latest advices respecting these, however, is not so satisfactory as it might have been hoped, as nearly all the shippers refuse to quote forward, saying that the entire crop has been shipped.—Produce Markets' Review.

VALENCIA RAISINS IN LONDON.

The market for Valencias has again disappointed the prophets of lower prices, and the result of this week's trade has certainly been very favorable to importing merchants. The quality of the fruit offered is perceptibly lower in grade than the sales of the two preceding weeks; in fact, it is now becoming evident that the remnants of a picked-over stock only remain, both in Spain and London. The available supplies, both in transit and the stock in warehouses, which will be offered during the coming week, are again smaller, and although it is most sincerely to be hoped that no increase in values will be instituted, yet, with such short supplies, the sensitive nature of the position would make anything possible. In fact, a great many of the sellers not only preach, but are evidently sincere in the belief, that the position warrants the lowest price to be 42s., and it is not too much to say that extreme prices have been prevented by the tactics and determination of the dealers to resist, step by step, anything in the nature of an advance. The stock still remaining in Spain is reported from a very reliable source to be 1,500 tons, and, as there seems little reason to doubt this statement, the fear of any decline in price would seem to be improbable. On the other hand, if on such a position a considerable advance in price is avoided, the trade will have every reason to congratulate themselves.—The Produce Markets' Review.

CANNED GOODS IN LONDON.

There is a material improvement to note in the general demand, but business during the week has been of a limited character. The market for French sardines remains very firm, and, although it is possible with so many other articles at this season of the year demanding attention, a temporary limit of prices has been reached, those who are in a position to gauge the situation from both the suppliers' and consumers' point of view are agreed that higher prices cannot fail to be realized for these goods as soon as the spring demand commences, and probably earlier. A few parcels of matured fish are still to be secured and the trade can scarcely be wrong in holding heavier stocks than usual to meet their future requirements. Choice lobsters in ½-lb. tins are now practically off the market, but some splendid parcels still remain in 1-lb. tall tins. The consumptive demand for salmon has been on a limited scale, but a larger business is passing for forward delivery. Although meats are in rather less demand, valuations for some brands are slightly dearer. Pines at the moment are showing very good value, and, as other fruits, especially apricots, are likely to remain at a higher basis than last season, it appears safe to assume that pines will again receive a lot of attention in the coming year. Slightly higher prices are now asked for the new pack, which should be ready for shipment about the end of December, and will probably arrive here about the middle of February. Tomatoes are in a very strong position, and prices are advancing. Unfortunately, the shipments are considerably behind this year, which has caused a lot of dissatisfaction to those who made forward purchases.—Produce Markets' Review.

OUR TRADE WITH ENGLAND.

THE following letter was sent to The London Times by Canada's High Commissioner, Lord Strathcona, and was published in that paper recently:

"It is generally well known that for some years past the exports of the produce of the Dominion to the Mother Country have been rapidly increasing. The following figures (the Canadian fiscal year ends on June 30), bearing on that part of the question, speak for themselves:

| | Total Canadian Exports. | Exports to Great Britain. |
|---|---|---|
| 1902 | $196,019,000 | $109,348,000 |
| 1901 | 177,431,000 | 92,857,000 |
| 1899 | 138,462,000 | 85,114,000 |
| 1897 | 123,959,000 | 69,533,000 |
| 1895 | 103,085,000 | 57,903,000 |
| 1890 | 85,257,000 | 41,499,000 |

"The exports consist largely of horses, live cattle, meats of all kinds, general farm and dairy produce, and fruits. Other considerable items in the trade are the products of the mine, the forest, the fisheries, and the manufactories of the different Provinces.

"Prior to 1896 the imports from Great Britain, of its staple manufactures, were decreasing; but, owing to the influence of the preferential tariff, abundant harvests, and increased immigration, the trade has since been advancing, as is shown by the following figures:

| | Total Canadian Imports. | Imports from Great Britain. |
|---|---|---|
| 1902 | $202,791,000 | $49,215,000 |
| 1901 | 181,237,000 | 43,018,000 |
| 1899 | 154,051,000 | 37,060,000 |
| 1897 | 111,294,000 | 29,412,000 |
| 1890 | 112,765,000 | 43,390,000 |

"There is plenty of room for the expansion of Canadian exports to Great Britain, and of British exports to Canada. Canadians believe that, all other things being equal, there is a disposition in the United Kingdom to look favorably on the products of the Canadian farms, dairies and orchards—such as wheat, oats, flour, butter, cheese, eggs, bacon, hams, and other meats, canned goods of all kinds, and fruits; and also on the other natural products and manufactures to which reference has been made. The trade might be much increased if consumers would inquire for Canadian products among the many kinds that are imported.

"My principal object in writing is to state again that the Canadian Government is anxious to facilitate as much as possible communication between British exporters and Canadian importers and Canadian exporters and British importers; and that correspondence is invited in any department from merchants and importers who are interested. Statistics and other information relating to the different branches of Canadian trade—both imports and exports—are available; and the various trade journals, daily and weekly papers, official reports, and business directories are on file in the library and reading-room, and may be inspected at any time. I trust the fact of the existence of these facilities may be widely noticed, and am inclined to the opinion that, if they are largely utilized, it must lead to closer and more extensive commercial relations between the Dominion and Mother Country.

"I am, sir, your obedient servant,

"STRATHCONA,

"High Commissioner for Canada,

"Offices of the High Commissioner for Canada, 17 Victoria street, London, S.W., November 1."

HELPING ONE'S TOWN.

EVERY grocer desires to do much for the town he lives in and is interested in suggestions as to how it can be improved. The following from Merchants' Review deals with the question in a new way:

In a general way it is correct to say that the merchant who does most for his business does most for his town. We speak, of course, only of the business side of the question. A citizen may build hospitals and libraries for his town, without helping it from the point of view of the town "boomer," who would rather see one factory erected than half a dozen ornamental or eleomosynary structures.

Therefore, if a retail merchant feels longings to help the general activity of business in his town, let him "boom" his own business with all his might and main. And there is no better specific for it than printing ink, printing used in the local papers. Support of the town papers in a free and generous spirit will be reflected in an improved activity of local industries, for the more prosperous the local press becomes, the more effective it proves as an agency for helping the town by attracting outsiders of reputation and financial resources.

Local newspapers that are well patronized are able to employ superior talent, which is bound to be recognized abroad. The advertising of the town which ensues as a consequence of the circulation of the articles in the local papers, is the very best kind of advertising and also the very cheapest.

The mere frequent changing of the local ads. in the local papers has a good effect. It brightens up the pages and indirectly encourages the editor and his assistants to do better work, therefore we recommend the grocers of all the sleepy towns of the country to make frequent changes of their advertising matter in the home papers. Support the papers with advertising and with items of news that may come to your notice, and, above all, let your advertising be fresh. When the ads. are not fresh one infers that the goods are in the same condition.

Woe to the grocery trade, woe to the town, when all the grocers' stores display nothing fresh except the manners of the assistants!

"Why, John," said Mrs. Porkpacque, "ain't you goin' to wear your diamond studs to the banquet?"

"Naw," replied Mr. Porkpacque, "what's the use? My napkin would hide 'em, anyway."—Philadelphia Press.

The Value of Annealing.

Annealing is the most costly step of mantle making—consequently a cheap mantle cannot be properly annealed—That is the reason a cheap mantle caves in like this if you lay it on its side, after burning off the coating—Try one—They injure your trade.

Mantles branded A are thoroughly annealed over pressure gas—They fit the burner—They don't shrink—They stand up this way—They are reliable—They help your trade.

GOOD ADVERTISING.

Notes by Miss Nora Laugher, Toronto.

I OFTEN wonder if progressive and conscientious advertisers ever consider how much good they are doing commercially for the advancement of their country. Advertising in Canada has not only created new industries all over the Dominion, but it has greatly added to Canada's wealth. Advertisements, in addition to being an educative power to the home-born citizen, help to instruct and elevate the foreign population, who thereby gain a better idea of their adopted country and teach foreigners the advantage of using the goods they find in this country and the profit there is in adopting modern western methods. Advertisements ofttimes put them on the road to fortune.

That remarkably gifted writer, Thomas McQueen, who will long be remembered as indefatigably trying to build up a native literature amongst us, often ended his eloquent editorials with the earnest appeal, "Will nobody write a few songs for Canada?" Well, there are Canadian song-writers and there are Canadian ad.-writers, and the latter are also nobly doing their part for their country.

At the passing of the year, we, who are interested in advertising, naturally look back to the short age of the ad. and its wonderful evolution. Fifteen or twenty years ago advertising was largely a mystery to the Canadian merchant. He was, however, regarding it seriously, much as he might contemplate some new business venture—as an experiment. Then there suddenly sprang into bloom the advertising writer to preach the new gospel of advertising. Most wise men have come from the East, yet I have reason to believe that the advertising specialist, like young Lochinvar, came out of the west. That he has preached his gospel well, and that he is here to stay, is well evidenced by the fact that he is here now and "talkin' yet." He is here, firstly, because it taxes the ability of the merchant or the manufacturer to know his own business. It is not to be expected that he should know another business in addition. The business of advertisement-writing is decidedly a business—I was about to say a profession. Advertising is no small thing to be trifled with. If handled carelessly or injudiciously it may mean the sinking of many dollars, even small fortunes. On the other hand, good advertising backed up by the right kind of storekeeping saves money by building business and by building it thoroughly. Secondly, the art of newspaper-making is studied from an interior point of view by the advertisement-writer. He has to do this to know his business. He has to learn all about type—what styles go harmoniously together—when to use borders—when not to use them—whether or not a line will "come in" in a certain size and style, and last, but not least, how to write good, common-sense English and convert it into convincing talk to interest purchasers.

What manufacturer himself would have time to sit down and think out such splendid and unique advertising as the Sapolio "Spotless Town" literature of Artemus Ward, or the famous "Jim Dumps" Force Food ads., created by that clever woman Miss Minnie Maud Hanff?

Wise old Tupper wrote: "Policy counselleth a gift, given wisely and in season;

Canadian railroad advertising has induced thousands of United Statesers (I do not think our cousins across the border have the sole right to the use of the term "Americans" any more than Russians would have to the exclusive use of the term Europeans) and other foreigners to visit our picturesque country, the result being a large influx of population which has been of unquestionable advantage to the Dominion. There is room, however, for much improvement and development of this line of advertising from which our country should reap much larger advantage.

and policy afterwards approveth it, for great is the influence of gifts."

At no season of the year does a gift seem so appropriate as at Christmas or the New Year. The sagacious man of business fully realizes this. He knows there is no success without popularity; he has learned by experience that customers should talk favorably of him and his store. In securing this good-will useful advertising novelties are exceedingly helpful. They may take the form of a calendar, a small match-box, key ring with celluloid tag which opens, showing owner's name and address, a blotter, memo tablet, postage-stamp holder, car-ticket case, small looking glass, or a hundred-and-one different things on which could be displayed a little advertisement of the donor.

A useful advertising novelty is a good lead pencil, but it must be a good lead pencil, or the recipient will be apt to divide his profanity between the pencil itself and the firm that sent it. If you give a pencil give one of the good kind that will prompt a person to write an order with it for your goods.

If the small novelty the business man presents to each of his customers is something useful, as it should be, it is preserved indefinitely by the receiver and thus becomes a constant reminder of the merchant's generous and up-to-date business methods.

A small gift at Christmas or New Year and honest dealing every day of the year makes a customer satisfied with the merchant and his store. Remember that a satisfied customer is one of the best ads. a merchant can have, for mouth-advertising cuts as great a figure to-day as it did 50 years ago.

Remember every week of this new year that your ad. next week will be more profitable if your ad. this week gives the people what they want and the goods delivered are on a par with your promises.

CO-OPERATIVE STORE TRADING.

Editor CANADIAN GROCER,—I do not know if our brother grocers in Canada have to fight against the co-operative stores and limited liability or joint stock companies (who are all exempt from income tax) as we have to in the Old Country, but the question here is being taken up in earnest by the grocers' associations in the larger towns, and the fight promises to be a very hot one. I have just written the enclosed on "The Traders' Battle," and am sending a copy to every applicant in the United Kingdom, but if you care to reprint it in your trade paper for the benefit of your readers, you are quite at liberty to do so.

I am, etc.,
H. N. RYMER.
84 Chapel Field Road, Norwich, Eng.

The following is an extract from "The Traders' Battle," referred to in the above. We give it, not because grocers in Canada have a direct interest in the questions which are agitating their British confreres, but because they doubtless desire to be informed of what is going on in the trade in the Mother Country:

"At the present time we are hearing a good deal about taxation and representation in connection with the Education Bill. Now this applies very much to the traders of the country, who have to pay the bulk of the taxes. Let them, therefore, unite their forces everywhere and join their association, and let them petition Parliament, and not rest until co-operative stores and joint stock companies all pay income tax. This is a rank injustice to the honest trader. We don't deny the co-operator's right to trade, but we demand that they should pay their honest share of the taxes. Failing this, I would suggest that every co-operative or other trading concern exempt from income tax should be compelled to pay a yearly license of £50, and more in proportion to the trade done. Then let traders wait upon their local Members of Parliament when in their constituencies and point out the injustice.

"Trade unionism and co-operation are ruining the trade of the country. The support of the wholesale houses, especially the manufacturers, must be obtained, and they must be informed that if they desire your support they must encourage their employes to deal with the local traders. Let us send more trade representatives to Parliament and on the town councils. If not, we shall have the trade unionist and socialist, who advocate the cause of co-operation, getting in instead.

"It is not long since they introduced a class book into some board school that advertised co-operative principles, but this was nipped in the bud, but it shows the artfulness of the co-operators. Then, again, let every grocer see that his shop and windows are always up to date, clean and bright, and assistants must be trained to win trade by their courteous and obliging manners to customers. Every employer can help them very much in this important matter by remembering that example is better than precept. It is very important that a more cordial feeling between master and man should exist. It is a fatal blunder (made by some employers) in treating their assistants with less civility than they do their dogs, but treating men with proper respect and taking a little trouble to make their lot happier is the cheapest and best advertisement to any business. The fight against co-operation must be slow, sure and effectual, and nothing done to advertise the movement. In a long conversation lately with a co-operation committeeman he expressed the wish that the traders of his town would follow the example of the St. Helens traders. So it will be wise to see the result there, before the same tactics are largely adopted. Let every trader thoroughly study the principles of present-day co-operation, and be able to explain to any wavering customer how the dividend is paid for; and by honest dealing, good cash value and civility, the passing of the grocer will yet be a long way off.

"You must create a good impression by a regular system of advertising, but this must be attractive and something that will command attention. Follow up by giving good value all around, and having a personal knowledge of your regular customers." H. N. R.

THE PROVISION TRADE

AND COLD STORAGE NEWS.

THE FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE.

OWING to the outbreak of the foot and mouth disease in the New England States, the English Board of Agriculture, on November 28, issued an order excluding from the English ports live cattle coming from Boston. The order is to take effect December 5. On this side of the Atlantic, the United States Secretary of Agriculture prohibited the exportation of cattle from Boston as the only safe way of dealing with the infection. One hundred individual reports of the presence of the disease have reached the Cattle Bureau of the State Board of Agriculture, and a quarantine of all cattle, sheep and swine in New England has been established.

The foot and mouth disease is a highly contagious disease of cattle, sheep and swine, characterized by vesicles and ulcers in the mouth and about the hoofs and lips of the animals, and also affects such small prey as rabbits, rats, etc. That is why all ruminants have been included in the quarantine of the New England States. It is said that tuberculosis among them is not half so dreaded a malady.

According to the bacteriologists of the New York City Health Department, the disease is new to this continent, but is well known in Europe, especially in Belgium. The mortality from it is not high, but it is extremely contagious. It is due largely to the heat from organic matter, and it attacks the hind hoofs first, when the animals stand in their stalls. The disease is transmitted to the mouth when the animal licks its feet, and is thus called the hoof and mouth disease. The germs of the poison enter the blood through the stomach, much the same as those of diphtheria. The temperature is elevated and fever sets in. This, of course, affects the milk of the cow, and will naturally injure those who drink it. A Dutch cow brought pleuro-pneumonia to this country in 1841. It was called the cow distemper, and the United States lost from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000 worth of cattle in a year, but finally stamped it out. Dr. Austin Peters, chairman of the State Cattle Bureau, says: "Cattle passing over the same road traversed by infected animals will contract the disease. Only the most stringent quarantine will prevent a scourge hitherto unknown in this country."

The interruption of the cattle export trade is a serious affair, both for the transport companies and for the Mersey Dock Board. This Board derives great revenue from the slaughter of Boston cattle, and the announcement of the closing of the ports caused great excitement at Birkenhead. The order does not directly affect shipments from New York or Canadian ports. Portland will be included in the order, however, and trade will probably be diverted to St. John and Halifax.

The cattle traffic, which is interrupted by the closing of the Brighton stock yards, aggregates from 500 to 700 head a day. Two or three weeks' interruption would mean a loss of $50,000 to steamship companies, whose rates are about $7.50 a head on cattle and on sheep 87½ cents each.

The news reached Toronto last Friday afternoon and made things about the local cattle market lively. The cattle men concluded that our Government should at once take steps, in every legal manner, to protect the Canadian cattle, and wired Hon. Mr. Fisher, Minister of Agriculture, to stop American cattle and cattle cars at the port of entry till all danger was past. A despatch was received in the evening stating that the Government would see that all cattle cars were cleaned and disinfected, but that in the absence of Mr. Fisher in Quebec nothing further could be done.

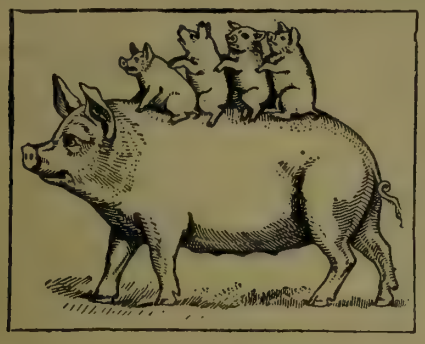
The effect the order of the British Government will have on the Canadian cattle export trade, which amounts to $10,000,000 annually, is alarming to a certain class. By some of these it is feared that Canadian cattle might also be included in the order, and by others of the same class that sufficient boat space cannot be secured.

As regards the former, on Monday, December 1, further action was taken by the Canadian Government. The Department of Customs, at the instance of the Minister of Agriculture, prohibited absolutely the entrance of cattle into Canada from the six New England States declared to be infected with the disease. The order issued on Monday by the Commissioner of Customs, and mailed direct to all our ports and Customs stations, is as follows:

"You are instructed that the importation of cattle, sheep or swine from the six New England States of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island is prohibited on account of disease. Shipments of cattle, sheep or swine originating or passing through any of these six New England States from November 30, 1902, are therefore not to be allowed entry into Canada."

This order, it will be observed, precludes the shipment of cattle through by the C. P. R. from the Northwest to St. John, N. B., inasmuch as for a very short distance its line runs through the State of Maine. Montreal dealers at first objected to this, but withdrew their protest when it was explained to them that, to make an exception, even in a route so obviously secure, might possibly lead to confusion and distrust in official quarters in England, with results probably disastrous to the Canadian cattle trade.

Another relaxation in regard to the order of the Department of Agriculture, dealing with empty cars and vessels bound to Canadian ports, was asked on Tuesday by the agents of steamships sailing from Boston, and desiring to complete cargoes by taking cattle at St. John, from the Government, but no action was taken upon it, pending a reply from London to Hon. Sydney Fisher's cablegram of Saturday, notifying the British Board of Agriculture of the action taken by the Government at Ottawa to prevent communication of the disease to Canadian cattle.



With regard to shipping facilities the dates of boats sailing from St. John show that nine boats leave that port between now and January 3 for Liverpool alone, besides boats for other British ports. No apprehension need be felt, therefore, as to boat space not being available.

Mr. Fisher has the following to say: "We have forbidden absolutely any entry of cattle from the six infested New England States into this country. We have also communicated, through the High Commissioner in London, with the Imperial authorities, informing them of what steps we are taking. We have, further, telegraphed to the Department of Agriculture at Washington, to ascertain what they are doing there to prevent spread of the trouble in the United States." Continuing, he said, "but if exportation be forbidden by way of Portland and Boston an attempt might be made to run cattle from the infested districts into St. John for shipment, so we must guard against bringing the disease into Canada or having ships sailing from Canadian ports infested, which would ruin our cattle trade with Great Britain, as this outbreak is ruining the cattle export trade from the New England States."

Professor Duncan McEachren, honorary veterinary adviser to the Canadian Government, stated last week that the embargo placed on American shipments would probably give Canada a temporary advantage. He says the disease is not a mortal one and in most outbreaks deaths are rare. Knowing the thorough knowledge possessed on all these matters by the Secretary of Agriculture at Washington and the confidence he places in his chief of the bureau of animal industries, Dr. McEachren says the outbreak near Boston will be dealt with promptly and effectually, and, no doubt, will be confined to the infected area. Being asked how long it will take to eradicate the disease from the infected district, the doctor replied about three months, but he said no one could tell how long the British restrictions would be continued. It must be remembered that British ports were closed to Argentine cattle for three years, and cattle on the way when the order was received had to be destroyed at sea.

Secretary of Agriculture Wilson has the following to say: "My latest report from the infected district is that the disease is at a standstill. The next report shall decide the number of men I shall send to New England. A large number will go. Before many days shall have passed there will be several hundred veterinary surgeons in the New England States, and they will be instructed to examine every cow, sheep and hog. I believe we shall need three or four weeks to stamp out the disease. Congress will be asked for a special appropriation to cure the disease permanently. I intend to ask for at least $1,000,000."

With the stoppage of the importation of cattle from Boston, increased pressure has been brought to bear upon the British Government to rush a short Act through Parliament admitting Canadian store cattle. Hon. Mr. Hanbury, speaking on Saturday, repeated his refusal to relax the embargo on Canadian cattle, asserting that the Board of Agriculture must at least protect the British farmer against the importation of disease, though, of course, no one knows better than Mr. Hanbury that, seeing that 1,000,000 Canadian cattle have been landed without the smallest suspicion of disease, it is ridiculous to suggest any risk from Canadian herds. Large cattle arrivals at Liverpool are keeping prices below recent quotations. The highest prices obtained at Liverpool on Saturday for the best quality were 5 to 5¼d. per lb., against 7d. two months ago. Second-class beef also was never so plentiful, and the immense further supplies now on the sea make better prices improbable for the present.

CORNWALL CHEESE BOARD.

During the season just closed there were boarded on the Cornwall Cheese Board 50,487 boxes of cheese, 51 packages of butter, and sales recorded are 48,887 boxes of cheese.

In 1901 there were 46,205 boxes of cheese and 132 packages of butter boarded, and sales recorded for that season are 38,000 boxes of cheese and 94 packages of butter.

Lowest price for cheese in 1902 was 9⅛c.; highest, 12⅛c.; average for all cheese sold, 10.126c. In 1901 lowest was 8⅛c.; highest, 9⅞c.; average, 9.09c.

MONTREAL.

A fairly good trade has been done during the week in nearly all lines of provisions and hog products. Fairbank's "Boar's Head" lard compound has been reduced to 9⅜c. tierce basis, a reduction of ¼c. Pure lard is ⅛c. higher, and is now quoted at 12⅛ to 12⅜c. per lb. in cases of 60 lb., in 3, 5 and 10-lb tins.

There has been no change in the price of dressed hogs, which rule steady at $8.50 for fresh-killed abattoir stock and $7.50 for country killed.

Hams are in fair demand at steady prices, and an active trade has being doing in bacon. Our quotations are as follows: Pure Canadian lard, $2.30 to $2.32½ per pail; Fairbank's "Boar's Head" lard compound, 9⅜c. tierce basis, with extras as follows: 60-lb. tubs, ¼c. over tierce; 20-lb. tin pails, ¼c.; 20-lb. wood pails, ½c.; 10-lb. tins, ¾c.; 5-lb. tins, ⅞c.; 3-lb. tins 1c. ## WEST-INDIAN PRODUCTS.

IN this week's issue THE CANADIAN GROCER presents its readers with a cut of the British West-Indian exhibit, as it appeared at the Toronto Industrial Fair last September. The picture gives some idea of the extent and importance of this exhibit, but naturally it fails to do adequate justice to the whole thing. One would need to be present in person and examine carefully all the details in order to grasp the full significance of the important collection of West-Indian products there shown. The arrangement was excellent, and the various exhibits were placed as conveniently as possible to admit of a careful inspection. The throngs which crowded around the space allotted to this section evidenced the interest which was universally aroused by the luxuriant and curious products of the tropical Islands.

Next year, Pickford & Black, of Halifax, who originated and carried out the idea of the exhibit and who are to be congratulated on its success, intend to repeat their experiment on a large scale both at Toronto and at the Dominion capital. They are of the opinion that these exhibits will do a great deal to promote trade between the West Indies and Canada.

C. S. Pickford, who undertook the task of working up the interest of the people of the West Indies in the enterprise, and who also took charge of the exhibit at Toronto, informed THE GROCER that, although the work and worry was great, he looked forward to the pleasure of making, if possible, a larger showing next year. For this purpose he will probably leave Halifax for the West Indies about the middle of January, remaining there for six months.

Mr. Pickford says that, although his firm did the work of transporting the goods from the West Indies to Toronto and exhibiting them, their efforts would have been of no avail if they had not been backed up in the able manner they were by the exhibitors in the West Indies, as also by the following gentlemen : Luke Hill, Guy Wyatt, of Demerara ; T. Geddes Grant, Edgar Tripp, of Trinidad ; John Barclay, secretary of the Agricultural Society, Kingston, Jamaica, and last, but by no means least, Dr. Morris, C.M.G., Imperial Commissioner of Agriculture in the West Indies, and his lieutenants in the different Islands.

Dr. Morris, Mr. Pickford informs THE GROCER, passed through Toronto some three weeks ago on his way to Ottawa, and stated that he was more than delighted with Canada. He has control of the botanical stations in the different Islands, and is doing a great work for the West Indies in improving the sugar cane. Here alone he has succeeded in increasing the yield some 25 per cent. ; and also in fruit, cocoa and other products the improvement is marked. Take, for instance, onions ; both in Antigua and Dominica this article has been made a great success of, the former, in the last couple of years, having exported large quantities to the other Islands of the West Indies.

In this regard, Mr. Pickford says that he saw at Dominica last winter potatoes, beets, etc, which he does not think could be beaten in Canada ; he also states that trade between Canada and the West Indies is steadily increasing, and all that is wanted is for our manufacturers to push their wares by sending their representatives into the field, and good business will result. THE GROCER wishes Pickford & Black good luck in their efforts.

THREE GENERATIONS IN THE TEA TRADE.

JOSEPH TETLEY & CO., of London, Eng., Colombo, Montreal, Winnipeg, New York, Boston and Chicago, are one of the largest firms of wholesale tea merchants in the world. Their firm is one of three generations' standing, and is admitted to be one of the most reliable and enterprising in the wholesale tea trade. They are specialists in tea, and believe most strongly in Ceylon and Indian teas, dealing heavily in which has placed them at the head of the list in Great Britain.

Jos. Tetley & Co. in 1889 first introduced these teas to the Dominion of Canada and the United States of America, but found that the battle which they had fought and won triumphantly in Great Britain had to be fought even more stubbornly in these great countries. Ceylon and Indian teas were then practically unknown here. They therefore decided to introduce them in the packet form, and were the first firm in London, Eng., to which Her Britannic Majesty's Customs granted the privilege of having their own bonded warehouse for this purpose. They by this means induced the consumers of Canada and the United States of America to taste Ceylon and Indian teas, and now have the gratification of knowing that their own verdict on these sterling teas have been endorsed and confirmed here.

It is strange, however, that looking at the consumption of tea the world over, it is in Canada and the United States alone that the tea trade remains stationary. While in the last three years Ceylon and Indian teas have doubled their output in Canada and the United States, they have trebled their output even in the Empire of China, have increased it fourfold on the continent of Europe, and have swept all before them in Australia and Great Britain.

THE WORLD'S CONSUMPTION OF TEA.

|---|---|
| Great Britain | 221,000,000 |
| Canada and United States | 117,000,000 |
| Russia, etc. | 98,000,000 |
| Australia | 31,000,000 |
| | 1900. Lb. |
| Great Britain | 250,000,000 |
| Russia, etc. | 132,000,000 |
| Canada and United States | 108,000,000 |
| Australia | 34,000,000 |

THE WORLD'S CONSUMPTION OF CEYLON AND INDIAN TEAS.

| | 1901. Lb. |
|---|---|
| Great Britain | 236,000,000 |
| Australia | 30,000,000 |
| Russia, etc. | 27,000,000 |
| Canada and United States | 18,000,000 |

From these interesting and important figures it will be seen at a glance that in Canada and the United States alone has the tea consumption actually declined in weight, though we think it safe to assume not in the volume of liquid tea drunk. One pound of Ceylon and Indian tea makes as much liquid tea, of equal strength and infinitely superior flavor, as two pounds, at least, of any other tea; therefore, Joseph Tetley & Co. are not surprised to see that the additional one million pounds of Ceylon and Indian teas now consumed in Canada and the United States have displaced 20 million pounds of tea from other countries, of a weaker growth—so, that, instead of taking 109 million pounds from other countries and 8 million pounds from Ceylon and India, as in 1895, Canada and the United States find it necessary to take only 90 million pounds from other countries, as they are now taking 18 million pounds annually of the stronger teas of Ceylon and India. We must, however, accept the fact of the tea consumption in these countries being stationary, if it is not declining. Is it because too many tea dealers in these countries are pushing low-priced common teas, with far too much regard for leaf-value and far too little regard for cup-value, which is resulting in a stationary tea trade and an increasing trade in coffee, cocoa, chocolate, etc?

Be this as it may, Joseph Tetley & Co. annually buy and sell more Ceylon and Indian tea than is consumed in the Dominion of Canada and the United States put together. They have always put quality first. Their watch-words are Quality and Uniformity, and as tea is to be drunk, not looked at, their packet teas and their loose blends are standards of cup-value the world over. This is why they sell annually nearly 20 million pounds of high-grade Ceylon and Indian teas. Their standard teas win them staunch and lasting friends, because in trading they build on a solid foundation. They do not take large profits, nor do they give lots of credit, but they buy for cash in the largest tea markets in the world, and sell close and on short terms, they make few bad debts, and so they give fighting value and their enormous turnover is always increasing. They enjoy the highest reputation to which a firm can attain in the tea trade. They put their name upon their packets and they put their shipping mark upon their standard blends of loose bulk teas as a guarantee of good faith, and as their business has been built upon quality, their goods stamp any store in which they are as one which sells high-grade articles.

Joseph Tetley & Company, buying for cash only, are always welcomed in the three great markets for Ceylon and Indian teas, and get whatever pull is going; but it is in London, where 250 million pounds of these teas annually pass the hammer, that their great strength is felt. At 5 and 7 Fenchurch, London, they have one of the finest tea salerooms in the world, in which they transact their immense home business. Here the work is so organized and systematized that they employ expert buyers for each of the following departments: Ceylon leaf-teas for home consumption; Ceylon broken teas; Ceylon teas for export; Indian leaf teas; Indian broken teas; Travancore teas; Java teas; China blacks; China greens; China Oolongs; China scenteds.

They have three expert tasters, who do nothing but select from their purchases the most suitable teas for exporting to Canada, the United States, and the continents of Europe and Africa. They have two experts who devote themselves to blending and packeting their highest-grade teas.

Joseph Tetley & Company's buying experts are admitted to be at the head of their profession. Through these skilled men they get the best and most suitable teas for their customers at the lowest possible prices. They have at No. 54 Commercial Road, London, large duty-paid and bonded warehouses, fitted with the latest electrical machinery for blending, weighing and packeting their teas. Here there is all that experience and expert knowledge can suggest to obtain the quality, uniformity and economy.

Joseph Tetley & Company's turnover is such that their packets and standard blends are always in the fighting front. Turnover means freshness. There is no necessity for their customers to stock heavy at one time, as they are quite satisfied to have their customers draw from their stocks as much or as little at a time as suits their own convenience.

TUNISIAN ALMOND HARVEST.

U. S. Consul T. Haynes, of Rouen, under date of October 21, 1902, writes:

The harvest of almonds in Tunis for 1902 is estimated at 175,000 kilograms (385,805 lb.). About one-third of this quantity is absorbed by the local demand, both in green and in a dry state; and many producers sell their harvest while still on the tree. Therefore, only about one-half of the stock mentioned can be said to be really on the market. The principal producing centres are: Sfax, 130,000 kilograms (286,598 lb.); Bizerta, 24,000 kilograms (52,910 lb.); and Sousse, 10,000 kilograms (22,046 lb.).

At Tunis, the average commercial value of green almonds in good sized lots is 15 francs (82.90) per 100 kilograms (220.46 lb.); the value of dry almonds is about four times as great; and the decorticated fruit brings 205 francs (839.50) per 100 kilograms. The stock on hand from the preceding harvest is insignificant—approximately 2,000 kilograms (4,409.2 lb.).

It is reported that the Newmarket district is an advantageous section for the cultivation of sugar beets.

The Chatham beet-sugar factory shipped a trainload of 25 cars of sugar to the Northwest last week.

Mr. Paterson, Minister of Customs, when asked if Canada would be effected by the abolition of the sugar bounties at the Brussels Convention said, "Directly, no; indirectly, yes."

The Ontario Sugar Co, Berlin, expect to handle at least 60,000 tons of beets this season.

Whitby, Ont., is among the latest places aspiring for a beet-sugar factory.

THE HANDLING OF BREAD.

THE report of Montreal's new bread inspector for the month of October is anything but flattering to certain members of the grocery trade of that city. He visited 14 grocers, and stated that the manner of keeping the bread in some of these places was truly alarming. As an example, he found in one store about 50 loaves lying on the floor, which was not at all clean, and apparently no attempt had been made to keep the bread away from the dirt. In other places he found in the boxes where the bread was kept, along with the bread, old boots, rotten potatoes, onions, matches, and, in one place, a can of kerosene. Leaf tobacco was spread out to dry at the bottom of the bread box in one store.

Then, again, the boxes were often not cleaned, and crumbs accumulating in the bottom became moistened and stuck to the box, being of a very offensive odor and decidedly unsanitary. The inspector stated that this was so pronounced in one case that a showcase where bread was kept was so filthy that cakes placed there in the morning turned sour before night and a white mould formed on them. These were given in exchange for children's pennies.

Grocers who harm their own trade in this way are certainly not deserving of any sympathy. The fact of the matter, however, is that they are very apt to hurt the trade of other grocers, whose methods of keeping and delivering bread are all that can be desired, as well as their own. These reports of the city bread inspector are made public and must have considerable influence on the people ; who, instead of allowing the fault to remain where it belongs, are very apt to distrust all grocers and buy their bread elsewhere.

The trade will benefit themselves by lending every effort to the authorities to stamp out these practices ; and it would, perhaps, be a move in the right direction if they could induce the inspector to give the names of those places he could not find fault with as well as of those he could. In this way dealers could preserve the confidence of their customers. The latter indeed would be likely to be all the more loyal to their grocer if they found that he was above the practices which were customary with others.

FORMING AN ASSOCIATION.

A MOVEMENT is on foot among the grocers of Gananoque, Ont., to form an association. One of those engaged in the movement writes asking for some suggestions as to ways and means of organizing.

Perhaps some of our readers who have had experience in the organization of similar associations will give us their experience.

In the meantime, however, we would suggest that the Gananoque merchants who are interested in the proposed association call a meeting of their fellow-business men to consider the matter. At this meeting a vote could be taken as to the advisability of organizing. If the decision was in the affirmative temporary officers might be appointed, or, if the meeting was sufficiently representative, the appointments might be made permanent for the ensuing term. Committees to draft constitution and by-laws and elicit the co-operation of merchants should also be created.

A DEMORALIZING PRACTICE.

A GOOD many men are still reaping the whirlwind of the recent period of inordinate speculation on the stock market, and not a few of those who were once rich are now poor.

While no one should glory over the losses which have been and are being suffered by speculators in margins, one cannot but recognize that a salutary lesson is being taught.

Suddenly-acquired riches are not the best kind of riches. "Easy come, easy go" is an old proverb that we seem inclined to forget these days. But whether suddenly-acquired riches are good or bad, the spirit which characterizes those who set out to acquire them by investing their small savings in them is certainly demoralizing. The gambling spirit which it cultivates is certainly not conducive to the public weal. But that is not the only objectionable feature about the practice. Another, and one that is scarcely less objectionable, is the spirit of unrest that it breeds. Merchants who are dominated by it are no longer satisfied with the money-making methods of ordinary business. These are dull, prosy and uninteresting. It is the $500 invested in margins, which, by the turn of the market, will produce $5,000, that gives zest to life. And thus, instead of watching for opportunities to develop and increase business, merchants and clerks who are victims of the stock-speculating fever are intent on watching the fluctuations of the stock market.

Nothing can be said against the practice of purchasing stocks outright, particularly for investment purposes. But merchants cannot look after their own business, or clerks the affairs of their employers when they are possessed with the stock-speculating fever. And the times of reaction which we have been experiencing during the past month or two teach us that it pays better in the long run to be faithful to the duties that legitimate business demands than by neglecting them to chase the wild will 'o the wisp of stock market speculation.

Early success creates over-confidence, while continued effort develops character.

TO PROMOTE TRADE IN HOME PRODUCTS.

LAST Summer a lady from Western Canada was visiting Quebec. She wanted a pair of gloves. She liked the style of workmanship on a very neat pair of kids that were shown in the retail store in that old city, and she wanted to know where they were made. After some hesitation the merchant admitted they were made in Quebec. This interested her very much and she went to the factory and saw them being made. Not one of them had the word "Canada" or any lettering to show that these excellent gloves were made in the Dominion.

In several of the leading cities there is a society called "Imperial Daughters of the Empire." It is composed of most of the prominent women of the place. In Toronto Mrs. Nordheimer is the head of the society. They have done a great deal for Canadian affairs.

The lady who found the gloves in Quebec is a member, and at one of the meetings shortly after her return she mentioned her experience. Several other women had similar stories to tell about other goods made in Canada, but which most people thought could not be made here. The matter was generally discussed, and it was eventually resolved to hold a small exhibition of articles of purely Canadian manufacture. The Canadian Manufacturers' Association was approached and their assistance asked. At first the ladies' proposition was not very enthusiastically received, because manufacturers are so frequently held up by all sorts of schemes, and this looked like another scheme. They were assured that this was not a plan to make money for a ladies' society. All the ladies wanted was to allow the people of Toronto to see and know something of Canadian products, and that all they wanted the manufacturers to do was to send in a small exhibit, and possibly pay a nominal sum to cover the actual expenses of the share of space they occupied in the hall or building where the exhibition would take place, and for expenses of advertising, and so on.

The Manufacturers' Association have now promised the ladies every assistance. A building is under offer, and it is likely the exhibition will take place about the end of January. If the space is limited it is proposed to select exhibits from among articles made in Canada, but which are also largely imported, leaving out, if necessary, such articles as Canada exports in greater quantities than she imports. Possibly, if a large enough building is obtained, many of these can be exhibited.

It is quite possible that the branches of the Daughters of the Empire in some of the other Canadian cities will hold similar exhibitions immediately after the one in Toronto, but nothing definite seems to have been decided about that.

This scheme is one of the very best for making known to the best class of buyers what Canada can do in every line of manufacture. Most schemes of this sort are fakes. This is the first one we have ever endorsed, and in the last 16 years we have criticized many.

We will be glad to give any further information regarding this exhibition to our readers who desire it, and put them in touch with the working secretary as soon as one is selected by the society.

CHINA TEA EXPORTS.

THE total exports of China teas from that country from the opening of the season of 1902 until the middle of October were 14,500,000 lb. more than for the same period last year, but 15,500 lb. less than for the corresponding period in 1900, and 6,000,000 lb. less than in 1899. The exact export figures are, 80,000,000 lb. for 1902, 65,500,000 lb. for 1901, 95,500,000 lb. for 1900 and 86,000,000 for 1899.

The greater portion of the China tea exports, 38,000,000 lb., came to America, 28,000,000 lb. went to Europe, 12,000,000 lb. to England and 2,000,000 lb. to Australian ports. The exports to America were greater this year than in any of the three preceding years, the figures for these years being 17,000,000 lb. in 1901, 34,000,000 lb. in 1900, and 25,000,000 lb. in 1899. The chief market for them is in the United States. There has been a steady decline since 1899 in the shipments of these teas to English ports, the figures being for 1902, as noted above, 12,000,000 lb., against 12,500,000 lb. for 1901, 16,000,000 lb. for 1900 and 22,000,000 lb. for 1899, a decline in three years of 10,000,000 lb.

POTATO SITUATION.

THE Toronto potato market is at present strong. Shippers from Quebec Province who have previously been quite free in their offerings are now holding back. The action of the railway companies in refusing to pay the cost of lining the cars to prevent freezing and also to bring them back empty to the points of shipment is increasing the cost of laying down the product in Toronto. So at the present quotations of 85 to 90c. per bag there is no money in this business for the potato-grower in Quebec. The prospects, therefore, are for higher prices, it would seem.

The potato crop of Canada on the whole is believed to be a good average one. It is also irregular. Some sections of Ontario which last year had considerable quantities to dispose of have none this year to offer, and in some instances are coming on the market as buyers and not as sellers. On the other hand, districts which had poor crops last year are liberal sellers this fall. It is, therefore, difficult to sum up the situation as the farmers, as a rule, are not showing any disposition to sell. Speaking generally, the crops in Quebec have been good.

Value your customers' friendship and make it lasting and well merited by guaranteeing satisfaction at all times.

SUGARS GAINING STRENGTH.

The sugar situation is full of surprises. The decline in Canadian refined on Wednesday was followed by an advance on the New York market of 10c. Cane sugars have also advanced 1-16c., and are now quoted on a basis of 3 15-16c. for 96 deg. centrifugals, duty paid, New York.

The European beet-sugar market has gone up, too, and the quotation for 88 deg. is now 8s. f. o. b., Hamburg.

In view of these developments, the present low values on the Canadian market are not expected to last long.

STARCH AS A FOOD.

IT is generally becoming widely known that our foods are in a large proportion made up of starch. The following article, from The Produce Merchants' Review, of London, Eng., contains a good deal of information on this matter:

There is an old story distinctly of the "ben trovato" order, which relates that a lady litigant at the law courts complained to the judge of having been insulted by an officer of the court. The judge asked what the man had said, and the lady replied, "He called me a woman."

Of course, a lady is a woman, just as a man is an animal, or a diamond is a bit of carbon; but none of the three will bear being called so in plain terms, so great is the clinging to what we may call courtesy titles. Now, it is much the same in regard to starch when used as a food, for we all eat it daily in large quantities, but we do not call it "Starch." Scientifically, however, the word starch is applied to the feculent matter yielded by a very large number of plants, either in their seeds, as in wheat, oats, maize, rice, etc.; in their roots, as in arrowroot, tapioca, potato, etc.; or even in the pith of the sago tree. By the term feculent, is meant briefly the particles that can be washed out with water, forming a cloudy or turbid liquor, which, when tranquil, redeposits the almost pure starch in the form of a white-looking mud, that, when dry, can be reduced to powder. The water used in this process does not in any sense dissolve the starch granules, but merely holds them in suspension, until at the first opportunity they again settle to the bottom. In our issue of August 2, we gave an article copied from The Journal of the Society of Arts, recounting various facts in connection with starch manufacture in the United States. Our present object is, however, to inquire whether the article scientifically known as starch plays any useful part in the human economy, whether, in fact, it is entitled to be ranked as a "food." On examining the chemical composition of starch, say, for instance, under its well-known form, "corn flour," the first thing that strikes us is its simplicity in construction. Starch consists of six parts of carbon, five parts oxygen and 10 parts hydrogen. The oxygen and hydrogen being present in the same relative proportions as in water we might even say that starch is pure carbon and water only. Not only is it simple in construction but it is also easy of solution—in fact, starch begins to be digested as soon as it is chewed and mixed with the saliva. Once swallowed it is rapidly converted into what is known as sugar (in digestive phraseology) and is available at a very early stage for the processes of assimilation into the mass of the blood. Some confusion exists in the minds of many people, who have given a partial attention to the subjects of foods and their utility, as to the services rendered by starch in the blood. Starch has been correctly classed among the carbo-hydrates, but it is often confounded with the hydro-carbons, or fats, both of these being alluded to as heat formers. In our view a more accurate description to apply to starch would be coolness in the former, as from the ease with which it can be split up in the digestive organs, starch yields its carbon, its oxygen, and its hydrogen very readily to the body, and the transmutation is accomplished without the evolution of much heat, or the concurrence of much nitrogen from the other branches of food. In this sense, while not itself a tissue or energy former, starch promotes tissue and energy inasmuch as it liberates, or, we might better say, avoids employing the nitrogenous principles present in other forms of food consumed at the same time, and which are consequently free to benefit the body in other ways. Now, with the hydro-carbon class or fatty articles taken as food, the case is just the reverse. Instead of being simple in composition and easily split up, fats and oily matters are generally very complex, and are assimilated with great difficulty in the body, giving rise, therefore, to great heat and a larger consumption of nitrogen, which must be present at all tissue changes. If all this be correct, the conclusion is, then, that in the temperate zones, starch is an article of food rightly so called; it furnishes necessary elements to the body in a condition easy of absorption, and spares other elements (derived from other sources) which otherwise would be largely diverted from their legitimate purpose. In support of this view as to the usefulness of a suitable proportion of starch in the dietary of inhabitants of the temperate zones, we may notice that the Esquimaux eats no starch (he cannot get it readily for one thing), he feeds more on blubber, flesh and fish, and will even eat soap on occasion, in order to acquire the fats that give rise to the heat he needs. On the other hand, the Hindoo eats mainly rice, which contains some 77 per cent. of pure starch granules. An interesting comparison might be drawn between the results of the long protracted use of various starches; for instance, the civilized white races mainly derive their starch from wheat, the Hindoo and the yellow race get their starch from rice, the original Red Skins of America ate chiefly the meal of maize, containing some 60 per cent. of starch, mixed with other and coarser constituents which render maize and meal more fit for pigs than men. However, enough has been said to show that, under whatever name, the feculent, or starchy matter of plants, is not without great value in the British bill of fare.

SUCCESSFUL BUTTER AND CHEESE SEASON.

THE past season has been the most successful one ever experienced in Canada in the manufacture and export of butter and cheese.

Cheese exports during the season just closed showed a total increase of 308,432 boxes over those for 1901, and a total increase of 22,353 boxes over those for 1900, while butter shipments showed an increase of 124,058 packages over those for 1901, and an increase of 278,388 packages over the season 1900.

The disbursements to the factories for cheese were also largely in advance of any previous year, cheese being constantly one or two cents higher than the previous season.

Butter-makers were not relatively so fortunate, the price of butter being lower during the most of the season than it was in 1901. As the exports were larger, however, the total disbursements to factories would probably amount to about as much as last year.

The shipments of cheese from the port of Montreal during last week and the past season, and also during the corresponding period of 1900 and 1901, were as follows:

| Period. | Local. | Thro.' | Total. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Last week..... | 31,540 | 6,619 | 38,159 |
| Corresponding week last year..... | 659 | .... | 659 |
| Corresponding week 1900..... | 16,492 | 220 | 16,712 |
| Total shipments since May 1, 1902 | 1,729,322 | 370,726 | 2,100,048 |
| Corresponding period 1901 ..... | 1,503,201 | 288,415 | 1,791,616 |

Do you, Mr. Grocer, realize that Japan Teas are passing through a crisis, and one that is shaking the very foundation of their existence? You should be fully cognizant of this. It will pay you to be.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, December 4, 1902.

GROCERIES.

THE volume of business transacted on the local grocery market is becoming heavier, owing to the nearness of the holiday season. Nuts, spices and dried fruits of all kinds are moving out freely and the market for prunes is firmer, owing to an advance of ½c. recently made on the Californian market. A decline of 10c. in sugars took place on Wednesday morning, which was unlooked for, as the outside markets were steady and almost featureless. The tea market is gaining strength daily, the firm tone being due to the strong London and Ceylon markets.

CANNED GOODS.

The tomato situation continues unsatisfactory. Some jobbers imported quantities of the article from the United States and offered them at $1.60. Few transactions, however, have been made on that basis, the price being such as to curtail the consumption. A number of retailers are selling what stocks of tomatoes they have back to the wholesalers and the market is unsettled. Trade in meats and fruits is quiet. There is quite an active demand for salmon for the holiday trade. Other lines of fish are also moving out fairly well.

COFFEES.

There is a fair call for coffees, principally of the cheaper grades, in Javas and green Rios. Raws are somewhat firmer on the primary market and the outlook is for higher prices. Better grades are rather scarce and command a premium on that account. We quote as follows: Green Rios, No. 7, 7¾c.; No. 6, 8c.; No. 5, 8¼c.; No. 4, 9c.; No. 3, 10 to 12c. per lb.

NUTS.

Trade in nuts is becoming more active. Shipments of shelled almonds and shelled walnuts, and walnuts and almonds in the shell have arrived. The prices are firm.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

Both these articles are in fair demand. The prospects are for better prices for rice, as the crop in the South is reported to be short. There is also a little stronger feeling in tapioca, but the New York market is at present dull. We quote: B rice, 3½c.; Japan, 5½ to 6c.; sago, 3¾ to 4c.; tapioca, 3¼ to 3¾c. per lb.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Corn syrups are moving out freely and there is also a good demand for the brighter grades of sugar syrups. Black strap is also in good demand.

SPICES.

Activity prevails in spices throughout the list. There are quite large sales of pepper being made, and nutmegs, cloves and allspice are moving out a little better. The prices are maintained steadily. The outside markets are quiet and firm.

SUGAR.

Although the outside markets showed no particular indications of declining, the Canadian refiners reduced the prices for Ontario and Quebec, on Wednesday, 10 points. The prices of the United States refined remain just the same as last week. There is, however, a stronger undertone to the outside market and indications are repeatedly reported of further advances. There seems to be considerable indifference on the part of buyers, probably owing to the fact that the normal consumption at this time of the year is light. In view of purchases made prior to recent advances there is no disposition shown to further anticipate requirements. The week closes on a strong market for raws and the prices quoted are nominal on a basis of 3⅞c. for 96 deg. centrifugals, duty paid, New York. Sugars arriving in port will readily be sold at this figure, but are being held for further improvement. After advancing to 8s. f.o.b. Hamburg, beet sugar of 88 deg. reacted to 7s. 10½d. and later advanced to 7s. 11¼d., closing strong at that figure.

See pages 43 and 44 for Toronto, Montreal, St. John and Halifax prices current.

The meltings of raws at the three United States Atlantic ports for the week were 36,559 tons, with nominal meltings at 31,000 tons, thus increasing stocks for the week by 5,559 tons and bringing them up to 188,713 tons, against 148,020 tons for the same week last year.

In reference to Mr. Licht's last report as to damage to the European beet crop to the extent of 90,000 tons, we might state that this refers to Germany only, but the same ratio of damage applied to the entire European beet section would necessitate the estimate of the growing crop there being reduced to 5,500,000 tons.

TEAS.

The outside tea markets continue strong for both blacks and greens. Latest London samples show that that market is from 1 to 1½c. above Toronto in Indians and Ceylons. Indian greens are scarce and in demand at from 7½ to 9½d. Mail advices from London, Eng., under date of November 20, state that changes in the position of teas was obtaining recognition, buyers who were not well stocked offering higher prices to get what they want, but many of the dealers were reluctant to follow a rising market and to replace at an advance what they had sold. The Indian tea market opened with free buyers of low-priced teas at ½d. advance and with an improved bidding for all other kinds, but not at higher prices. Samples from Assam, Cachar and Dooars, which were on exhibition, showed an improved flavor. The improvement in the market for Ceylons extended from low-priced teas to those of better quality. There was a better inquiry for all the lower grades of China Congou, black and red, and blenders have taken some of the medium grades in some quantity, paying in all cases firmer prices. Gunpowder teas continue steadily to advance in value.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

CURRANTS.—The influence of a very brisk local demand and the reports of a steadier market in Greece have strengthened the market considerably. Prices are as follows: Fine Filiatras, 5½c. up: Patras, 6¼ to 6¾c. and Vostizzas, 7 to 8c. per lb.

VALENCIA RAISINS.—These are in good demand and the prices are held firmly. We quote: Fine off-stalk, 7 to 8c.; selected, 8 to 9c. and selected layers, 9 to 10c. per lb.

SULTANA RAISINS.—A good trade is doing at the following prices, viz.: 9 to 13c. per lb.

DATES.—New dates keep arriving and meet with ready sales. There is a strong feeling in these on the English market. We quote: Hallowees, 4½ to 5c.; Sairs, 4 to 4½c. and Fards, 7½ to 8c. per lb.

PRUNES.—The market is firmer under the influence of an advance of ½c. on the Californian market which took place on Tuesday. Quotations on the large sizes have been withdrawn at the Coast. Our quotations are as follows: Californian prunes, 100-110s, 4c.; 90-100s, 5 to 5½c.; 80-90s, 6 to 6½c.; 70-80s, 6½ to 7c.; 60-70s, 7 to 7½c.; 50-60s, 8 to 8½c.; 40-50s, 8¾ to 10c. per lb.

FIGS.—There is a healthy feeling in the fig market and the demand is good. We quote: Tapnets, 4c.; Naturals, 8c. and Elemes, 11 to 15c.

CALIFORNIAN SEEDED RAISINS.—These are commencing to move. A great deal of trouble has been experienced by importers in having shipments forwarded promptly. Prices are 8½ to 9c. per lb. in 12-oz. packages and 10½ to 11c. for 1-lb. boxes of choice goods in packages. Californian loose muscatels are quoted as follows: 2-crown, 7½c.; 3-crown, 8c. and 4-crown, 9c. per lb.

CALIFORNIAN EVAPORATED FRUITS – The volume of business in peaches and apricots is heavy and prices are very steady. We quote: Apricots, 10c. to 16cf and peaches, 9 to 12½c. per lb.

GREEN FRUITS.

Business in oranges, lemons and Malaga grapes is picking up for the Christmas trade. The last-named fruit is especially active. Californian navel oranges, due to arrive next week, are quoted at $4 to $4.25 per box; lemons, to arrive, will be sold at $1 to $1.50 for Californians and $3.50 to $4 for Messinas. Pineapples are at present scarce, but some are expected in time for Christmas. The export trade in apples continues. Quotations are as follows: Pears, per basket, 30c. to 35c. and apples, 10 to 25c. per basket and $1 to $2 per bbl.; onions, ordinary, 15 to 60c. per bag; Spanish, 65c. to 70c. per case; oranges, Jamaica, $2.50 to $2.75 per box; Floridas, $3.50 to $3.75 per box; Valencias, $5; Mexicans, $2.50 to $2.75; Jersey sweet potatoes, $2.50 to $2.75 per bbl.; cocoanuts, $3.75 per sack; quinces, 30 to 35c. per basket; Cape Cod cranberries, $9.50 per bbl.; Nova-Scotian do, $7.50; Jerseys, $10.50; bananas, $1.25 to $1.75 per bunch; grape fruit, $4.50 per box; lemons, Californian, $4 to $4.75 per box; Malaga grapes, $5.50 to $7 per bbl.

VEGETABLES.

There is a quiet trade doing in vegetables and the prices are steady and unchanged. Our quotations are still as follows: Lettuce, 30 to 40c. per doz.; mint and parsley, 15 to 20c.; cauliflower, 50c. to $1 per dozen; cabbage, 30 to 50c. per dozen and $1 per barrel; pickling cabbage, 25 to 50c. per doz.; carrots, 40 to 50c. per bag; beets, 40 to 50c. per bag; potatoes, $1 to $1.20 per bag; celery, 50 to 75c. per dozen; squashes, $1 to $1.50 per dozen; pumpkins, 50c. per dozen; artichokes, 50c. per bushel; spinach, 40c.; parsnips, 40 to 50c. per bag; vegetable marrow, 30 to 50c. per doz.; citrons, 40 to 50c. per dozen.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EGGS.—A few fresh eggs are coming forward in small lots and fancy prices are being paid for them. The demand for pickled and cold stored keeps up well. We quote: Strictly new laid, 22 to 25c.; for limed, 17 to 19c. and for seconds, 13 to 14c. per dozen.

BEANS.—These keep firm and unchanged, with little new business to report. We quote choice handpicked, $2 to $2.10 per bushel.

DRIED AND EVAPORATED APPLES.—There is some call for the evaporated article. Dried are quiet. Prices are steady at 7 to 7½c. for evaporated.

HONEY.—There is a steady demand for honey at unchanged prices. We quote as follows: Extracted clover, in 60-lb. tins, 9c.; in glass jars, small sizes, 95c. to $1.85 per dozen.

POTATOES.—These are firm this week and hard to buy. Owing to the cold weather the dealers from the east do not care about shipping forward any, as the railway companies want the shippers to line the cars at their own expense and will not bring them back empty. Consequently the price of potatoes is firm. For a lot of ten carlots the price offered was 85c. per bag and 90c. lor one carlot.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

BUTTER.—There is quite a quantity of dairy prints, rolls and tubs coming forward, but complaint is being made that a large part of the receipts of the article are of poor quality, being tainted by the feed. Consequently there has been a better demand for creamery in 1-lb. prints and solids. We quote: Choice 1-lb. prints of dairy, 18 to 19c.; large rolls, 17 to 18c.; medium quality, large rolls, 14 to 15c.; tubs, choice, 15 to 17c.; creamery prints, 20 to 23c.; solids, 19 to 21c. per lb.

CHEESE.—The market keeps strong with a reported good inquiry from the Old Country, where the markets are pervaded by a healthy tone. We quote as follows: Finest, 12½ to 12¾c. and seconds, 11¾ to 12¼c. per lb.

POULTRY AND GAME.

DRESSED POULTRY.—The lateness of the season is having the effect of increasing the arrivals of all kinds of dressed poultry. There are quite a lot of poorly dressed turkeys coming in. Good, dry picked fowl are wanted. We quote: Turkeys, 8 to 12c.; geese, 7 to 7½c. per lb.; ducks, 50 to 70c. and chickens, 40 to 60c. per pair.

LIVE POULTRY.—There is a fair amount of business being done in live poultry and shipments are being forwarded to Great Britain as soon as they are made up. We quote: Turkeys, 8c.; geese, 5c.; ducks, 7c.; chickens, young, 7 to 8c. and old, 5 to 6c. per lb.

GAME.—The receipts of game continue free and the demand is poor. We quote as follows: Teal, 20c. per pair, and pin tails, 30 to 35c.; black ducks, 70 to 75c.; butterballs, 30 to 35c.; red heads, 60 to 65c. and blue bills, 20 to 30c.

FISH.

The market for all kinds of fish is active. Herring are still scarce. Oysters are selling freely and are firmer in response to reports from Baltimore to the effect that the catch there is short. We quote: Frozen fish, trout, 7½ to 8c.; whitefish, 7½ to 8c. Fresh fish, herring, 5 to 6c.; perch, 4 to 5c.; pike, 6c.; British-Columbian salmon, 15 to 20c.; mackerel, 15 to 20c.; halibut, 15c.; blue pike, 4c.; live lobsters, 25c. per lb.; oysters, $1.25 to $1.35 per wine gallon; selects, $1.50 to $1.60; Digby herring, 50c. per bundle of 6 baskets; finnan haddies, 7½ to 8c. per lb. in 15-lb. boxes; codfish, $4.50 for 25-lb. boxes and $1.80 for 2 doz. box; quail on toast, 5½c. in boxes; boneless cod, 4½c per lb.; ciscoes, $1.25 per basket; kippered herring, $4 per case of 4 doz. tins; Labrador herring, in half-barrels, $3 and lake herring, $4; salt sea salmon, $8 to $10 per 100-lb. bbl.; salt sea mackerel, $2 per kit (20-lb. pail.)

GRAIN, FLOUR AND BREAKFAST FOODS.

GRAIN.—The market for oats is a little stronger, as the opening of the port of St. John, N.B., is causing a demand from there for export, and the low freight rates made by the railways to that shipping point leaves a margin in favor of sellers. Wheat is firm, but the prospects are for steady prices. Quotations are as follows: Red wheat, 72c.; white wheat, 72c.; barley, 40 to 45c.; oats, 34c.; peas, 76c.; buckwheat, 52c.; rye, 50c. per bush., on track, Toronto.

FLOUR.—Buying on the flour market continues active, but mostly in small lots. We quote: Ontario patents, in bags, $3.35 to $3.65; Hungarian patents, $4.10 to $4.20; Manitoba bakers', $3.75 to $3.90; straight roller, $3.40 to $3.50 per barrel.

BREAKFAST FOODS.—A good demand continues for oatmeal and rolled oats without any change in prices. The other lines are active. Quotations are: Oatmeal, standard and granulated, in carlots on track here, $4.45; standard rolled oats in carlots on track here, $4.25 per barrel; in wood, 15c. extra; broken lots are 25c. per bbl. extra; rolled wheat, $2.25 in 100-lb. bbl.; cornmeal, $4; split peas, $4.75; pot barley, $4.25 in 196-lb. bbls., or $4.10 in bags.

HIDES, SKINS AND WOOL.

HIDES.—These are moving out freely. The prices are steady and unchanged. We quote: No. 1 green, 8c.; No. 2 green, 7c.; No. 1 green, steers, 8½c.; No. 2 green, steers, 7½c.; cured, 8½c. to 9c. per lb.

CALF SKINS.—A fair amount of business is being transacted. We quote: Veal skins, 6 to 14 lb. inclusive, No. 1, 10c.; No. 2, 8c.; do, 15 to 20 lb. inclusive, No. 1, 9c.; No. 2, 7c.; deacons (dairies), 60 to 70c. each.

SHEEPSKINS.—These are active and have advanced 10c. We quote 75c.

WOOL.—The market keeps improving. We quote: Fleece wool, 14c. and unwashed wool, 7½c. per lb.

TALLOW.—The market continues depressed. The demand is light and stocks are accumulating. We quote 6¼ to 7c. per lb.

SEEDS.

There are light offerings of red clover and alsike at outside points. The farmers are commencing to market their alsike more freely. We quote at outside points: Red clover, $6.25 to $6.75; alsike, $6.50 to $7 and timothy, $1.60 to $1.85.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, December 4, 1902.

GROCERIES.

THE jobbing houses now are all as busy as usual at this time of the year with orders for the holiday trade. With country points in the vicinity of the large Quebec markets there has been a slight falling off in business, owing to the roads, but shipments by rail are still heavy, the change in freight rates having made less difference than usual in the volume of business transacted. Several changes have been made in prices. Canadian bulk pickles have advanced again 5c. per gallon. One-gallon pails are now quoted at 70c.; 2-gallon, 65c. and so on, with a downward grading of 5c., according to quantity. Pressed hops have advanced 2c. per lb., being now worth 19 to 20c. per lb. "C. & B." marmalade is getting scarce and 7-lb. tins are reported to be out of the market. Crosse & Blackwell will not be able to ship any to this market before the end of January. Boiling peas have been arriving on the market in good quantities and are now quoted at 2¼c. per lb. for extra fine quality, prices now ranging from 1⅞c. for the cheaper grades to 2¼c. French sardines are scarce and will remain so until the new catch is in. Coal oil advanced on November 22 another cent. Small cheese has also advanced and is now quoted at 13c., with a firm market. Pure lard is ½c. higher, cases being now 12⅛ to 12⅜c. per lb. in 3, 5 and 10-lb. tins, 60-lb. to a case.

SUGAR.

Since our last report the local sugar market has been steadier and the prices are unchanged from former quotations. No. 1 granulated, Montreal refined sugar, is now worth $3.90; No. 2, $3.70; and yellows, from $3.25 to $3.75. While the market is not particularly active there is yet a good movement in all grades, refiners having plenty to do in forwarding previous orders.

TEAS.

Ceylon black teas are 1 to 1½d. higher for all grades, both on the London and Colombo markets. China greens continue very firm; the market for all green teas is now closed and advices state that it was stronger at the close than at any other time. Many orders were received after the close, but there was no possible chance of their being delivered. On the local market China greens are scarce. No 2 hysons have become scarce on the primary market, owing to the fact that a number of contracts have been made in Canada and the United States for the produce of those States making green teas, and a number of States making blacks are now turning their attention to greens. Hence, in view of the larger production, lower prices are expected in green teas. One or two large invoices of China greens have changed hands during the past week or so, and the demand is still good. Indian teas are still low. There is not much demand, though it is expected that on account of the higher prices in Ceylon blacks a better movement will be given to Indian grades. Japans remain very firm under light supplies. A letter received here on Monday, dated November 7, says that arrivals from the interior were small. All teas of sound liquor and good appearance were hardly obtainable.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The tone of the market for Barbados molasses is somewhat firmer. During the week a few hundred puncheons here changed hands among wholesalers at 24c. net cash, Montreal, and one large holder gives it as his opinion that prices will go to 30c. With most jobbers stocks are light and prices have been advanced to 25c. for single puncheon lots, in some cases. We now quote 24 to 25c. for Barbados molasses. New Orleans is a little lower at 16 to 17c.; Antigua, 24c.; Porto Rico, 38c. In corn syrups there is some change for the better, a few lots having sold this week, but the market is still quiet and prices are unchanged. We quote as follows: In bbls., 3c.; in half bbls., 3⅛c.; in ¼ bbls., 3¾c.; in 38½-lb. pails, $1.40 and 25-lb. pails, $1.10.

SPICES.

The movement in the general list of spices is still brisk. There has been no change of any importance on the market and prices remain the same. Our quotations are as follows: Nutmegs, 35c. to 55c. per lb., as to size; penang mace, 45 to 50c. per lb., as to quality; pimento, ground, 12½ to 15c.; cloves, 15 to 25c.; pepper, ground, black, 17 to 22c., according to grade; white, 25 to 27c.; ginger, whole Cochin, 15 to 17c.; Japan, 13 to 14c.; Jamaica, 16 to 20c.; Afghan, 12 to 13c.; ground, Japan, 15c.; Cochin, 16 to 17c.; Jamaica, 20 to 22c.; and Afghan, 13 to 14c.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

A fairly good trade is doing in these articles. There has been no quotable change. Our quotations are as follows: B rice, in bags, $3.02½; in half bags, $3.07½; in ¼ bags, $3.12½; in pockets, $3.17½. In 10-bag lots an allowance of 10c. is made. CC rice, $2.92½ in bags; $2.97½ in ½ bags; $3.02½ in ¼ bags and $3.07½ in pockets. In the open territory prices are about 10c. less. Patna rice is worth 4 to 5c. per lb. and tapioca, 3⅛c.

CANNED GOODS.

Both peas and corn have been gaining strength right along. Packers have refused to sell corn at an advance of 5c. over the syndicate price and jobbers are looking forward to an advance to $1 in January. It is reported that there are no more peas in packers' hands, and the price is now firm. The strong feeling in, and prices of tomatoes, peas and corn have had their effect on string beans, which are in active demand. One jobber states that he has sold this season three times as much as in former seasons. An advance has been made, but it is considered that at the present price string beans are a good purchase. Our quotations are as follows: Tomatoes, $1.60 to $1.75; corn, 95c.; peas, 90c. to $1.27½ string beans, 87½c. to 90c.; strawberries, $1.45 to $1.60; blueberries, $1.25; raspberries, $1.45 to $1.60; gooseberries, $1.45 to $1.60; pears, 2's, $1.60 to $1.70; 3's, $2.10 to $2.15; peaches, 2's, $1.65 to $1.70; 3's, $2.50 to $2.75; 3-lb. apples, 85 to 90c.; gallon apples, $2.10 to $2.20; 2-lb. sliced pineapples, $2.20 to $2.30; grated pineapples, $2.50; pumpkins, $1 per doz.; spinach, $1.50; sugar beets, 95c. to $1.00; salmon, pink, 92 to 95c.; spring, $1.25; Rivers Inlet red sockeye, $1.30; Fraser River red sockeye, $1.40

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

CURRANTS.—There has been no quotable change on the local market. Prices are firm and any new importations would have to sell at a higher price here. We quote: Fine Filiatras, 5⅛ to 5½c., in cases; cleaned, 5⅝ to 5¾c.; in 1-lb. cartons, 6½ to 7c.; finest Vostizzas, 6¼ to 7c. per lb.

SULTANA RAISINS.—These sell at 9 to 10c. per lb. for fine-quality fruit. There is nothing new on the market.

VALENCIA RAISINS.—No further advance has been made this week. The market is firm. We quote: Finest off-stalk, 8c.; selected, 8½c.; layers, 8¾c. to 9c., according to brands.

MALAGA RAISINS.—The price of medium and lower grades has advanced from 20 to 25 per cent., following an advance of 2s. on the primary market. Good table raisins are becoming scarcer and ¼-lb. boxes are very hard to obtain. We now quote as follows: London layers, $1.75 to $1.90; "Connoisseur Clusters," $2.17 to $2.50; "Royal Buckingham Clusters," $3.40 to $3.50; "Excelsior Windsor Clusters," $4.50 to $4.60; ½s, $1.30 to $1.40.

DATES.—New dates are now on the market, some fancy golden stock selling at 4c. per lb.

CALIFORNIAN RAISINS.—The Syndicate in California has withdrawn the 1c. rebate on raisins exported to Canada, which will make the price 1c. higher, but there has been no change in the price as yet.

The market is steady, and our quotations are still as follows: 8½c. for 40-50s; 8c. for 50-60s; 7¾c. for 60-70s; 7½c. for 70-80s; 6¾c. for 80-90s; 6½c. for 90-100s. No. 2 white oats are a little easier and may go lower, the demand being slow. ## MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, December 1, 1902.

THE event of interest for the week has been the announcement of the Grand Trunk with reference to a new trans-continental line. The news was hailed with joy in the West, as grain men, jobbers, stock exporters; in fact everyone who has to get anything in or out of the country are eager for increased transportation facilities. The lake navigation is just closing and not a third of Manitoba's great crop has been moved. There is a grain blockade all over the country, and there is no question but that the farmers and grainmen of the West have lost heavily through not getting their wheat out. Some idea of the situation may be gleaned from the fact that up to to-day the spread between December wheat and in store at Fort William, or en route east of Winnipeg, has has been fully 5c. per bushel. Considering the fact that we have had two railways, the crop has not moved as well this year as last, and for a much longer period the farmers have had to take all rail prices because elevator men could see no prospect of getting the wheat out. At the majority of points in Manitoba all rail prices have obtained since the second week of October. One, two or three cents per bushel looks a small matter when it is the individual bushel, but when it comes to a matter of 35,000,000 or 40,000,000 bushels it is another thing.

The C.P.R. has suffered not only from a lack of cars, but a lack of motive power. There are 220 points on the C. P. R. where wheat is shipped, and the supply of empties for the past three weeks has not averaged 1½ cars per day. It will be no surprise then that any prospect of additional railway service should be hailed with delight in the West.

The jobbing market is active in all lines, and with the single exception of sugars, which have again advanced 10c. per cwt., there is no change to report. Grocery men report good business, and considering the grain movement, good collections. Produce men are very busy filling orders, and prices in all lines of their goods are firm and without change. In fact, there is nothing to report in the way of business news.

FLOUR.—Prices are still $2 for Hungarian patent and other grades in proportion.

CEREALS.—These are unchanged. We quote: Rolled oats, $1.75 for the 80-lb. sack; rolled wheat, $2.25; cornmeals, $1.75 to $1.80.

SUGAR.—Prices are $4.45 for granulated and $3.95 for bright yellows.

DRIED FRUITS.—All lines are very firm, and we quote: New crop, fine off-stalk, Valencia, per box, $2.25; muscatel, 2-crown, 7c.; ditto, 3-crown, 7½c.; ditto, 4-crown, 8c.; ditto, seeded, 1-lb. cartons, choice, 9½c.; ditto, seeded, 1-lb. cartons, fancy, 10c. per lb.

CURRANTS.—The market is active and the prices are unchanged. We quote: Fine Filiatras, 5c.; cleaned, 6c. and Vostizzas, in cases, 6c. per lb.

CANNED GOODS.—Prices are as follows: Tomatoes, $3.50 to $3.75 per case, according to grade; corn, very firm at $2; peas, firm and in good demand at $1.95 to $2.

GREEN FRUITS.—Apples are the only line of fruit showing much movement. Spies are worth $4, and other winter varieties, $3.50. Tokay grapes are still to be had in small quantities at $3 per case; Malagas, $8 per keg; cranberries at $11 per barrel; Californian naval oranges, $5.50 to $6 per case; seedlings, $4 Mexicans, $5; lemons, $6.

DAIRY MARKET.

BUTTER.—The supply of dairy butter is greatly below the demand for a first class table butter. Dealers are paying 21c. per lb. for separator-made bricks, and good fresh rolls or tubs bring 15 to 17c. Winnipeg.

CHEESE.—No change. There is a very fair market at 13 to 13 1-3c. to the retailer.

EGGS.—The supply continues scarce and dealers are offering 22c. Winnipeg, subject to candling.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, December 1, 1902.

THE grocery business for the last week has been fairly active, and considering the season, the trade are quite satisfied with the volume of business being done. The wholesalers have lately been doing a heavy business in fancy biscuits and other fancy groceries for the holiday trade, but from now on until the end of the month will come the retailers' period of activity in these lines. The continued fair weather, with little or no frost, has tended to greater activity in business.

All this season there seems to have been a contest going on between the refiners producing beet root and those producing cane sugars. Year by year there is a greater growth of beets for this industry, which inevitably gives rise to the consideration of the point at which each can be profitably put on the market. The prevailing opinion is that cane sugar must drop out of the market unless the growers, by more systematic and economic means, can lower the cost of production. The low point for sugar was reached some time ago, and the recent advances amount now to 20c. per cwt. Some dealers suggest the possibility of an understanding between the two interests having been reached. This suggestion is borne out by the report that the Missouri River district beet product has been shipped east, but was being held off the market just previous to recent advances. The refineries here are doing a heavy business and are rushed with orders.

Flours are higher here than some time ago. Ogilvie's Hungarian is quoted at $4.70, and other grades in proportion. The various mill-feeds are also high, the stocks are low and there is some difficulty in restocking. Oatmeal, cornmeal and rolled oats are firm, with a good demand.

Butter is becoming firmer and higher prices are being asked. The same may be said of eggs. For fresh eggs the housewife will probably have to pay 40c. at the grocery, or else forego her Christmas cookery. During the week some 20,000 bushels of potatoes were landed here from P. E. Island, but the prices last quoted are still being obtained. Over 2,000 bushels of oats and 5,000 bushels of turnips were also landed from the Island. Oats are firm and some holders are asking as high as 45c. The price of hay is yet an uncertain figure. Beef and pork, turkeys, geese and fowl are coming in in good supply. Prices are firm and may be higher before Christmas. Potatoes are reported selling in Charlottetown at 26c., and oats at 34c.

The ss. Dahome, which arrived last week from the West Indies, brought a quantity of sugar for local dealers, and also 6,241 bags for Montreal. The former was from St. Kitts and Antigua and the latter from Demerara. The schooner Muriel brought 237 puncheons, 6 tierces, 29 barrels of molasses from Fajardo, Porto Rico, for G. P. Mitchell & Sons.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, N.B., December 1, 1902.

BUSINESS is very active. This is especially true of raisins and other Christmas lines. The wholesale trade are holding heavy stocks in many lines, more particularly sugar. The markets are firm with hardly an exception. Evaporated apples seem a weak point. There is no doubt the past year has been a good one from the standpoint of the wholesale grocer. The retailers are now beginning to feel the increased business caused by the holiday demand. The arrival of winter-port steamers is now of almost daily occurrence and means much to the city.

OILS.—In burning oil the price is held firm at the advance. Sales are large. While the tank wagons do not book orders ahead, so that the city retailer loses the chance of making an extra profit on the advance, this is made up to them in many ways. There is no doubt the wagon is an advantage to them. In paint oils the market continues easy with sales light. Lubricating oils show a good business for the season. While the stock of cod oil is not heavy it is enough for requirements.

SALT.—Quite a large cargo of Liverpool coarse salt was received this week. There were some 6,000 bags. Prices for a little seemed easier, but the market is again rather firmer. Dealers holding stocks cannot compete with dealers who have salt landing, as the cost of having it stored is an important item. There will be weekly arrivals during the winter. Fine salt is held firm. We quote: Liverpool coarse, 55 to 60c.; English factory-filled, 95c. to $1; Canadian fine, $1.10 per bag; cheese and butter salt, bulk, $2.25 to $2.35 per bbl.; 5-lb. bags, $3.10 per bbl.; 10-lb. bags, $2.85 per bbl.; 20-lb. wood boxes, 25c. each; 10-lb. wood boxes, 15c. each; cartons, $1.90 to $2 per case; English bottled salt, $1.25 to $1.30 per dozen; mineral rock salt, 60c. per 100 lb. (Selected lumps.)

CANNED GOODS.—Tomatoes continue of interest. Some American have been received and the quality seems quite satisfactory, but the price is high. Both corn and peas are held at higher figures. There is quite a full stock of corn. Salmon are unchanged and a fair stock is held. In fruits there is a steady sale. Gallon apples are firmer. Blueberries are scarce and the price is higher than ever before. Oysters are firmer. Pineapples tend higher. In domestic packed fish the prices are unchanged. For the present the western demand has been largely met.

GREEN FRUITS.—Sales are large. Apples are not selling freely this year. Best stock is quite high and dealers would be badly off were it not for American Baldwins and Ontario Northern Spies which they have received. Some Ontario apples were refused by buyers because of quality, but generally they have been particularly good. In oranges, Jamaica still have the market. Full stocks are held. Prices are unchanged. Valencias are daily expected and the price is rather lower than for first stock last year. The receipts are later. Messina lemons are to hand. They are much preferred to the Malagas, which have supplied the market. In grapes, Malagas have a good sale. Cranberries, for best stock, are rather higher. They show a wide range.

DRIED FRUITS.—Some new Californian seeded raisins have been received, but the market is very lightly supplied. The larger part of the stock will be late. The prices are held firmer and are likely to rule higher. The withdrawal by the Association of the one-cent rebate on loose muscatels means a cent advance in the Californian fruit. Dealers have fair stocks. Valencias come forward slowly and full prices rule. Malaga loose are also firmly held. They could not be imported to sell at present prices. Currants are plentiful and cheap. Really nothing but cleaned is sold. Prunes are low. Dates are higher. Stock is early to hand this year. Figs are firm. Evaporated apples are rather lower. In onions, the market is overstocked. Prices are low.

DAIRY PRODUCE.—Eggs are quoted higher and it looks as if stocks would be short. In butter the market is held firm. There are fair receipts. Cheese is in light supply and quite high prices rule.

SUGAR.—Stocks are quite large. The market is firm at the advance and higher prices are looked for. Granulated is chiefly sold. In yellow, two grades are offered, but some for special trade carry a darker sugar.

Ozone and The General Merchant.

MOLASSES.—While the market just at present seems easy, the stock here is lighter than last year and the larger holders of Porto Rico are not pushing sales. Barbados is unchanged and stock is light.

FISH.—In dry cod the market is unchanged. Owing to quality there is some range in price. Pollock are scarce and the price is rather high. There is not a large market. Pickled herring have been quite freely received. Prices are unchanged. Smoked herring are the feature of the trade, owing to the high price. They are higher than for years. Finnan haddies have a large sale at even figures. We quote: Haddies, 4½ to 5c.; smoked herring, 11½ to 12c.; fresh haddock and cod, 2 to 2½c.; boneless fish, 4 to 5c.; pollock, $1.70 to $1.75 per 100 lb.; pickled herring, $2 to $2.25 per half-barrel; dry cod, $3.25 to $3.50; pickled shad, per ½-bbl., $6.00.

FLOUR, FEED AND MEAL.—In both Manitoba and Ontario flours full prices are asked. Stocks come forward slowly. This is true of all western goods. Oats and oatmeal are rather higher. The latter is scarce. Cornmeal seems quite easy, though corn is firm. Beans tend upward and fair stocks are held. Peas are scarce. Feed is scarce and high and in demand. We quote: Manitoba flour, $4.80 to $4.85; Ontario, $4.25 to $4.35; oatmeal $4.50 to $4.60; cornmeal, $3.05 to $3.15; middlings, in small lots, $26 to $28; oats, 40 to 44c.; handpicked beans, $2.35 to $2.40; prime, $2.25 to $2.30; yellow eye beans, $2.80 to $3; split peas, $5.15 to $5.25; barley, $4.25 to $4.30; hay, $9 to $10.

PROVISIONS.—In barreled pork rather lower prices rule, and quite a quantity of domestic packed is seen. The quantity increases each year. In beef, more Canadian is seen and it brings a good price. Some good domestic mess is offered at low figures. While pure lard is very firm at full figures, compound seems a little easier. Both are in light supply. In fresh beef, light domestic beef is plentiful and low. Lamb continues low. Poultry are quite scarce. Pork is in quite good supply and holds at even figures. We quote: Mess pork, $23 to $23.50; clear pork, $23 to $26; plate beef, $15 to $16; domestic beef, 5 to 7c.; Western beef, 7 to 9c.; lamb, 5 to 6c.; mutton, 5c.; veal, 5 to 7c.; pork, 7½ to 8c.; pure lard, tubs, 12c.; pails, 12½c.; compound tubs, 9½c.; pails, 9½c.; Fairbank's refined, tubs, 10½c.; pails, 10½c. The trade are finding it impossible to get Fairbank's "Boar's Head" lard forward fast enough to supply the demand.

ST. JOHN NOTES.

"Pure Gold" extracts sell well here.

Schepp's cocoanut is in good demand for the Christmas trade.

Gandy & Allison landed 6,000 bags of Liverpool coarse salt this week.

Geo. E. Barbour received 400 cases of salmon last week from J. H. Todd & Sons.

Hall & Fairweather, who handle "Tetley" are finding active sales, the result of special work now being done here.

John Sealy landed 5,000 boxes of smoked herring this week. In the depleted state of the market they bring big figures.

James Logan, representing The Phoenix Packing Co., was a happy man this week distributing seeded raisins to the trade. Other brokers are busy making explanations. Their customers are anxious waiters.

STUDYING DEPARTMENTAL STORES.

THE big departmental stores are merely developments of the small store. So a merchant may learn much through studying the methods of the former that will enable him more successfully to run the latter. The Merchants' Review thus compares the departmental stores of New York :

If one wishes to study the science of storekeeping, store methods, etc., one can do it best by investigating the operations of the department stores, for the characteristics which are barely perceptible in the smaller establishments stand out so boldly in the big houses that he who runs may read them. Now, one finds from a quite cursory study of the large bazars that each store has a reputation among experienced shoppers for some one thing. Each store may therefore be fairly credited with a character.

Ask any experienced shopper how the large department stores differ from one another, and she will differentiate them in a few words, as thus : " A.'s is a good, solid house; the stock reliable, and the bargains real bargains. B.'s is a showy establishment, and the word cheap describes it completely. C.'s is even worse than B.'s, but, like the latter, makes a big splurge with a showy building and extensive advertising. D.'s is very substantial, heavily respectable, and carries in some lines better grades of goods than A.'s carries. E.'s is a sort of conglomeration of various characteristics ; sometimes one can buy first-class goods there at tempting prices ; at other times only the flimsiest trash is offered." Almost these identical words were used by several ladies who have shopped in New York for years and know the shopping districts intimately. By the way, it is astonishing what great variations in price exist in the larger stores. Sometimes as much as 50 per cent. difference in value is asked for an article, although the closest examination fails to reveal the slightest difference in quality. Another thing worth mentioning is the under-selling of some of the bazars by small stores of no pretensions.

To return to store character. A close study of grocery stores will convince one that while not so conspicuously differentiated from one another as the great bazars of the central shopping district are differentiated, yet the general run of grocery stores have some peculiarity of system, goods or price, which sets each store apart from the others.

Consumers know that one grocer can be trusted to always deliver a high grade of goods. Another dealer in the same neighborhood may be wobbly on quality, but a stickler for punctual delivery or full weight and measure. Another grocer may belong to the cheap and common-goods class, and still another dealer in the same neighborhood may be conspicuous for always having full assortments, so that when nearer grocers have been appealed to in vain, he promptly fills the order for the scarce goods. Some dealers are known for the cleanliness and neatness of their stores ; others, for the prompt attention to customers' wants and the fine courtesy of the attendants.

The minor differences include such matters as specialties. Thus, one store is known for its good coffee, another for its good tea, another for its good butter, and still another for its choice fruits. It is not so very uncommon to find grocery stores that are distinguished for their fair treatment of children—a no mean distinction in neighborhoods where the juvenile messengers of customers are browbeaten or neglected, or made the butts of crude wits among the clerks, or even made the victims of tricks and petty frauds.

The character of the store, which is so important as a factor in business success, is often simply the reflection of the proprietor's character. It is not to be easily changed. The slip-shod store reflects the slip-shod dealer. The systematic dealer cannot but have a systematic, well-ordered establishment. Yet care and zeal and a strong resolution can accomplish even more difficult things than a revolution in store character.

THE HOME OF "PAN-DRIED" OATS.

IT would seem to be out of place that oatmeal, Scotland's national food, and, indeed, the great breakfast dish of Canada to-day, should have been introduced by a German. Yet such is the fact. It is to Ferdinand Schumaker, a German, that we are indebted for our dish of porridge, and it is satisfactory to know that the enterprising old fellow, who, with his wife, at first peddled oatmeal around the country, finally realized a fortune out of his oatmeal mills. Still, if Ferdinand Schumaker had not brought in oatmeal someone else would have eventually done so, and possibly it might have been some hardy old Scotchman like the sturdy figure that is seen everywhere on the walls and in the daily newspapers, advising the public to use Tillson's "Pan-dried" Oats. The rugged and characteristically Scottish features of the old Highlander appeal to everyone who notices them, and his look and bearing seem to tell us that he has reached that vigorous and green old age by means of oatmeal as a breakfast food, and probably Tillson's "Pan-dried" as his own particular choice.

HOME OF "PAN-DRIED"

It will no doubt interest many to learn that in Tillsonburg is the home of the "Pan-dried." The oats do not take their name from Tillsonburg, but Tillsonburg takes its name from the Tillson family, who founded this progressive and hustling little town, Mr. George Tillson settling there in 1825, and who in successive generations have identified themselves so intimately with the social and commercial life of the community that the family history is but the story of the growth and progress of Tillsonburg.

The Tillson Co., Limited, was founded by E. D. Tillson, son of the founder of Tillsonburg, who established the first mill, a sawmill, but this in time was remodelled as a grist mill, and from this small beginning the present large and well-equipped plant has sprung, the mills being carried on by E. D. Tillson in his lifetime, and about six years ago being formed into a joint stock company, but continued a family work entirely, under the active management of George W. Tillson and E. V. Tillson.

OLD AND NEW METHODS.

The ordinary porridge-lover knows a good porridge, but he is probably ignorant of the mysteries of oatmeal-making, and the expression "pan-dried," which, it may be remarked, is peculiar to the Tillson oatmeal, and is copyrighted, conveys no meaning to him. It has a very important meaning, however, being all the difference between a properly and an improperly dried oat. Take the old-fashioned kiln, for instance. It was square, with perforated bottoms, and let the smoke and fumes into the oats, imparting often an unpleasant flavor to the oatmeal. The Tillsons, however, adopted a system for pan-drying that did away with all this and turned out a perfectly dried product. No smoke was allowed through, and the oats were given a pure coal and coke heat. The difference between this and other methods adopted often by mills considered first class was that the latter steam-dried, which was by no means as satisfactory a method as by pan-drying. The original difficulty with the latter, however, was in respect to the expense; the pan-dried system was an expensive one, and so much was this felt in the face of severe competition that the Tillsons temporarily abandoned their dry kilns and put in steam kilns, at the same time continuing their experiments with the dry pans, with the object of reducing the expense of operating them. With the successful accomplishment of this project, achieved only recently, the expensive steam kilns put in were discarded and the pan system superseded them. Just how these drying pans are operated the Tillsons will not say. That is their business secret, and is the secret of the success they are meeting with in the production of pan-dried oats.

GREATEST CARE IS EXERCISED.

But while no one is permitted to study their system of pan-drying, the Tillsons with pardonable pride show the visitor the methods used in obtaining absolutely clean oats before the latter go to the rolls. To the uninitiated it is something astonishing the amount of rubbish and foreign matter that find their way into oats. Wild buckwheat, wild peas, cockles, tares, mustard seed—these are only some of the varieties that are found in the oats, and all have to be eliminated before the oats can be rolled. For this purpose The Tillson Company have a very extensive and perfect plant. There are hexagon reels, where the oats are first placed, then sieves, double-cylinder cockle machines, smutters, machines that take from the coarsest dirt to the finest specks of matter, and when the oats finally come out there is nothing but oats.

These two things, then, make the celebrated Tillson "Pan-dried' Oats perfect, and absolute cleanliness and the system of pan-drying which turns out an oat that is an unexcelled breakfast food. With the full knowledge of this and with the confidence possessed by the public in the methods and product of The Tillson Company, it is not a matter of surprise that the demand has increased till enlargements of the mills are necessary. The company have in the past devoted their attention almost entirely to the domestic field, and from Halifax to Winnipeg have been extensive shippers. Their intention now is, it is understood, to extend their Canadian field to the Pacific Coast.

With the oatmeal mills the company operate flour, pea and barley mills. They have also a stave factory and cooperage, as well as a joiner shop, a sawmill and a brickyard. They likewise own the railway that runs through their property, and conpects with Grand Trunk, Michigan Central, the Wabash, and the Tillsonburg, Lake Erie and Pacific systems.

Tobaccos, Cigars, and Smokers' Accessories

A DEPARTMENT FOR RETAIL MERCHANTS.

TOBACCOS IN THE GROCERY STORE.

AT probably no period in the history of trade and commerce have merchants been more on the qui vive for ways and means of increasing their business and their profits than during the present. The keenness of competition makes it necessary that they should be so; in fact, their success depends upon the enterprise and energy they put into action in this particular.

Among the lines which a good many grocers have taken up, or are taking up, is that of tobaccos, cigars and smokers' accessories generally. Few of those, however, who have taken this line up appear to do so with much enterprise. They handle these goods like they do potatoes — merely put them in stock and allow them to take care of themselves.

Tobaccos and cigars, like all other merchandise, must be pushed if the best results are to be obtained.

With a view of exciting the interest of the retail trade throughout the country in this branch of business, we have decided to establish a department in each issue in which shall from time to time be published articles and items of interest relating to the tobacco and allied trades. In order to make this department interesting and useful to the trade, we ask the co-operation of manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers. This they can give us by furnishing us, either by mail or through our representatives, with items of news, articles and suggestions. The good of one is the good of all.

AMALGAMATION OF TOBACCO FIRMS.

The Consumers' Tobacco Co., of Leamington, and the McAlpin Tobacco Co., of Toronto, have amalgamated, and the headquarters of the combined concern will now be centred in Toronto, under the general management of Robert Pinchin, well and favorably known to the business community of Canada in his conection with the Consumers' Tobacco Co.

The capital stock of the new company will be $500,000. The officers of the corporation will be: President, General E. A. McAlpin, New York; vice-president, O. E. Fleming, Windsor; secretary-treasurer, W. B. McAlpin; general manager, Robert Pinchin. The incorporators are: General McAlpin and Mr. Pratt, of New York, and O. E. Fleming, R. Pinchin, James A. Straith, of Windsor.

The McAlpin Co. will produce in Toronto the combination brands heretofore made by them, and the Consumers' Tobacco Co., of Leamington, will, as before, confine their attention to their lines of Canadian leaf.

TOBACCO TRADE NOTES.

Wm. Presnail, manager of Tuckett's cigar factory, Hamilton, has left for Cuba to buy the winter supply of leaf tobacco.

A. Wilson & Co., Toronto, are highly pleased with their season's business, and report a holiday trade far in excess of anything they have hitherto experienced.

Isaac Blumenstiel, of Hamilton, reports business as far above the average, his high-grade goods as represented in the "Barrister" cigar being especially in increasingly good demand.

The McAlpin Tobacco Co. are using the best of American leaf in the manufacture of "Tonka," and the immense sale of this brand of tobacco is a sure endorsement of its quality and popularity.

The rapidly-growing business of The G. E. Tuckett & Sons Co. is calling for largely increased accommodation. The firm contemplate the immediate erection of an extensive addition to their Hamilton factory.

The Erie Tobacco Co. are rebuilding a storage warehouse in Kingsville, and refitting a building in Windsor, Ont., where they will in future conduct their business. They will be in a position to ship goods in the course of the next 10 days.

For years the retail drug trade of Canada have made quite a feature of their cigar and cigarette business. Would it not be a profitable move if the retail grocer would devote a little more attention to this class of goods? With a slight additional expense in the way of fittings a cigar department could be made an attractive and profitable addition to his business.

ONTARIO MERCHANDISE FOR WEST INDIES.

The steamers of the Pickford & Black Co., leaving Halifax for the West Indies, are taking out large quantities of merchandise from points in Ontario. The Dahome, which sailed on Monday last, had on board about 17 carloads of merchandise from Ontario, and the Ocamo, which sails on December 15, is expected to have about the same quantity from that part of the Dominion.

POPULARITY is the proof of merit, and no brand has ever achieved popularity so quickly as

Two Standard Brands

The reason why I wish to include one or two hundred each of my "Pharaoh" 10c., and my "Pebble" 5c. Cigars in that "first or trial order," that I have been telling you about, is because, at the prices, they are the best sellers in all Canada.

The quality and workmanship in these two brands has set the standard by which many dealers make sales, claiming that their Cigars are just as good as the "Pharaoh" or the "Pebble." Of course this isn't so—nothing can possibly be as good as the original article.

TRADE IN COUNTRIES OTHER THAN OUR OWN.

TEA IN NEW YORK.

NO additional transactions of importance were reported for the day. The tone of the market held firm. Offerings were light, importers and dealers as a rule being indifferent sellers of most grades and were reported as holding for extreme prices. The line business was moderately active at full values.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce, December 1.

SUGAR IN NEW YORK.

The tone of the refined sugar market held strong and a moderate volume of business was transacted. The trade, as a rule, continued to show confidence in the situation, and with few exceptions jobbers and manufacturers even inclined to carry full stocks, anticipating higher prices. Refiners continued slow in their shipments, being from one to two weeks late on assorted orders.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce, December 1.

BEANS IN CALIFORNIA.

San Francisco mail advices state that the market there on beans has been seriously depressed by the free arrivals of damp new crop from the river section. Sales of such stock have been made at heavy reductions from prices quoted for dry stock. Until this wet stock is out of the way, the advices say, no improvement in the situation is to be expected. The sale of a carload for shipment to this market was reported to-day at 1.25c. f.o.b. Coast.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce, December 1.

CHEESE IN LONDON.

Cheese—Canadian: The market continues very firm, but trade has been rather quiet during the week, which is no doubt owing to the sudden spell of cold weather. Prices are about as last quoted, say, 60s. for finest white or colored and 61s. for strictly fancy. Anything under best sells quickly at 57 to 58s. English: The market is quiet and unchanged. Dutch: The quotations remain firm and unchanged, with a fair demand for finest selections. Factories clear on landing.—The Grocers' Journal, November 22.

SARDINES IN MAINE.

Advices from Eastport, Me., state: "With the sardine-canning season practically at an end, it is estimated that the storehouses of this section contain fewer cases than at the end of any season in recent years. The figures for the season's pack are not yet obtainable. Although the season extends over another week, The Seacoast Packing Company, which controls the bulk of the business in this vicinity, closed all but one of its factories more than a week ago, and this one is running with minimum product. Several of the independent concerns, however, are putting up all the fish they can secure, and probably will run on full time through the present week, believing that in view of the short pack they will find a ready market at good prices. Packers in general, however, predict that there will not be any considerable advance in prices this season, as the prices of tin, oil and other raw material are considerably lower than a year ago. This fact, they believe, will tend to keep down the price of the packed goods."—N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

CANNED GOODS IN BALTIMORE.

There is nothing in the canned-goods line outside of the oyster question which can be said to be of considerable interest at present. The powers that be have succeeded in forcing tomatoes down to 87½ to 90c., and they appear to be satisfied with this figure—satisfied meaning that they have come to the conclusion that there are no more bargains to be picked up, and that even this Maryland, fortunate and prolific centre of canned goods, is well cleaned up of tomatoes from first hands. The natural reasoning from this is that if there are no more tomatoes for jobbers to get hold of at low prices, it is useless for them to try to further depress the market to the disadvantage of their holdings.

Corn continues to be the more important of the vegetable articles of the canned-goods schedule. Happy are those people who hold a good supply of corn of any kind. During the past ten years we have seen times when packers were glad to get 65c. for corn that is now in demand at 87½ to 90c.; and the packer either belongs to the family of Ananias or he is making a profit on his present business.—Baltimore Trade, November 28.

VALENCIA RAISINS IN LONDON.

Just at the very moment when the statistical position of the Valencia raisins appeared to be absolutely assured the market began to show some signs of weakness, and a fall of nearly 2s. has been established. This condition of things has been greatly assisted by a section of brokers and merchants, who, for purposes of their own, which are quite explainable with what would appear to be their best interests, have thrust on the market an unusual quantity of fruit, which gives an appearance of weakness, and have assisted the buyers in obtaining fruit at much cheaper rates than they expected. The buyers, however, have no reason to grumble at their attitude, and have taken every advantage of the position. Although the prices are 2s. below a fortnight ago, the actual position as far as quality is concerned somewhat lessens the difference. The fruit offered this week has, in some instances, been exceedingly poor and thin, this being more evident in the latest arrivals, indicating that the quality of the remainder of the stock on the water and to be shipped will probably be equally unsatisfactory. The reduction in price will make the retail 4d. possible without much loss to the distributor, which is certainly a condition of things much to be desired, and, now that the price has been established, it will be a very good thing for the trade if they can resist any alteration in an upward direction until they have secured their Christmas wants. The prices in Spain are about 2s. dearer than they are in London, and the supplies close here are very limited, so that, after the disposal of about 500 tons of fruit, the cheap quotation will probably disappear.—The Produce Markets' Review.

CANNED GOODS IN LONDON.

There is very little change to note, for, although business during the week has been rather less active, valuations in most instances remain steady. The recent advance in French sardines has been generally well maintained, although a few parcels of last year's pack are still to be secured at prices ruling slightly under those asked for this season's goods. According to latest advices the fishing in France has now practically stopped, and this has given increased firmness to a market already affected by this year's small catch. The distributive business in salmon continues on a small scale, but holders are firm and show no disposition whatever to force sales in the present strong position of the market. Canned meats are in good request for the time of the year, both on the spot and for forward delivery, and there is now little offering unless at nominal prices. It is thought by many that the rise in value will affect consumption; yet the supplies, especially the Australian packs, even in first hands, are so small as to prevent much hope of lower quotations. The country demand for pines is slow, but values on the spot are well maintained. There has been considerable movement in tomatoes during the past few weeks, and large sales have been made at a considerable advance. Shipments of gallon apples are arriving very slowly, and the quantity available on the spot is quite inadequate to meet the demand.—The Produce Markets' Review, November 15.

GILLETT'S GOODS FOR NORTHWEST.

During the last two weeks E. W. Gillett Co. Limited of Toronto have shipped seven carloads "Royal" yeast, lye, baking powder, soda and cream of tartar to the Northwest and British Columbia. A carload of these goods is also being shipped to Halifax.

"MAKING THE PLACE."

IN times of great political excitement a motion to "suspend rules" is in order. In time of stress, when a young man is seeking to earn a livelihood, we suggest that he suspend the rule of looking about for a position and see what he can do to fill a need unknown or unrecognized.

Where a definite routine of labor is involved it is easy to secure help, and those positions are usually filled, with a waiting list behind each. But there are labors to be performed, work to be done, skill of hands or alertness of mind or grasp of some "How" that requires a person of peculiar fitness, but which that person must himself discover and to which he must fit himself.

There is room in every factory for more "help" than there is. Every office could find employment for the extraordinary help which is wanted (unconsciously, no doubt) additional to what there is. The young man who is hunting for a position had better give up his quest and see if he can't make place for himself where his peculiar manner of doing things, or fitness for certain operations, or talent for creating, may find useful application. To such we would say, go to a merchant or manufacturer or manager and show him where you fit into his affairs, wherein you can serve him to his profit, and you won't get anything but an interested hearing. If you go to those same men asking if there is a vacant place, involving known factors or detail or routine, you are quite sure to meet the ready "No." To-day's business genius makes his place and fills it by the very force of his capacity to do something better or differently from others (which, not infrequently, is all that is required to make it better) and to point out just where he could step in and fit, he will secure a speedy recognition and success will follow as surely as day follows night. Every man knows what he wants, but every man doesn't know what others want. Learn that and meet the demand.

MISDIRECTED MAIL MATTER.

Out of an annual total of four thousand million of pieces of mail matter sent in Great Britain, ten millions were not delivered owing to defective addresses. The loss incident to these millions of errors would sustain a hospital for broken promises. Not merely is a two-cent stamp wasted when a letter goes astray, but we know the widespread collateral losses often involved even in a single case of non-delivery. Concentrated attention to the moment's work would prevent most of the waste inclusive under misdirected mail; and it seems a pity that an instant's mind wandering, or the quick carelessness of a wobbling pen should be permitted to do so much harm.

OFFICE ACCESSORIES.

Hart & Riddell, manufacturing stationers, Wellington street, Toronto, are introducing the Opalla Loose-Leaf Ledgers. The cut below shows the new office device unlocked ready for removal or insertion of sheets. The Opalla Loose-Leaf Ledger works easier, looks better, lasts longer and costs less than any other expanding ledger.

Its object is to eliminate all inactive, closed or dead accounts, transferring them to a transfer ledger where sheets can be kept in their same relative position ready for reference at all times, leaving the current ledger free from all except active accounts.

In the loose-leaf ledger the account is always under the proper tab, as the index is distributed through the entire ledger in the proper order, saving time. The insertion and removal of its sheets makes of the loose leaves a perpetual ledger.

UTILITY OF WANT BOOK.

How many dealers are there who keep a "Want Book?" A want book is practically a ledger made up from the stock account and shows at a glance what may be needed. Dealers frequently fall into a habit, and a very careless one it is, of waiting until a traveller comes along, and then going over his stock in a listless sort of a way with the object of finding out what is needed. What they need most of all is a record of what they want or are likely to want at any given date. If goods in any line run low, or there is apt to be a demand for them in excess of present supplies, jot the item down on the book and see that they are ordered at the first opportunity. Don't wait for the traveller to point out your necessities, although he is a very valuable assistant in your line of business at times, and is always worth cultivating for the knowledge that's in him, but use the book as a sort of automatic memory and look into it at regular intervals. No one can be expected to remember all the daily wants that come up for filling.

ABOUT OUR "WANT COLUMN."

We have every disposition to aid such of our friends as happen to be seeking positions. Many employers are reading our papers and we consider we can best serve all concerned by inserting advertisements of "Situations Wanted" under such headings. We are doing this and here call particular attention to the fact, believing that the wanted and wanting may come together to mutual advantage if they will use the columns of our magazines for their purposes.

To those who wish to employ office help our columns offer opportunities to reach a very large audience of interested, intelligent workers.

If you are buying general publicity, of if you wish to place your goods before every class of business men through a medium which brings immediate returns, "The Office" is the place for your advertisement.

It points the way to the placing of your story to more than 25,000 thrifty and progressive business men in prosperous sections each month at a rate much lower than is offered by any other similar paper in Canada. Business men line up, and we will show you what we can do for you!

The Right Hand of the Sales Department.

From time to time the Print Shop of St. Catharines has issued a little magazine known as "Impressions" advocating good printing and advertising.

It has met with so much success that we have decided to issue it every month and embody in its table of contents each issue special features by experts on the various phases of advertising; for instance, in the January number will be found:

Cover design by Gatchel & Manning, of Philadelphia.

The Follow Up System for Advertisers by J. B. Hendrickson, the card index expert of Rochester. To the advertiser who is unacquainted with this plan this article is worth many times the subscription price. It contains information that has cost a number of firms hundreds of dollars to find out.

A Criticism of Trade Paper Advertising by Lillian Gertrude Keyes, of New York. Miss Keyes, who conducts the campaign of advertising for the Semi-Ready Clothing Company is certainly an authority whose articles will be of great value to all advertisers.

As I See It by E. St. Elmo Lewis, of Philadelphia. A great many of you have "asked Lewis about it," and you found his advice sound.

All of which should prove to be a wonderful help to your sales department.

When you consider that this publication is issued by the Print Shop, whose work as printers of De Luxe editions of advertising is so well known, it is a guarantee that each issue will inspire readers to do better and more profitable work along advertising lines.

In fact, do you know where you could spend a dollar to better advantage. Just fill out one of the coupons and send it in.

ADVERTISING CHATS.

By A. B. Caswell,

IN my last chat with the retail advertiser I endeavored to impress upon him the importance of securing the confidence of his customers. This, as I said, is to be done by advertising only goods which possess merit. Or, if wishing to sell out something which is of inferior quality, to state the fact in plain language. In general—backing up plain statements with honest goods.

Having once secured the confidence of the public as an advertiser who means business, the hardest part of the work is over, so far as the merchant is concerned. So much newspaper space is used in advertising fakes and frauds, imaginary bargains, and so on, that the public are skeptical, especially of statements which are painted too brightly. Be careful, then, to clothe your remarks in language which contains simple statements of facts. Do not let them be too staid, however. Give them color enough to attract attention and to keep it.

GREAT REFORMS COME SLOWLY.

I have said that having once gained the confidence of the public the hardest part of the work is over. So it is, but do not imagine that this can be done without a great deal of patient and persistent effort. Do not expect to do it by one advertisement, or two, or five, or perhaps even ten. Great reforms come slowly—It is a great reform to win a customer from some store, where he has been dealing for years, perhaps, and where he is fairly well if not entirely satisfied with the treatment he has received. It is a great reform to get people to buy goods which they do not want at all, or, some other article in preference to goods which they do want. But such reforms as these have been made, and many more equally great, if not greater, directly through the medium of good advertising. Do not get discouraged if results do not come at once. The names of the victims of one or two-insertion advertising is legion, while the names of those who have built up splendid businesses from judicious and persistent advertising is spelled with the same letters.

PERSISTENCY THOU ART A JEWEL

Take it in your own business. The salesman for some manufacturer or wholesaler calls eleven times, and the twelfth time he gets an order. Isn't it so? A good salesman expects to do it. It's tiresome, and it looks like time and money wasted, but he knows it isn't. He is pleasant about it and persistent and patient.

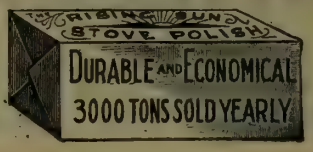
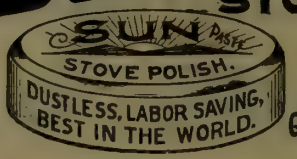
By and by the merchant says: "That fellow must have a good thing, or he wouldn't stick at it so well. I'll try a little anyway."

The eleven calls were advertising. An advertisement may go eleven times to the public before it convinces them, but if it is a good advertisement of a good article or commodity in a good newspaper, it will accomplish the result in time. It 's a certainty — it has been proven. The old saw, "Consistency, thou art a jewel," would read equally as well if the prefix in the first word was spelled PER-

DO NOT CROWD YOUR SPACE



Do not try to put too much matter into your advertising space. If you do you are going to lose your chance of inviting custom. The public, unless they are tremendously interested, are not going to wade through a mass of small type. If you cannot condense your matter so as to look well in your regular space, take a little extra space (the publisher is always glad to supply it pro rata) and give the ad. a chance. Look at this also the same as you would in your own business. You would never think of trying to put a peck and a half of apples into a peck measure, or five quarts of coal oil into a gallon can. Yet, many a merchant expects a printer to crowd 400 lines of matter into a 200 or 300-line space, and feels disappointed if the result is not a success.



Make your sentences short and crisp. Imagine you have your prospective customer already on the other side of the counter. Rub it in hard; but be quick about it. They will like you better for it.

THE PREPARATION OF COPY.

If at all possible prepare the copy yourself, or, if not, leave the preparation in the hands of some competent person, always, however, personally supervising the work. Do not leave the preparation of copy to your office boy, who is probably in a hurry to get home and has a variety of other matters to attend to, of which the ad. is to his mind the least important. If your office boy is your ad.

expert, and he is no better than the general run of office boys, you may expect to get "office-boy" results, probably $2 or $3 per week. The most successful advertisers to-day are those who devote a part of their own time to their advertising, giving it the same attention they would any other detail of their business. I know one large and successful merchant, who, if he does not get time during the day, sits up half the night, if necessary, to prepare his advertisement. Often our best ideas come to us in the "wee sma' hours," and this reminds me of a gentleman friend of mine of a literary calling, who keeps a pencil and writing-pad by the head of his bed all night, and who, whenever an idea strikes him in a waking moment, immediately feels for the pad and jots it down roughly in the dark. In this way he has received and kept for use many of his brightest inspirations.

TOM PEPPER'S ADVERTISING EXPERIENCE.

By G. H. Tudhope, Woodstock, Ont.

Tom Pepper launched out on the rough sea of trade,
With a nice little stock in a nice little store,
With the saving of years the whole stock was paid,
And Tom had a chance as few men had before.

The days passed by and he did fairly well,
But the trade didn't grow as he thought;
Each one that came he would generally sell,
But the crowd didn't come as they ought.

Bye-and-Bye Tom grew troubled and downhearted got,
His shelves were a playground for flies;
He didn't feel better when a friend said he ought To "spruce up" and then "advertise."

"Advertising costs money—won't do any good,"
He said, "All the folks know I'm here—
They know I sell groceries—all kinds of food,
And an ad. will not help me, I fear."

At last by much coaxing and talk,
(Even Tom's wife was surprised)
That week he arranged and cleaned up his stock,
And the next, for a change, advertised.

Each week his ad. in The Echo was seen,
And then people came to the store,
Now Tom is brighter than he's ever been,
And his worst business troubles are o'er.

THE MONTREAL GROCERS' ASSOCIATION.

THE regular monthly meeting of the Montreal Grocers' Association, which was held on December 4, was an interesting one, and a good amount of business was put through.

The president of the Association, Ald. R. Turner, occupied the chair, and was called upon to refute certain statements regarding trading stamps, which it was alleged he had made. Before the charter committee, in November, when introducing a deputation of grocers, it was said that he had spoken of the trading-stamp system as a "species of gambling," and that the stamps cost the trader $20 to $25 per week, the amount coming out of the pockets of the consumer, by reason of an inferior article being supplied, or words to that effect. Ald. Turner denied having made these statements.

The delegates of the Association who had interviewed the charter committee in regard to the movement to abolish the trading stamps brought in their report; and the grocers will now endeavor to obtain the assistance of merchants in other lines of trade, all the trade associations affected by them making a combined effort to do away with the trading-stamp business.

The meeting decided to get out a calendar, marking the dates of the regular meetings of the Association. This will serve to jog the memories of those members who are apt to forget the meetings. Messrs. Dixon and Bigaouette are the committee to look after this. Advertising space will probably be rented, and with this assistance the proposed calendar will probably be a very good one.

The fee of $55 for the transfer of grocers' licenses came up for discussion. It was shown that this fee is too high to serve the purpose, and that under it many preferred to sell out their business without any transfer of license, thus leaving the Government nothing. The fee formerly charged was $20, which could be easily collected on an ordinary transfer, and it was decided to ask the Provincial Treasurer to restore the $20 fee.

To the president, Ald. Turner, was left the question of sending a delegate to the Quebec Legislature. The meeting was adjourned to the first Thursday in February.

INQUIRIES ABOUT CANADIAN TRADE.

The following were among the recent inquiries relating to Canadian trade received at the Canadian Government office in London:

1. The proprietors of certain saddle and harness preparations, boot and shoe blackings and polishes, embrocations and horse powders, are seeking to extend their business with Canada, and contemplate appointing a representative in the Dominion.

2. A firm of spinners of carpet, hosiery and coating yarns is desirous of doing a Canadian trade, and wishes to get into touch with carpet and hosiery manufacturers in Canada.

3. A London firm of general import and export merchants desires to get the representation of a few good Canadian houses whose goods are likely to sell in large quantities if properly pushed.

4. Inquiry is made again for names of Canadian exporters of fruit pulp.

5. A firm of bedstead makers is open to buy wood frames, of Canadian manufacture, for wire mattresses.

6. A North of England firm is looking out for a good Canadian house which would take up the agency for a special line of cycle oils in tins, as well as Scotch glue, gelatine, etc.

TORONTO RETAIL GROCERS' ASSOCIATION.

Arrange for their "At-Home," Nominate Officers, Etc.

THE Toronto Retail Grocers' Association held their monthly meeting in St. George's Hall, Elm street, Toronto, on Monday evening, December 8. David Bell was in the chair.

It was reported that after all expenses were paid the amount of money realized from the excursion held last July was $102. This, on motion, was ordered to be added to the general fund of the association.

Two new members were proposed, F. Little, grocer, Avenue Road, and A. W. Cooper, grocer, Wellesley street, Toronto, and their names were put on the list for admission at the next monthly meeting.

It was decided to hold some time early next year the annual "At-Home" of the association, and a committee consisting of R. Bailey Snow, R. H. Davies and F. Thorne was appointed to attend to the preliminary business in connection therewith and report at the next meeting.

The rest of the evening was taken up with the nomination of officers for the coming year. The following were nominated:

President—D. Bell (acclamation).

Vice-President—F. W. Johnson, B. Panter, W. McLean, F. Thorne, T. Clarke.

Treasurer—A. E. White, B. Panter, R. B. Snow, T. Clark.

Executive—W. T. Cotte, John Butcher, R. H. Davies, W. J. Sykes, R. B. Snow, D. Whetstone, W. McLean, F. W. Johnson, B. Panter, J. Burns, W. H. Marmion, D. W. Clark.

Trustees—A. E. White, J. Bond, F. S. Roberts.

Auditors—F. W. Johnson, W. T. Cotte, B. Panter, A. E. White, J. Burns, H. Kelly.

The election and installation of officers will take place the next night of meeting, the second Monday in January.

There being no other business the meeting adjourned.

ART ENGRAVINGS.

Hudon, Hebert & Cie are sending out to their customers 10,000 large photogravures of Their Majesties the King and Queen, which are entirely free from advertising matter, well printed on heavy calendered paper and suitable for framing. Indeed, each of them is well worth a frame, and all recipients will prize the pictures highly. Should there be any left when the firm's customers have been supplied any reader of this paper will be gladly forwarded a copy if Messrs. Hebert & Cie are notified by a card that one is desired. The engravings are from the latest portraits of King Edward and Queen Alexandra.

NEW GRAIN EXPORTING COMPANY.

A new limlted stock company has been organized by H. D. Metcalfe, J. J. Riley, jr., C. P. Metcalfe, J. E. Riley and H. H. Snowden to carry on a grain exporting business, merging the old company of H. D. Metcalfe & Co. into a new one, to be called The H. D. Metcalfe Company. H. D. Metcalfe, besides being a well-known member of the Montreal Board of Trade, is an ex-president of the Corn Exchange Association. J. E. and J. J. Riley are old marine insurance men.

The capital stock of the new company is $100,000, divided into 1,000 shares of $100 each. The officers are: President, H. D. Metcalfe; vice-president, J. J. Riley, jr.; secretary-treasurer, H. H. Snowden. Later on, the company intend to extend their business considerably.

SUGAR SITUATION.

WILLETT & GRAY say of raw sugar: "A feeling prevails everywhere that the prevailing conditions relating to sugar are sufficiently strong to warrant further advances. To what extent these advances may be carried is uncertain, but we should say that at around 4c. per lb. for centrifugals considerable large supplies will come on the market even from Cuba, in spite of any disposition that may be shown there to await for reciprocity action by Congress, which may not be definitely decided for some months to come. Certainly new crop sugars at the outports will have to be marketed freely in the absence of sufficient storage facilities for carrying them, and the present prices must, also, prove some temptation to sellers."

TO BUY UP LARGE PRUNES.

A private telegram from the Pacific Coast reports that there is a movement on foot in packing quarters to buy up the supply of large prunes still held by growers, but that so far little headway has been made owing to the high views of the growers. The telegram states that the movement is being engineered by a syndicate in which Chicago dealers are interested.

CALIFORNIAN PRUNES.

Letter advices from San Jose on prunes say: "The market from first hands is rapidly cleaning up on large sizes, and the few lots left in the hands of growers are more firmly held. Santa Clara 40-50's and 50-60's are in exceedingly small compass, and we think that the lowest prices of the season have been seen. It is possible to buy outside 60-90's on a 2½c. basis yet, but packers are showing a firmer front on Santa Claras at 2⅝ to 2¾c. four-size basis. It is estimated here that all told fully three-fourths of the entire crop is under contract for eastern and export account." Referring to the situation here a prominent jobber said recently: "The demand continues very active and stocks are not accumulating in any quarter. The freer arrivals, however, have made jobbers less eager for goods. We have caught up considerably on back orders, but a surprisingly active demand continues, and stocks move freely. There is no surplus carried in any quarter, and this is, no doubt, accounted for largely by the fact that a good deal of business has been for export. The course of the market on the Coast will be watched very closely from now on, as the position there will largely govern the situation here and in other eastern markets."

CEYLON TEA IN LONDON.

Quantities now offering weekly are quite inadequate to the requirements of the trade, and as a result prices continue to advance, this week's range being the highest seen for many months past. Pekoes were especially dear, as both home and export orders were in for them, and, as a rule, the exporters can beat the home trade, but this week they had to call pretty high to have any chance. Tea for price showed a strong rise even on last week's rates. Next week's sales are again on a very small scale, and it is difficult to see how buyers can get along with only some 15,000 chests a week, as we are now getting. The total shipments from Colombo for the first fortnight of this month only amounted to 2,500,000 lb., so we look like being pinched for Ceylon tea at any rate.—Grocers' Gazette, Nov. 22.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.

THE Butchers' Advocate has the following to say on the giving of presents by butchers to their patrons at Christmas:

"About this time each year retail butchers begin to think about what will be a suitable New Year or Christmas present for their customers. We advise them to change the line of thought this year; to think of how to avoid giving presents to customers without hurting the feelings of the customers. There is no reason in the world why the butcher should spend his hard-earned money in presents for those who have dealt with him because they believe he treats them better than any other butcher will. The average butcher seems to have false ideas about some things, and one of them is that his customers bring him their trade for sentimental reasons. The fact is that the consumer goes where he believes he can get the most of the best goods for his money, and so far as his butcher is concerned, the consumer is as lacking in sentiment as a last year's Christmas tree is of candles. The butcher who feels that he cannot altogether break away from the present-giving custom, might find it advantageous to give away a handsome calendar. That is as far as he should go. This is a subject that should be taken up immediately by the Retail Butchers' Associations throughout the country. If every member were to agree not to give presents this year, it would mean the saving of thousands of dollars to the butchers."

DEAD MEAT INDUSTRY.

During the past two weeks Canadian cattlemen have been to no slight degree inconvenienced by the condition of affairs in the Eastern States to the south of us. Canadian shippers have been obliged to look to their own resources in this crisis, and it is occurrences like this that make for a nation. Canada, a colony of the British Empire, is too dependent on the United States. Good arrangements were, of course, made independent of the United States, but the solution of the Canadian export trade in cattle does not lie therein. What is necessary is a chilled meat industry instead of the method which is at present in vogue. England does not wish to take any unnecessary risk, and Canadians should be alive to the importance of the situation. Mr. Hanbury, President of the English Board of Agriculture, speaking at Louth, about the middle of November last, declared that no store cattle would on any condition whatever be admitted into England during his tenure of office. The reason is, he added, that such importation is a great deal too risky and the game is not worth the candle. At the same time he wished that more cattle were bred in England. Mr. Hanbury knows well to what extent the pasture lands and root crops have been benefited by the greater number of home-bred cattle. If their land is being enriched, why cannot ours also be enriched by following the same practice? Let our farmers to a greater extent enter into feeding cattle. These cattle could be slaughtered here, thus giving more work to Canadians; and a chilled meat industry, with twentieth-century cold storage methods, could be established between Canada and England.

AMPLE FACILITIES AT HALIFAX.

D. A. Story, district freight agent of the I.C.R., stated that there was now accommodation at Richmond for 350 head of cattle. Hon. J. W. Longley was interviewed, and said there would be no difficulty in securing the Exhibition stables. There is accommodation on the ground for about 1,000 head, which would bring the total up to 1,350. And if the I.C.R. erect temporary sheds, probably 1,000 more can be comfortably accommodated at this port.

No vessels which have cleared from Portland or Boston can be used at St. John or Halifax for shipping cattle. But the steamers Englishman and Merion, being unable to load at Boston, are coming to Halifax.

In regard to the progress made in exterminating the foot and mouth disease, the United States Secretary of Agriculture has given instructions to Dr. Salmon, of the Bureau of Animal Industry, who is personally superintending the work of fighting the epidemic, to destroy all animals infected.

THE PROVISION MARKETS.

TORONTO.

The market remains about the same, prices being firmly maintained. There is a tendency towards easier prices in dressed hogs, although there is no actual change in price. Veal is rather firmer in price. Our quotations are as follows: Dressed hogs, $7.25 to $8.00 per 100 lb.; No. 1 beef, $7.00 to $7.50 per 100 lb.; hind quarters, $7.50 to $8.00 per 100 lb.; front quarters, $4.50 to $5.00 per 100 lb.; veal, $6.50 to $9.00; lamb, $6.75. Choice export cattle, $5.00 to $5.50; medium cattle, $4.50 to $5.50; other grades of cattle, $2.40 to $3.00; live hogs, selects, 6c. per lb., and fats and lights, $5.75 per 100 lb.

The demand continues very active for all kinds of provisions, especially along clear bacon and pure lard. There is no indication of a decline in prices. Short cut is a little easier. We quote: Long clear bacon, 10¾ to 11½c.; smoked breakfast bacon, 14 to 15c.; roll, 11¾ to 12½c.; medium hams, 13½ to 14c.; large hams, 12½ to 13c.; shoulder hams, 11 to 11½c., and backs 14½ to 15c.; heavy mess pork, $21.50 to $22.00; short cut, $23.00 to $23.50; lard, in tierces, 10¾ to 11c. per lb.; tubs, 11 to 11¼c., and pails, 11¼ to 11½c.; compounds, 8¼ to 10c.; plate beef, $15.00 per 200-lb. bbl.

and prices have ruled steady. An advice from Bristol, Eng., states that Canadian Wiltshires, though they met with a sharp fall during the week past, showed later very good values and are now meeting with more inquiry.

There has been a decline of 25 to 50c. in dressed hogs. Receipts have increased somewhat, and on this account the market eased off during the first of the week. There is a fairly good demand. Fresh-killed abattoir stock now sells at $8 to $8.25, with country-killed unchanged at $7.50 per 100 lb.

The movement in dressed meats is now fairly good, though it is reported that really choice beef is scarce, and that the embargo placed on American cattle has had the effect of decreasing supplies on this market, exporters having advised holders in the country to cease shipping. The consequence is that instead of prices being easier they are actually higher, sales of good beef by the carcass having been made at 7½c. per lb., hind quarters at 9c. and fores at 6c. Veal also is somewhat scarce, and whatever is brought forward meets with a ready sale.

In lard, both pure and compound brands, there is a fairly good movement at unchanged prices. Quotations are as follows: Pure Canadian lard, $2.30 to $2.32½ per pail; Fairbank's "Boar's Head" lard compound, 9⅜c. tierce basis, with extras as follows: 60-lb. tubs, ¼c. over tierce; 20-lb. tin pails, ¼c.; 20-lb. wood pails, ½c.; 10-lb. tins, ¾c.; 5-lb. tins, ⅞c.; 3-lb. tins 1c. Snow White and Globe compound, $1.80 to $1.90 per pail; Cottolene, 11¼c. for 20-lb. pails, and 11½c. for 60-lb. tubs, for Quebec and Ontario; hams, 12 to 14c.; heavy Canadian short cut mess pork, $24.50 to $25; Canadian short cut clear pork, $23.50 to $24; American short cut clear pork, $24 to $24.50; American fat back, $24.50 to $25; bacon, Wiltshire, 13 to 14c. per lb.; extra plate beef, $14.50 to $15 per bbl.

WINNIPEG.

CURED MEATS.—The demand is enormous and prices are firm and unchanged with the exception that hams shade slightly lower. We quote: Hams, 14½c.; breakfast bacon, bellies, 15¼c.; backs, 14¾c.; spiced rolls, 12½c.; smoked long clear, 13c.; dry salt long clear, 12½c.

LARD.—50-lb. tubs, $6.05; 20-lb. pails, $2.40.

DRESSED MEATS.—There is a heavy trade in dressed meats of all kinds, and the market is slightly higher and shows a tendency to advance. We quote: Beef, city dressed, 6½c.; country dressed ½c.

under these figures; lamb, 11½c.; mutton-8 to 9c.; hogs, 7 to 8c.

ST. JOHN, N.B.

In barrelled pork, the market seems easier. Stocks are held light and there is little change in local prices. Local-packed is quite freely offered. In beef, the market keeps firm. There is quite a little local-packed offered, chiefly mess beef. Stock is good and price low. In pure lard, Ontario, which is chiefly used here, comes forward slowly. Price is very firm. In refined lard, a rather higher price is quoted. Fresh domestic beef is low and freely offered. It is difficult to get the price for Ontario stock. Round hogs are a little firmer in price. Lamb is low. We quote as follows: Mess pork, $23.00 to $23.50; clear pork, $23.00 to $26; plate beef, $14 to $16; domestic beef, 4 to 7c.; Western beef, 7 to 9c.; lamb, 6 to 6½c.; mutton, 5c.; veal, 5 to 7c.; pork, 7 to 7½c.; pure lard, tubs, 12c.; pails, 12¼c.; compound, tubs, 9¼c.; pails, 9½c.; Fairbank's refined, tubs, 10½c.; pails, 10¾c.

The N. K. Fairbank Co. have reduced their price of lard ¼c. per lb., and this, in the face of the firm market on pure lard, has been appreciated by the trade and large sales have resulted.

PROVISION NOTES.

It is not expected that the Christmas turkey will be dearer than 11 or 11½c. per lb. in Toronto.

Over 20,000 boxes of cheese were shipped from Russell station on the Ottawa and New York Railway, as against 16,000 last year.

The Guelph Winter Fair opened last Tuesday. It is the largest of its kind ever held in Canada and one of the largest ever held on the continent.

The smokehouse of Gordon, Ironsides & Fares' abattoir, situated at Winnipeg, was destroyed by fire on November 30. The building was valued at $4,000.

The latest thing in prepared food is a condensed extract of beef. This is being manufactured for the first time in Canada by the Dominion Packing Co., Charlottetown, P.E.I.

The Moose Jaw creamery has closed for the season. It received, during the six months' operating, 13,236.8 inches of cream from 14 patrons. The output was 16,731 lb. of butter.

The highest price paid for live hogs by the Dominion Packing Co., Charlottetown, P.E.I., who have re-commenced buying, is 6c. They do not wish to encourage the trade in dressed hogs, but prefer dealing in live hogs.

The Texas cattle ranges are becoming overcrowded, and owners are looking to Canada for new grazing grounds. They are willing to invest large amounts in the building of sheds, etc., if they can find suitable lands here.

The hog-buyers in half a dozen counties east of Toronto have formed a combine and think they have the farmers cornered. In speaking to a farmer, one of the principal buyers said that the farmers would not stick together. This aroused the farmers, and now they are looking for a buyer who will take their hogs.

The Cumberland Pork-Packing Co. have offered prizes to the management of the Maritime Fair for the best bacon hog of any age, breed or grade, the first prize being $5. Since the establishment of the packing industry in Amherst the company have found a steadily-increasing supply and are now increasing, on an average, $500 worth of pork per day from this county alone. In former years the bulk of their supply was imported.

A compilation of the reports sent to the Manitoba Department of Agriculture show that the amount of creamery butter manufactured during the season of 1902 was 1,406,450 lb., which is a decrease of 4 per cent, from last year, when the total was 2,460,810 lb. This year the average price was 18.6c., while last year it was only 17.9c., making the total value this year $364,598.70, as against $441,424.87 last year.

CONDENSED MILK.

A SERIES of articles in regard to the milk supply was recently printed by The New York Tribune, and several instances were cited of the danger of contagious diseases on account of the way in which milk was sometimes sold.

"A healthy community," says The Tribune, "means a vigorous, ambitious, enterprising and prosperous community; and the foundation of this health must be laid in infancy; and it is the health of the masses, not that of the favored few, that must be the subject of the closest investigation and inquiry." And the health of the infant, like that of the adult, is largely dependent on its food supply; but in the case of the former that supply is much more restricted. Sustaining food for adolescent and adult is provided in endless variety, but the babe must be fed on milk, and milk only; too often its mother cannot supply this, and it has to be sought elsewhere. The only available recourse for the poor, because of lack of means, is to use the milk from the corner grocery, or condensed milk; and, of these, the only safe one is the latter."

The Tribune then quotes the testimony of eminent physicians and others on the subject, some of which are herewith produced. Dr. L. Emmet Holt, professor of children's diseases at the New York Polyclinic, and an acknowledged authority on infant feeding, says: "Next to pure cow's milk, which is hard to get by the poor mother, in city life, I consider the fresh condensed milk, sold from the wagons, to be the best substitute for mother's milk. If it is inconvenient for the mother to get this, then canned condensed milk is the next choice. Both the condensed milk from the wagons and canned condensed milk are much better and safer than ordinary grocery-store milk."

Dr. W. P. Northrop, professor of infants' and children's diseases, Bellevue College, says: "For the great mass of mothers whose pocketbooks are limited to the daily running of their homes (he is speaking of mothers who cannot nurse their babies), I consider that plain, fresh condensed milk is the best. It is very much safer to feed a baby, in warm weather, on condensed milk, than upon milk obtained at the grocery stores, or, in fact, on any fresh milk, except that prepared especially for infants, and which many mothers, for various reasons, cannot get. Therefore, condensed milk is her safest and best substitute."

Dr. H. H. Chapin, professor of children's diseases at the Post Graduate Hospital: "In good condensed milk the product is pure, and carefully handled; therefore condensed milk is better for the mother than ordinary city milk."

Sister Theresa Vincent, in charge of the big New York Foundling Hospital, says that condensed milk gives them the best satisfaction of any infant food tried there, and they now use it exclusively."

Dr. Benjamin Edson, the well-known Brooklyn specialist on infant feeding, says: "I always give condensed milk the preference. My experience with it covers a period of some 30 years, and the results have always been in its favor. I have found that if children are rightly fed on it and given the proper amount of care they thrive and grow up strong. The complaint which I have occasionally heard about condensed milk is that infants become 'too fat' on it. I do not consider this anything wrong if the child acquires strength and hardihood at the same time, and this, in my experience, I have found to be the case."

Dr. F. A. Dorman, of the great Sloane Maternity Hospital, of New York, says: "There is no question that pure cow's milk properly modified, or, if it cannot be obtained, pure condensed milk is a most wholesome diet for infants. Good condensed milk is better than poor cow's milk which is what the poorer residents of a large city so often get."

New York Medical Journal: "The real question . . . is as to what is the best available substitute for mother's milk in the case of the poor, who are such a vast majority in any great urban population that it is necessarily their children that fall victims in the greatest numbers to the diseased conditions that are caused or greatly aggravated by improper feeding. Condensed milk offers itself as a particular boon to such people. It is cheap, it is readily obtainable, it requires no special care in the handling, it is pure, and it is the product of the best milk that men of vast experience in dairy affairs are able to obtain for themselves; surely it is infinitely preferable to the milk of the average corner grocery."

All this testimony is buttressed by the fact that there are hundreds of thousands of children raised to healthy maturity upon the product of one concern alone, the Borden, which is probably used more largely than all the other condensed milks combined.

The legitimate cause for this large use is found in its quality, which is the result of knowledge, experience, and systematic care. This product is simply pure cow's milk sterlized, and condensed in vacuum. It is preserved with refined (cane) sugar and prepared in such a manner as to make it absolutely pure and wholesome. Its quality has been endorsed by the scientific and expert juries of the Philadelphia Centennial, 1876; the World's Columbian Exposition, Chicago, 1893; the Californian Mid-Winter International Exposition, 1894; the Cotton States and International Exposition, Atlanta, 1895; the Franklin Institute Medal, National Export Association, Philadelphia, 1899; the Paris Exposition, 1900; the Pan-American Exposition, Buffalo, 1901; South Carlonia Interstate and West Indies Exposition, Charleston, S.C., 1902; and, in fact, wherever the Borden product has been exhibited, by the awards of first premiums.

Perhaps, though, the extraordinary growth of the manufacture of the condensed milk in its half-century of existence—no industry founded on error could be bolstered through so lengthened a period by even the most phenomenally expert business management—and its consequence to-day amongst the vested interests of the country will be considered not the least of the evidences of the value of its product. The visible expression of that consequence is to be found in the vast and thoroughly equipped receiving stations (one of which has alone received and shipped 30,000 quarts of milk in one day) throughout the dairy sections, and in the great city delivery depots, the massive proportions and stately architecture of which render them no mean rivals of municipal buildings. Again, while it is difficult to estimate this industry's value to the dairy interests, no insignificant part of this country's wealth, it is safe to guess that it must furnish a market for at least a large part of the milk supply, and that in the extremely and improbable event of disaster overtaking and destroying it, the farmer would suffer equally with the poor and their infant children.

Truly Gail Borden wrought better than he knew when, in 1849, he gave to the world his process for condensing milk!

A GOOD RECORD.

For nearly half a century Boeckh's brushes and brooms have been upon the market, and they have forced their way to the front through sheer merit. There are few dealers, if any, who do not handle them and recommend them in strongest terms. Boeckh's bamboo-handled broom has quite superseded the heavy, old-fashioned broom in all the best conducted households. It carries the weight where needed, in the broom-end, and makes work light and satisfactory.

A HANDSOME CALENDAR.

E. D. Marceau usually gets out a good calendar, and this year he has kept well up to the standard. His 1903 calendar is a large one, showing, besides his three trade marks at the top and a lithograph of his establishment, several illustrations, in fac-simile colors, of the packages of teas, mustards, baking powders, etc., which he handles. The calendar is well designed, executed and printed. The monthly records also are of a handy size. Readers of THE GROCER can secure a copy of this by writing to Mr. Marceau.

Of Interest To You

When a grocer sells cheap baking powders he invites dissatisfaction. The cake being spoiled by the powder, all the ingredients will be classed as inferior, to the discredit of the grocer who sold them. The sale of lower-cost or inferior brands of powders as substitutes for the Royal Baking Powder, or at the price of the Royal, is not fair toward the consumer, and will react against the reputation of the store.

Royal is recognized everywhere and by every one as the very highest grade baking powder---superior to all other brands in purity, leavening strength, and keeping quality. It is this baking powder, therefore, that will always give the highest satisfaction to the customer; and a thoroughly satisfied customer is the most profitable customer that a dealer can have.

Ask your jobber for Royal Baking Powder. In the long run it yields more profit to the grocer than the low-priced alum brands.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, December 6, 1902.

TRADE in all lines is excellent and the only complaint is the old, old one, that cars are short and jobbers cannot get their goods. It is exasperating, to say the least of it, to have Christmas goods ordered three, four, five and even six months ago not to hand yet. Into whatever jobbing house you go the story is the same. General jobbers report collections very fair, and the general financial tone good. There is every prospect of a heavy and early bush trade and firms intending to operate camps are already getting their outfits to the scene of operation, and there has been heavy selling to these men of staple groceries and food stuffs of all kinds.

The near approach of Christmas makes trade active in the special lines, and the demand is increasing for high-class goods. As usual at this season, prices remain for the most part unchanged; indeed, it might be said that not a single change, certainly not one of any moment, has occurred during the week, with the exception of the advance of 10c. per case on canned corn.

SUGARS.—Firm and without change. Granulated, $4.45; bright yellows, $3 85.

EVAPORATED AND DRIED FRUITS.—This market is not only active, but the prices are stiff and inclined to advance. Valencia raisins, though not quoted higher are even firmer in tone than last week, fine off-stalk being quoted at $2.35 and layers, $2.10 to $2.50; Californian muscatels, 7¼ to 8½c (2 to 4-crown). The demand for seeded raisins is heavy and this is one of the lines where delay in delivery is trying. One jobbing house has received but 100 boxes out of a two-car order. Currants are holding firm at 4¾ to 5c. and 1c. additional for cleaned goods.

NUTS.—The delay in delivery of these goods is most vexatious and some of the jobbers are getting anxious, as they fear they will not receive their full stocks in time for Christmas.

CANNED GOODS.—The canned vegetable situation shows no change. Jobbers generally are selling at $3.50 per case for tomatoes, although there is nothing in them at that figure. Some houses quote $3.75, but there seems some doubt of sales having been made at this figure. Corn has advanced 10c. per case, and is now quoted at $2.10. Peas are scarcer than corn, and cost quite as much, and should have advanced proportionately, but up to date have not done so, possibly owing to the more limited demand for them.

CANNED MEATS.—All lines are good sellers and prices show no change.

FLOUR.—A good business is being done both locally, for the Canadian trade generally, and for export. Prices are without change on the basis of $2 for the best grade of patent.

ROLLED OATS.—Very good trade, and practically the only cereal for which the demand is heavy at present. $1.75 for the 80-lb. sack is the basis, and $2.30 for the 98-lb. sack for standard and granulated.

POULTRY.—The supplies are at present confined to home-raised and the number of fowl coming in is not equal to the demand. The quality, too, is very poor; geese are practically the only well-fed birds coming on the market.

BUTTER.—The demand for butter is better than the supply at present. The amount of choice table butter coming in is not large. 20c. for farm-separator bricks has been paid, and good round lots of tubs or rolls bring 15 to 16c. Winnipeg.

CHEESE.—Steady demand and nothing new to report. Price is unchanged, jobbers selling at 13 to 13½c. All Ontario stock.

EGGS.—The market shows no signs of improvement so far as supply is concerned, and dealers hardly look for better things now until January. Eggs retailed in the city market to-day at 50c. (new laid). Fresh gathered case stock, mainly from Ontario, job at 25c.

VEGETABLES.—There is a considerable movement in potatoes and the prices have advanced. Carlots on track Winnipeg are worth 35c. and farmer's loads in the market, 30 to 35c. There is a demand for potatoes for New Ontario, and several cars were shipped down this week.

WORSE AND MORE OF IT.

THE city analyst of Montreal has already given some startling information regarding the adulteration of foods sold in that city, particularly of catsups, pickles and candies. In the light of his previous discoveries along this line, it is not surprising to learn that sausages are also given liberal doses of aniline red and brown dyes to produce a desired color. Doubtless there are several dealers in these goods who have suspected this before, though it comes as news to the great part of the public, the unhappy consumers.

According to the report of the analyst, which has been submitted to the health committee, the practice of using aniline in sausages is growing, indeed, has already become common. Both red and brown dyes are used, the former to give the meat a fresh appearance, and the latter to imitate the smoked color of the sausage casings. When dye is used on the casings a great deal of time is saved in smoking.

With dyed catspus, dyed pickles, dyed sausage and dyed candy on the market, we are prepared for almost anything—and in all probability some manufacturer with more enterprise than honesty will give it to us.

Of another sort of dangerous food is a certain make of mustard, which the analyst in his report says should be confiscated. This, however, is bad only as a result of the manner in which it is put up, not from deliberate adulteration on the part of the manufacturer. It appears that the mustard was fitted with a tin cap, which corroded, and, coming into contact with the mustard, rendered it a dangerous article to partake of.

A BUSINESS ROMANCE.

FIFTEEN or twenty years ago Colonel Pope was known as one of the most successful American manufacturers.

When the modern bicycle was developed he went extensively into their manufacture and soon became the leader by making good wheels and letting the people know it.

The American Bicycle Co. was formed, combining all the leading makers. Colonel Pope's business was included, and he has not, until lately, been much heard of. He became a director of the combination. Its promoters hoped, by reducing expenses, to make greater profits, and this was a reasonable proposition.

One of the first things the directors of the new company did was to cut off the advertising entirely. Colonel Pope opposed this move very strongly. He said to do so would be ruinous. The other directors persisted, and Colonel Pope resigned and sold all his interest in the Trust at a handsome figure.

The company made a disastrous failure in a much shorter time than Colonel Pope anticipated, and the creditors called on him and begged him to make an effort to put the business on a paying basis again.

At a meeting of the creditors the other day he presented an encouraging report as a result of his investigations. He gave it as his opinion that the cessation of advertising killed the bicycle business.

"The way to revive it," he declares, "is to resume advertising, which was cut off to reduce expenses, forgetful that there would also ensue a reduction in revenues.

"That is my idea for the future—to advertise. There is a future for the bicycle yet, but it will take advertising to develop it."

THE METRIC SYSTEM IN CANADA.

RE the metric system in Canada, the Hon. M. E. Bernier, Minister of Inland Revenue, says he is satisfied the metric system is infinitely superior to our complicated system of weights and measures.

The hon. gentleman is doing all in his power to educate the public to the advantages of the system by distributing charts and other material to illustrate the system to the high schools throughout the country, and he will approach the Governments of the Provinces to have the distribution extend to the common schools.

In this the hon. gentleman is only discharging his duty, as it is an assured fact that the metric system will be in use in all the civilized countries of the world at no distant date.

Mr. S. W. Stratton, of the National Bureau of Standards for the United States at Washington, predicts that the system will be universally used within two years. Mr. Stratton has just arrived home from a two years' tour of the world in the interest of his office and is considered an authority on the subject.

The system was legalized in Canada by an Act of the Dominion Parliament in 1867 (chap. 104, section 21), and all contracts based on it are enforceable at law.

In several countries it is the only system in use, and on account of its exactness is used exclusively for scientific purposes. It is based on a measure of length, the original being a bar of platinum, made by one Broda in 1840 at Paris, where the original bar is still preserved. Since it is sure to be put into practical use in Canada, it devolves on all persons connected with trade to do their share toward educating the masses.

We append a table of measure for weight and bulk :

The litre is the unit of capacity. It is legal at 1.0567 quarts, liquid measure.

10 centi litres c l = 1 deci litre d l.
10 deci litres d l = 1 litre l.
10 litres l = 1 deka litre d l.
10 deka litres d l = 1 hekto litre h l.

The gram is the unit of weight. It is legal at 15.432 grains troy.

10 milligrams m g = 1 centigram c g.
10 centigrams c g = 1 decigram d g.
10 decigrams d g = 1 gram g.
10 grams g = 1 dekagram d g.
10 dekagrams d g = 1 hektogram h g.
10 hektograms h g = 1 kilogram k g.
10 kilograms k g = 1 myriagram m g.
10 myriagrams m g = 1 quintal q.
10 quintals or 1,000 kilograms are 1 metric ton m t.

GRAVE CHARGE AGAINST CANADIAN CANNED MEATS.

THE daily newspapers were a few days ago furnished by the Department of Trade and Commerce with a statement derogatory of the canned meats supplied by Canada to the War Office for use in the South-African campaign. The item of news regarding it, as it appeared in the daily columns, was as follows :

The Department of Trade and Commerce has received a copy of the report of the Government analyst for the Cape of Good Hope, giving the results of an analysis of samples of canned meat from the United States, Canada, Australia and New Zealand. Samples of beef and poultry from Canada made an inferior showing, according to the report. The samples of Canadian meat numbered 94, and only 33 were pronounced sound ; of the remainder, 38 were decomposed, 23 slightly decomposed and 15 contained boracic acid. Fifty-eight samples of beef canned by a Montreal firm were analyzed, and, it is claimed, 26 were in an advanced state of decomposition, 11 were slightly decomposed, 1 contained lead, and 14 had boracic acid.

THE CANADIAN GROCER has for some time had the report of the British authorities at Cape Town in regard to the matter in its possession. It obtained it two months ago through R. G. Dun & Co., of New York, who in turn obtained it through their Cape Town branch. It was felt, however, that such a grave reflection in regard to the quality of Canadian canned meats should not be given publicity until the matter had been further investigated.

This is what the Department of Trade and Commerce should have done before giving the report publicity. Analysts commonly make mistakes ; and then it is well known that even such a respectable department as the War Office has its prejudices But Sir Richard Cartwright does not seem to have bothered himself about the matter. He probably deemed it none of his business, evidently not realizing that as Minister of Trade and Commerce he was on a par with the head of a department in a commercial enterprise who had not sufficient loyalty to the welfare of the firm to investigate a charge made against the quality of its goods before allowing the matter to gain publicity and reach the ears of competitors. But this is only another of the many instances we have had of Sir Richard's unfitness for the office he holds. It is time Sir Wilfrid Laurier made a change.

The analyses at Cape Town were made at the instance of the Military Director of Supplies, and the report in regard to canned beef was as follows, we substituting letters of the alphabet in place of the names of the firms given in the report :

| No. of Samples Examined | Brand. | State of Preservation. | Metallic Contamination. | Preservatives. | Remarks. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 9..... | A, Canada ..... | 2 slightly decomposed, 1 advanced decomposition, 1 quite putrid..... | Nil ..... | Nil ..... | 1 rather sinewy. |

| 4..... | P, " .. | 3 slightly decomposed..... | 4 copper. | Nil..... .... | 3 inferior quality. |

The following table was given showing the comparison as far as countries were concerned :

| Country. | No samples. | Sound. | Slightly decomposed. | Boracic preservatives. | Metallic contamination. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Scotland..... | 1 | 1 | .. | .. | .. |
| New Zealand..... | 15 | 7 | 7 | 1 | 6 |
| Queensland..... | 13 | 12 | 1 | .. | 2 |

| Canada ..... | 94 | 33 | 23 | 38 | 2 |
| United States..... | 11 | 11 | .. | .. | .. |
| Unknown..... | 16 | 9 | 7 | .. | 4 |
| Total..... ..... | 171 | 90 | 40 | 41 | 14 |

As we have already pointed out, we have during the past few weeks being investigating the matter. We have not yet been able to investigate every case, but those we have by no means corroborate the grave charges which are levied against Canadian canned meats by the analysis at Cape Town. One firm, for instance, in whose product one tin containing boracic acid was found, never uses boracic acid in any way in its establishment. There were 14 samples in all tested of this particular firm, and yet in only one was boracic acid found. This clearly shows that a mistake has been made, for we learn that the same method of pickling was employed in every instance.

Then, at the request of a firm who had shipped canned meats to South Africa, some of the cases were two years afterwards returned for the purpose of making a thorough test, and, although over 30 tins were opened, not one was found to be decomposed or impure. In fact, the contents of every tin were in excellent condition.

As far as the decomposed tins referred to in the report are concerned, the very fact that cases of canned meats were frequently exposed to inclement weather and immersed in water, thus causing the tins to rust and become perforated, would easily account for that.

SCARCITY OF OYSTERS.

THE tone of the oyster market is firm and prices in Canada will likely advance before long. Latest advices from Baltimore state that prices there have advanced 10c. per gal. This is an appreciation of 10 per cent.

The oyster is a scarce article this year around Chesapeake Bay. The catch is lighter this season than ever before, and, in fact, it has been getting smaller every year for some length of time. If this state of affairs keeps on much longer oysters will be a luxury that only the rich can afford. By the continual draining for years of Chesapeake Bay the fishermen have much depleted the oyster beds so that now only a few are obtainable in those waters. Like everything else, the Chesapeake Bay oyster is passing away.

Canadian dealers are not wholly dependent upon the Baltimore market for their oyster supply. Around Prince Edward Island are valuable oyster beds, whence oysters are exported over Canada, the United States, West Indies, and even to England. Most of these, however, are sold in the shell.

Christmas Suggestions for Customers.

Cut the following list out and place it in a prominent position in your store. It will be useful to your customers, and will mean money to you. It has been carefully compiled, and contains a list of articles handled by a grocer, and suitable for Christmas presents.

IT is oftentimes quite a difficult matter for customers to decide, when purchasing Christmas presents, just what they ought to buy for their friends and relatives. If they have no definite idea beforehand, they are liable to become muddled when faced by the complex display of a varied stock. Consequently, a merchant who is anxious to make sales will be prepared to utilize all possible means to help these customers come to a decision.

The following list is intended to assist the merchant in these efforts. It contains a variety and assortment of articles, all of which should make excellent presents. These are placed in as convenient a form as space will allow, and customers, who take the leisure to glance over them, will very likely be assisted in making their decision. Articles that they might never otherwise have thought of will be brought to their notice and an opportunity will be given the merchant to at least describe his goods. The latter may receive from the list useful hints in making up his stock, as articles are often overlooked in the hurry of making a selection:

Basket of Fruit, as Oranges, Lemons, Apples.
Box of Table Figs.
Box of Dates.
Box of Table Raisins.
Box of Candies, as Bon-Bons, Chocolates, etc.
Plum Pudding.
Fine Condiments, as French Cherries, Stuffed Mushrooms, Almonds.
Wines and Liquors.
Fruit Syrups in Fancy Decanters.
Packages of Mince Meats, etc.
Jars of Jams, Jellies, etc.
Fowl, as Turkeys, Ducks, Geese, Chickens.
Packages of High-Grade Teas, Coffees, Chocolates.
Christmas Cakes.
Nuts of all kinds.
Bottles of Unfermented Wine.
Boxes of Cigars.
Pipes.
Packages of Tobacco.
Crystallized Fruits.

TRADE DISCOUNTS.

SEVERAL trade journals have recently published articles on the amount the merchant would save if he discounted his bills promptly, even if he had to borrow the money to pay them from the banks. But some people have taken a different view of the matter, and in The St. Paul Trade, Minor C. Badger writes on the subject as follows:

I have been considerably amused by the articles published at different times in regard to the amount saved by discounting bills, and especially at the rate of interest. Take the hat and cap line, for instance, with terms 10 days less 6 per cent., 30-5, 60-4 four months net. If he discounts in 10 days at 6 per cent. he gets $6 for the use of $100 for 110 days, or at the rate of 19 9-10 per cent. per annum. If he takes the 30 day discount he gets 5 per cent. for 90 days, or 20 per cent. per annum. If he takes the 60 day discount then he gets 24 per cent. for his money, which is the best rate of interest he can get, and, of course, would pay him better than the 10 day discount at a trifle less than 20 per cent. per annum.

But let us see how it works in actual business. Theory is all right sometimes, but actual workings are different. As a general proposition, the average country merchant buys of his hat house two bills a year, one in the spring and one in the fall, so that he can get this discount only twice a year—not three times at 6 per cent., nor four times at 5 per cent., nor five times at 4 per cent., but only twice, no matter which discount he takes; so that while 4-60 is figuring at 24 per cent. per annum, he only gets 8 per cent.; and while the 6-10 figures scant 20 per cent. per annum, he really gets 12 per cent.

While figures do not lie they are sometimes very misleading, and the man who figures on 20 per cent. interest by discounting his hat bills, will come to the conclusion that some one was mistaken.

Now, as to the actual amount saved; any country merchant can "work" his jobber fot 60 days' extra time without interest by simply taking it when the bill is due, so that in borrowing of his banker he must take that into consideration. In this part of the world the bankers are in it for what they can make out of it, and 12 per cent. is not at all bad for one who wants to borcow; 10 per cent. is a very reasonable rate, and is just a fair average. So he borrows at 10 per cent. and gets at the most 12 per cent., making a profit of only 2 per cent. per annum in the transaction, an amount too small to look at considering the trouble to get the loan.

CALIFORNIAN FRUITS.

Arrangements have been made with S. H. Ewing & Sons by the Co-operative Packers' Association, of Fresno, Cal., to handle the latter's fruits on this market, and orders have already been taken for four or five cars. Owing to the extra fine quality of the fruit, however, the association has only been able to ship a mixed car, which was quickly disposed of before it arrived. But Ewing & Sons have another car coming, composed of choice seeded raisins, apricots, prunes, standard loose muscatels and fine Muir peaches.

SIMCOE XMAS MARKET.

The town of Simcoe will hold its annual Christmas market on Tuesday and Wednesday, December 23 and 24, 1902, at which over $700 will be given away in prizes. These markets have been run in Simcoe for some eight years, and the enterprise is growing steadily since its commencement. The prizes offered are for poultry, butter, eggs, apples, celery, honey, maple syrup, butternuts, walnuts, etc. We refer our readers to the advertisement on another page.

CULTIVATING TEA IN THE UNITED STATES.

THE United States some day may be growing tea on a large scale. For several years the Agricultural Department at Washington has been experimenting with the growing of tea, and at Pinehurst, Summerville, S.C., over 100 acres of tea were cultivated last year. A factory well equipped for carrying on work on a commercial scale and accurate scientific experiements is established in connection with this garden. As a result of improved methods this year better grades of tea were turned out than the year before.

The yield of tea in these gardens this year amounted to 9,000 lb., against 4,300 lb. the year before. Some of the tea grown was of good quality and yielded well, while some gardens produced tea of poor quality and small yield.

To further experiment a tea farm will be shortly started in Texas where cheap labor can be secured, provided that a suitable location be found with land adapted to the growing of tea. It is, however, too early yet to predict whether tea can be grown on a paying basis in the North American Republic, but it is believed that by careful and judicious management suitable profits can be realized from the production to encourage extensive planting of the article in many parts of the Southern States.

"SQUANDERED." The money you save (?) between the cost of an ordinary "quite as good as the "SALADA" average" brand of Tea and Ceylon is usually a trifling sum, but is invariably pure wastefulness. The trifle is only saved in your mind, not in reality, all such "so-called" savings doing more injury to your trade in a week than can be repaired in a year.

The public are too wide awake nowadays to continue the acceptance of anything but the very best, and all efforts to the contrary will prove disastrously unavailing—"Mark our words."

"SALADA" Ceylon Tea has become famous by reason of its merit.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, December 11, 1902.

GROCERIES.

TRADE is active this week in all lines of groceries. Most of the deliveries on outstanding contracts have been made and the trade is now busy with rush orders for all lines of Christmas goods that have to be shipped at once to their destinations. New crop nuts are now on the market and there has been an advance of 2c. in Brazil nuts, ½c. in Formagetta almonds and 8½c. in Grenoble walnuts. The jobbers report an active inquiry for these and are busy filling contracts. Canned salmon has been moving out with considerable freedom for the time of the year. There is a good demand for candied peels and foreign dried fruits of almost every description. Teas are active, particularly Indian and Ceylon blacks and greens, and the prices are firmer on account of the rising tendency of the primary markets, but no local advances have recently been made. Canadian refined sugars are unchanged in prices since our last report and the demand is light. The movement from second hands is slow, being only for actual requirements.

CANNED GOODS.

As is to be expected at this time of the year there is little movement in vegetables. There are still a few orders coming forward for peas and corn, and tomatoes are held at $1.60, but are not attracting much attention at that figure. At second hands, considering the high prices of the article, there have been for the most part satisfactory sales. Both peas and corn continue at their previously quoted values, and are moderately active for the season. The high prices of meats are probably responsible for the unusual demand for salmon and other lines of fish for the time of the year, and the prices of these goods are firmly held. Herring are strong owing to a shortage in the catch of the fish on the Atlantic coast and advances may be made in prices before long, should the present light catches continue.

COFFEES.

There is a fairly active demand for low and medium grades of Java and Mocha and green Rios, and the market is firm in tone throughout the list without any quotable change in prices. The prices of coffee abroad advanced slightly, both for actual supplies and contracts. We quote: Green Rios, No. 7, 3¾c.; No. 6, 8c.; No. 5, 8¼c.; No. 4, 9c.; No. 3, 10 to 12c. per lb.

NUTS.

New crop nuts have been arriving from the primary markets during the week and jobbers have been busy filling contracts. There are quite a number of orders coming in for immediate shipment for the holiday trade. The prices have advanced 2c. for Brazils, ½c. for Formagetta almonds and ½c. for Grenoble walnuts. Tarragona almonds and shelled almonds are both quoted firmer on the primary markets. The primary market on Sicily shelled almonds was reported a little easier by recent cable advices.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

A good sorting demand continues for rice. Tapioca also is active. Advices from the South, where the weather conditions have been unfavorable for the gathering of the new crop of rice, state that an improvement in the weather had taken place there and that the prospects were now more favorable for saving a larger percentage of the crop than was recently expected, but the quality of the rice will be chiefly low grade.

SPICES.

The spice market has been active, the demand for black and white pepper, ginger, mace, nutmegs and cloves being good. The prices are steady and unchanged.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There has been a considerable call for black strap molasses. The brighter grades of syrups have also been active.

SUGAR.

In the local sugar market there has been no change to note since last week. The week, however, has not been without feature in outside markets, which have shown increased strength. Raw cane sugars in New York are dearer by 1-16c. per lb. than was reported last week in our editorial columns, being now quoted at 4c., duty paid, New York. The market is strong on this basis with light offerings. 88 deg. raw beet sugars have steadily improved in value and are fully 6d. higher for the week, the quotations now being 8s. 6d. f.o.b. Hamburg.

In New York the prices of refined advanced 10c. per 100 lb. on Tuesday, the 9th inst., thus making an appreciation of ¼c. per lb. from the recent lowest point, against a net gain of 15c. per 100 lb. in quotations for Canadian refined.

The local demand continues light and the movement from second hands is slow, being only for actual requirements. The situation, however, is not without interest, and there are those who look for an early return to conditions more in keeping with those on the outside markets.

For the week the receipts of raws at the four United States ports were 24,998 tons, the meltings being 31,000 tons, and the total stock in the four ports was 182,711 tons, against 188,713 tons last week, and 130,540 tons last year.

TEAS.

The local tea market is firm in tone and buying has been brisk during the week in Indian and Ceylon greens and blacks. There has been a larger percentage of the greens sold this year than usual, probably owing to the scarcity of the China and Japan article. Nothing is available on the spot in Indian pekoe Souchongs at 6¼ to 6½d., and foreign advices state that 7½d. is the price asked for merchantable stuff, and that the buying would be lively if 7 or 7¼d. would be taken for Indian pekoes or pekoe Souchongs. Good Ceylon pekoes were not avaialable at 8½d., but first-class goods might have been obtained at 9d. Orange pekoes from 1 to 1s. 3d. were wanted and obtainable only in a few cases. The prices were altogether in buyers' favor. Green Indians and Ceylons were saleable at 7⅜ to 9½d., and few goods were offering. Fancy green Indians were worth 1s. 3d., and a few were offering. Later despatches say that the Japan and Indian markets are closed and no Ceylons nor Indians, no matter how poor, were lower than 7 to 7½d. Mail advices from London, Eng., report firm prices for all the grades of Indian teas, not only for the common, but also for the medium and better liquoring grades. Later, the sales evinced a quieter tone. Further fractional advances were generally recorded in Ceylons and more attention was shown to medium and better liquoring teas, which sold at dearer rates. Finer kinds were, perhaps, hardly as well competed for as before.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

CURRANTS.—Recent cable advices from Greece report a somewhat firmer market there on currants. The local demand is keeping up well. We quote: Fine Filiatras, 5½c. up; Patras, 6¼ to 6⅜c. and Vostizzas, 7 to 8c. per lb.

VALENCIA RAISINS.—The bulk of the heavy buying in Valencia raisins is over, but jobbers are busy forwarding numerous refill orders to various parts of the country. Fine off-stalk and selected layers are scarce and some jobbers are cleaned out of them. Prices are: Fine off-stalk, 7 to 8c.; selected, 8 to 9c. and selected layers, 9 to 10c. per lb.

SULTANA RAISINS.—There are large stocks of these in the hands of jobbers. The demand is fair. We quote 9 to 13c. per lb.

GREEN FRUITS.

Trade in all lines of green fruits is active and a buoyant tone dominates the market, keeping up the prices well. Large shipments of oranges continue to arrive daily and are sold out almost as fast as they come in. Mexicans and Valencias are favorites. Californians are just commencing to come in and are a little on the green side yet, the crop this year being late. Pineapples are scarce and dear, with hardly any demand for them. Apples continue moving out steadily. The first Messina lemons will be on the market in a few days and the price will probably be $3.50 per box. Quotations are: Californian navel oranges, $3.75 to $4 per box; Florida oranges, $3.75; Mexicans, $2.25 to $2.50; Jamaicas, $2.75 to $3 in boxes and $5.50 in barrels; Valencia oranges, $4.50 to $6.75 per box, according to sizes; Tangerines, $4.50 per half-strap; pineapples, $4 to $4.50 per crate; grape fruit, $3.50 to $4 per box; Malaga grapes, $5.50 to $7 per bbl.; winter apples, $2.25 to $3 per bbl.; fancy Jersey cranberries, $10.50 per bbl.; Cape Cod, $9.50 per bbl.; Nova-Scotian, $7.50 per bbl.; sweet potatoes, $4.50 per bbl.; bananas, $1.25 to $1.75 per bunch for ordinary, and $2.25 to $2.50 for large bunches; Californian lemons, $4 to $4.50 per case; Messina, $3.50 per box; cucumbers, $1.75 to $2.00 per doz.; Californian tomatoes, $3.50 per crate.

DRIED AND EVAPORATED APPLES.—There has been little movement in evaporated apples so far this fall and the offerings of dried are meeting with hardly any response. We quote 6½ to 7c. for evaporated and 4c. per lb. for dried.

HONEY.—There is a moderate demand for honey. We quote: Extracted clover, in 60-lb. tins, 9c.; in glass jars, small sizes, 95c. to $1.85 per doz.; combs, $1.50 to $2 per doz.

LIVE POULTRY.—The arrivals of live poultry are fair and the prices are firm. The principal export trade is being done in chickens, the local market being now capable of absorbing at good prices all the turkeys, geese and ducks coming forward. We quote: Turkeys, 8c.; geese, 5c.; ducks, 7c.; chickens, young, 7 to 8c. and old, 5 to 6c. per lb.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, December 11, 1902.

GROCERIES.

THE movement of goods from the wholesale houses just now is very active, some houses reporting the most active holiday demand in their history. Several important changes in prices have been made this week, among them a drop of 10c. in sugars. Coal oil has also gone up another cent, and may go higher. Monday was observed as a holiday by most people in Quebec Province, as a consequence of which business on the two or three succeeding days was all the more active. The country roads are in better condition, and except on one or two very cold days, visiting buyers have been numerous in the city.

SUGAR.

On the 3rd instant all sugars were reduced 10c. for Quebec and Ontario only. This change was made in view of the importation of a considerable quantity of American refined sugars, but since then an advance of 10c. took place on the New York market, and this market has become stronger in sympathy, though no actual change in prices was made. At the lower prices an active business was done here. Granulated sugar now sells at $3.80 for No. 1 and $3.60 for No. 2; both yellows at $3.15 to $3.75.

TEAS.

There has not been much change in the tea market. The position of almost all teas is still strong. Ceylon low grades have continued to advance and are now about 1½c. higher than last week. The higher grades, however, have not changed in price, but are still firm. Green teas are also very firm. Japans are still high and very firm. Some arrivals are reported on this market during the week, and one large house announces that it will have sufficient to supply all demands from retailers.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The movement in corn syrups, though gradually improving, is still quiet, and no quotable changes are reported. We quote: In bbls., 3c.; in half-barrels, 3⅛c.; in quarter-barrels, 3¾c.; in 38½-lb. pails, $1.40 and in 25-lb. pails, $1.10. As to molasses there has been little or no change. Some severe competition is reported in this market on the part of a Halifax concern. Barbados molasses is quoted at 24 to 25c.; New Orleans, 16 to 17c.; Antigua, 24c. and Porto Rico, 38c.

SPICES.

On the local market the prices have remained unchanged, though the tone of the market is firm. Advices from New York state that the market for all lines is firm, but quiet. Mace is in very small supply. Prices follow: Nutmegs, 35c. to 55c. per lb., as to size; penang mace, 45 to 50c. per lb., as to quality; pimento, ground, 12½ to 15c.; cloves, 15 to 25c.; pepper, ground, black, 17 to 22c., according to grade; white, 25 to 27c.; ginger, whole Cochin, 15 to 17c.; Japan, 13 to 14c.; Jamaica, 16 to 20c.; Afghan, 12 to 13c.; ground Japan, 15c.; Cochin, 16 to 17c.; Jamaica, 20 to 22c.; and Afghan, 13 to 14c.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

There is no change. Business continues fairly good. We quote: B rice, in bags, $3.02½; in half-bags, $3.07½; in quarter-

BEANS.—The market remains quiet and no quotable change is reported. Prime sell at $2 per bushel, in carlots, and at $2.05 to $2.10 in small lots.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.—Business is still quiet. Prices, which are unchanged, are as follows: Syrup, in large tins, 70 to 80c.; small tins, 50 to 60c.; in wood, 5 to 5½c. per lb. Sugar, 8½ to 10c. per lb.

ASHES.—The market for potash is entirely without change. We quote: First pots, $4.35 to $4.40; seconds, $3.60 and pearls, $6.25 per 100 lb.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

GRAIN.—Oats have declined in price about 1½c. There is a fair local demand at present, and some inquiry is reported from New York, without, however, much business resulting. Peas are unchanged in price but firmer. Rye is lower. Buckwheat and corn have also gone down. We quote: Rye, 49c.; peas, 73½; corn, 66c.; buckwheat, 51c.; feed barley, 41c.; oats, 35½ to 36c. ex-store.

FEED.—The prices are still firm but no actual change is reported. The market is active and offerings continue on the light side. Our quotations are as follows: Manitoba bran, $18.00, and shorts, $20; Ontario bran, $17 to $18, shorts, $19 to $20; mouillie, $23 to $30, according to quality.

OATMEAL.—There is no change on this market, which continues quiet at steady prices. The price of rolled oats, in small lots, is $4.60 per barrel and $2.25 per bag; and in carlots, $4.30 per barrel and $2 to $2.05 per bag.

BALED HAY.—An active trade is doing with both local buyers and United States buyers. No quotable changes are reported and prices are as follows: No. 1 timothy, $9 to $10; No. 2, $8 to $8.75; clover, $6.50 to $7 per ton in carlots.

RAW FURS.

Business in raw furs this week has not been particularly active, offerings having been somewhat lighter than a week ago. There is, however, a fair trade doing at the prices we here quote, except, of

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, N.B., December 8, 1902.

BUSINESS is active. The retail stores are beginning to feel the holiday demand. St. John is proud of her retail grocery stores; we feel sure they will compare favorably with any in Canada. In markets, burning oil is again higher, and values in all lines are firmly held. There are, of course, one or two weak points, such as evaporated apples and onions. Hops are very much higher and likely to advance still further. The sale here is limited. Cream of tartar is holding firm and the stock is small. The winter-port business is very active and shipments of cattle at present are very large.

OILS.—In burning oil there is a further advance and the market is very firm and higher prices would not be a matter of surprise. In lubricating oil there is a good business for the season. In paint oils the prices we quote are for spot stock. The market for spring delivery is weak and large orders are being booked at 15 to 20c. below the spot price of linseed oil. Turpentine is unchanged. In cod oil supplies are in and the market is firmly held.

SALT.—In Liverpool coarse salt the market is now being supplied by the regular weekly steamers. It is shipped both from Liverpool and Manchester, or rather on the steamers coming from both these ports. The regular winter-port boats are charging rather higher freights than the outside steamers, consequently prices are firmly held. In fine salt the prices are unchanged from the slight advance of a few weeks ago. Our quotations are as follows: Liverpool coarse, 55 to 60c.; English factory-filled, 95c. to $1; Canadian fine, $1.50 per bag; cheese and butter salt, $2.25 to $2.35 per bbl.; 5-lb. bags, $3.10 per bbl.; 10-lb. bags, $2.85 per bbl.; 20-lb. wood boxes, 25c. each; 10-lb. wood boxes, 15c. each; cartons, $1.90 to $2 per case; English bottled salt, $1.25 to $1.30 per dozen; mineral rock salt, 60c. per 100 lb. (Selected lumps.)

CANNED GOODS.—Some American tomatoes have been received and they turn out better in quality than some expected. It means, however, high prices and a much lighter sale than usual. In corn and peas, which it is expected will find an increased demand, prices are very firmly held and higher figures are expected. In fruits there is a fair sale. Singapore pineapples have more attention here. Gallon apples are quite a full stock and the prices are firmer. Cherries are in light supply. In salmon rather firmer prices rule. In meats, spot business is dull. Domestic canned fish are unchanged.

GREEN FRUITS.—The dealers are very busy. Some particularly fine Jamaica oranges have been received. In Valencia oranges business is not large. Prices are unchanged. It is early for this fruit. Lemons find a steady sale at even figures. In apples, for best stock, American and Ontario goods hold the market. There is a wide range in prices. The outside fruit has, however, prevented extreme figures. In grapes there is quite an active demand for Malaga stock. In sweet potatoes the stock does not seem to stand up. Cranberries show a good sale at a wide range in prices, imported being quite high. A few bananas are imported, but at this season it is a very small business.

DRIED FRUITS.—Dealers are very busy. The slow arrival of goods, particularly Californian seeded raisins, has put our buyers to great inconvenience. Some quite large arrivals this week have relieved the situation. There have been large receipts of loose muscatels, showing quite an advance. Prunes are easy with fair stocks held. Evaporated apricots and peaches are a light sale. In figs the sale has been large. Dates have also sold very freely, prices being low. Peels are seasonable goods, but stock here is not large. Evaporated apples are easy and the market is well supplied. The sale of nuts has been large, even at the full figures. Onions are dull and prices lower.

DAIRY PRODUCE.—Eggs are firmer and have an improved sale. Dealers are particular about quality, and there is quite a range in price. Butter is firm, but fair stocks are held and quite a little is offering from the country. Cheese is firmly held, but the local business is not large.

SUGAR.—Dealers hold quite large stocks. Market is firm and a further advance is daily expected. The past season has shown the best profits to dealers they have had for years.

MOLASSES.—There is a good steady demand. Stocks here are not heavy and dealers are holding for rather higher prices. Except a little Barbados, Porto Rico is the grade offered.

FISH.—Business is rather quiet. In dry cod the price is unchanged, though the market is hardly as firm. Pollock are firm, as stock is light, but this is not a large market. Smoked herring are held firm at the high prices, and the stock is light, but this is not a large market. Smoked herring are held firm at the high prices and the stock is very small. Dealers in pickled gaspereaux, or "Alewives," as they are called, are rather blue this season, as prices rule low. This is quite a large business here. Pickled herring are unchanged. Finnan haddies move freely. We quote: Haddies, 4 to 5c.; smoked herring, 12 to 12½c.; fresh haddock and cod, 2 to 2½c.; boneless fish, 4 to 5c.; pollock, $1.60 to $1.70 per 100 lb.; pickled herring, $2 to $2.15 per half-barrel; dry cod, $3.50 to $3.55; pickled shad, per half-barrel, $6.

FLOUR, FEED AND MEAL.—In Manitoba flour prices are unchanged. Ontario flour is a little easier. Feed is very scarce. There is a good demand and the prices are high. Cornmeal continues low. In oatmeal full prices are asked, and there is a fair demand. Oats are high. Beans are rather firmer, but the market seems unsettled. Peas are high and scarce: We quote: Manitoba flour, $4.75 to $4.80; best Ontario, $4.20 to $4.25; medium, $3.95 to $4; oatmeal, $4.50 to $4.60; cornmeal, $3 to $3.10; middlings, in small lots, $26 to $28; oats, 40 to 44c.; handpicked beans, $2.35 to $2.40; prime, $2.25 to $2.50; yellow eye beans, $2.80 to $3; split peas, $4.55 to $5.25; barley, $4.25 to $4.40; hay, $9 to $10.

Honesty Goes Hand in Hand With Prosperity.

If you are not honest you may prosper for a short time, but your fall will be swift and sure.

If you are honest and find that you do not prosper your case will stand investigation, and in nine cases out of ten the reason the honest grocer does not prosper is because he uses old and infirm scales in his business, and when he thinks he is selling a pound of sugar or rice, or anything else, he really is parting with about a pound and a quarter for the price of a pound.

Are you prospering as you should?

If not, it might be a good thing to look into the scale question. We have a Ball-Bearing Computing Scale which is HONEST. We guarantee this scale and sell it on easy terms.

LICENSED VICTUALLERS' MEET.

AN important meeting of the Licensed Victuallers' Association of Montreal was held on December 3, when, in addition to a large amount of business being transacted, the election of officers for the ensuing year took place. The result of the elections was the unanimous re election of the old officers and directors, who are :

Hon. President—Andrew J. Dawes.
President—Lawrence A. ilson.
Vice-President—Amedee Blondin.
Secretary—L. A. Lapointe.
Treasurer—Victor Bougie.
Directors—H. Dubois, Louis Poire, F. L. Ethier, V. Lemay, B. Lepine, Jrs. McCarrey.
Advisers—Ald. H. Laporte, Ald. H. A. Ekers, Ald. C. Robillard, Ald. Jos. Lamarche, M. Davis, Thos. Kinsella, J. E. Quintal.

Several amendments to the license laws were proposed, among others, one to prevent men who had been arrested for being drunk on Sundays from giving evidence in court as to where they got the liquor, as many of these men, in the hope of having their sentence lightened, gave any name that came into their heads when they really did not know where they had obtained it. Complaint was made of the manner in which certain officers engaged informers to try and entrap liquor dealers.

The treasurer's report showed a good balance on the right side of the ledger, and also a large increase in the membership. The following new members were admitted to the association: H. Girouard, 111 St. Henry street; F. Durand, 260 Notre Dame; D. J. Ouimet, 51 Chaboillez Square; Jules Durand, 249a St. Lawrence; R. Lamoreux, 1235 Ontario; F. X. A. ### If You Have Money to Burn

Why! Go burn it. There is 10 times more satisfaction in burning money than in losing it in driblets, through carelessness of clerks, or disputed accounts. Who that has "pass-book" customers, has not had accounts disputed and partially repudiated? The best way to avoid all complications and misunderstandings is as follows:

IF A MAN WANTS CREDIT

for $10, give him a $10 Allison Coupon Book, charge him with $10, and there you are. No trouble at all. If he buys a plug of tobacco for ten cents, just tear off a ten-cent coupon—that's all. And so on for all his purchases up to limit of the book. NO PASS BOOK. NO WRITING. NO TIME LOST. NO KICKING. There are other Coupon Books, of course, but why not have the best? # Tobaccos, Cigars, and Smokers' Accessories

A DEPARTMENT FOR RETAIL MERCHANTS.

CIGARS FOR CHRISTMAS TRADE.

FOR the average smoker there is no more acceptable Christmas present than a box of cigars. Grocers should bear this in mind, and through interior and window displays and advertisements remind their customers of the fact. There may be some grocers and general merchants who are not handling tobacco in any shape or form, but there is still time between now and the holidays to secure a stock of cigars and make the necessary arrangements to bring them to the attention of the public.

Any manufacturer of cigars would only be too willing to give retailers information as to prices and suggestions as to how trade may be secured. A card to any of the manufacturers whose advertisements appear in this issue would bring a ready response.

It would, however, be necessary to act promptly if the benefit of the Christmas trade is to be secured.

AN INJUNCTION GRANTED.

A case exciting considerable interest in the tobacco trade has been decided by Mr. Justice Trenholme in Montreal in favor of the Granda Hermanos Y. Ca. A former partner, Frank Granda, received $14,500 for his share in the business, of which sum $10,000 was for his good-will and agreement to refrain from competing with his old firm.

The judge decided that his identity had been proven in connection with another concern carried on under the name of Jose Granda, and, characterizing his conduct as "a gross violation of the law," issued an injunction restraining him from taking any further part in the business now carried on under the name of Jose Granda, St. Peter street, Montreal.

CIGARS FOR XMAS PRESENTS.

J. M. Fortier, Limited, of Montreal, manufacturer of cigars, has this season put up his best brands in Xmas parcels, suitable for wholesale mercantile establishments to distribute as presents among their customers or employes. These goods are put up in very attractive form, in lots from 10 to 100, with any name that may be desired printed on each box. The prices range from $35 to $140 per thousand. Samples will be sent free on application to any authorized manager or member of a firm.

BRITISH TOBACCO TRUST PLANS.

A despatch from Richmond, Va., says: "Rumors are current here to the effect that the American headquarters of The Imperial Tobacco Co., of Great Britain and Ireland, which are located here, will be abolished after this season and that the big British Trust will either resume its old method of securing tobacco through commission men or will effect some arrangement with The American Tobacco Co. whereby the two can work in conjunction in the purchase of the raw weed. No definite confirmation of the rumors was obtainable at the offices of the Imperial."

IN THEIR NEW QUARTERS.

The Erie Tobacco Co. are now established in their new and commodious quarters in Windsor, Ont., and their business is again in full blast. They are proud of the increasing demand for the "Queen's Navy" and their travellers report a more than satisfactory holiday trade. Mr. Youell, the well-known representative of the concern, is again happy at having the opportunity of sounding the praise of the "Queen's Navee."

NOTES OF THE TOBACCO TRADE.

The principals of The Houde Co. were in Montreal last week in connection with the Tobacco Commission.

General McAlpin, president of The McAlpin Tobacco Co., was a guest at the Queen's Hotel, Toronto, last week.

E. B. Stewart, representative of The Consumers' Tobacco Co., of Leamington, reports business as booming in the western part of the Province.

Mr. McKay, of The Chatham Planet, is as usual enthusiastically optimistic as to the prospects of tobacco and everything else in the good old County of Kent.

The enterprise of The Erie Tobacco Co. in erecting their large and commodious drying-house at Ruthven is much appreciated by the farmers and growers in the vicinity.

The tobacco growers of the County of Essex are beginning to harvest their crop of 1902. The leaf is in excellent condition as to color, but owing to the wet season it lacks the gum quality that was characteristic of the plant last year.

Two Standard Brands

The reason why I wish to include one or two hundred each of my "Pharaoh" 10c., and my "Pebble" 5c. Cigars in that "first or trial order," that I have been telling you about, is because, at the prices, they are the best sellers in all Canada.

The quality and workmanship in these two brands has set the standard by which many dealers make sales, claiming that their Cigars are just as good as the "Pharaoh" or the "Pebble." Of course this isn't so—nothing can possibly be as good as the original article.

Sometimes you lose Business

without knowing it. The consumer is pretty well posted, but does not always know the names of Brands, but the consumer does know a good article when using it, and comes back to the store where the best goods are sold. You may not always be asked for ST. LAWRENCE GRANULATED, but it is the most economical Sugar to be had. On account of its fine even grain there is less waste than in any other make. The consumer may not know that he is using but all the same he appreciates quality and gives repeat orders to the merchant supplying him with the finest Sugar.

A PEACH PEELING MACHINE.

C. J. Vernon, of Fresno, Cal., is the inventor of a peach-peeling machine which, it is said in a Californian paper, will prove invaluable to the canning industry. The machine has been subjected to a practical test at the San Jose plant of The California Fruit Canners, and it has been pronounced a success. The capacity of the plant has been largely increased by the introduction of this machine. The work is done without waste and without marring the round surfaces of the fruit.

EXPORTS FOR WEST INDIES.

PICKFORD & BLACK steamers are getting good freights for their Windward Island service at present. All the outward steamers from Halifax are being well filled and homeward cargoes are much larger than in any previous season. In the latter case the condition is due to increased sugar purchases at Demerara and other places by Canadian refineries and it is hoped that next season will witness a great expansion in the imports of this article.

"We are getting about all the freight we can handle of a certain class," said Mr. Hensley to The Maritime Merchant, "but would like to see a greater variety. We have made a special effort these several years to interest Canadian manufacturers in the West Indies as a field for their products, but so far have not induced them to do very much. They nearly all admit that there is a chance for a profitable business, but that the home demand is so great at the present time they find it impossible to take up with foreign trade. Of course we are in hopes that these conditions will not be permanent, as nearly all the manufacturers are increasing their output, and, then, again, new people are starting who will compete for trade in the home field, thus making it necessary for others to look for business in outside markets. We think, therefore, that, though slow in coming, when once begun, sales to the West Indies will develop rapidly. We have a standing offer to manufacturers with regard to passenger rates for travelling representatives. We offer them a reduction of 25 per cent. on regular prices, or, in other words, a man can make the round trip to Demerara, 42 days, and have first-class accommodation and meals for $97.50, and will have time enough to do business at Bermuda, Trinidad, all the Windward Islands and Demerara. This just about covers the cost of carrying him, but we consider it worth while, as we are very anxious to develop the export business in all classes of Canadian goods." Mr. Hensley reports numerous inquiries from people who purpose taking a cruise to the tropics this winter. Some are going to remain over a few weeks at Trinidad, and others will come back on the steamer on which they go out. The trip is certainly a delightful one and all who can afford the time should take it."

A CORNER FOR CLERKS.

MEN of great achievement are characterized by their ability to grasp situations quickly and to seize opportunities, says a writer in Success. Their vision is clear ; they understand conditions thoroughly; they act without hesitancy or doubt of results; hence, in most instances, they carry their purposes to a successful issue.

Those who accomplish great things do not do so by unusual straining or an exhausting output of mental or physical energy. J. Pierpont Morgan, for example, in the execution of his colossal schemes, does not seem to exert any great effort. He achieves his ends with apparent ease because of the lucidity of his ideas and his strong grasp upon situations.

The steel tools driven by the great cams in our shipbuilding yards go through solid steel plates with as much ease, seemingly, as the fingers of a cook go through yielding dough, because of the huge balance wheels whose mighty momentum, without jarring or straining, overcomes all obstacles. So, great workers compass vast results by the momentum of their intellects, their clear comprehension of conditions, and their ready mastery of complicated situations.

Such minds as these are self-contained, self-reliant, confident. They do not buttonhole every friend or acquaintaince they chance to meet, and ask his advice or opinion in regard to their plans. They do not consult subordinates or equals ; they simply look over the ground and study it carefully, as a skillful general studies his plan of the battleground before he leads his army to action, and then they act.

A noticeable example of this stamp of mind is General Kitchener, one of the most remarkable personalities of our time. Silent, stern, immovable, when a purpose is once formed, this hero of many hard-won battles is a sphinx-like type of concentrated power. He forms his plans unaided and executes them with the precision and force of a huge engine. His chief of staff was the only one who knew anything of his intended movements when he started one day on an important expedition during the recent war in South Africa. He simply ordered a locomotive, a guard van, and a carload of "Tommies." Orders were given to clear the track. Everything had to stand aside for him. No warning was allowed to be telegraphed ahead. He arrived on the spot without previous notice, and no general in the army knew when or where he might appear.

Another incident of his South-African campaign is strikingly characteristic of the man. About six o'clock one morning he paid an unheralded visit to the Mount Nelson Hotel, Cape Town, scanned the register, and found there the names of officers who should have been on duty. Without a word to anyone, he went personally to the rooms of the offenders and left the following notice: "A special train leaves for the front at 10 a.m.; the troopship leaves at 4 p.m. for England; you have your choice, sir." He would listen to no excuses, no parleying, no apologizing; that was his ultimatum, and every officer knew what he meant.

He wields an absolute power over those under him, because of his positiveness, his self-possession, his consciousness of being equal to any emergency, whatever it may be. Everything about him is indicative of strength, largeness, and breadth of make-up. Free from petty vanity or any desire for praise or flattery, he has a frank contempt for all social distinctions and frivolities. His personality has all the impressiveness of some great natural force, working out its purpose silently, effectively, and with the certainty of doom.

The conquering General is not an endearing character, it is true, his subordinates fearing rather than loving him ; neither is he, any more than that other forceful character, J. Pierpont Morgan, a model type of man in every respect ; but both men possess in an eminent degree those qualities of self-confidence, concentration, firmness, promptness, decision and ability to grasp sitkations which everyone who would be successful must cultivate, the measure of one's success and ability to grasp situations which he develops these indispensable qualities.

Men who have a wide grasp of intellect and firmness of decision are always positive. They know what they want and are never on the fence. They do not waste their time shilly-shallying, seeking advice, balancing opinions, or splitting hairs. They decide upon a course of action, and then pursue it without hesitation or wavering.

A TEA FIRM'S NEW WAREHOUSE.

T. H. Estabrooks, St. John, N.B., the packer of "Red Rose" tea, has purchased the Wilson and Scovil lots on Mill street, opposite Rankine's biscuit factory; and G. Ernest Fairweather, architect, is preparing plans for a five or six-storey brick warehouse to cover the whole of the two lots. The price paid for the lots is not stated, but it is understood to have been a large figure.

When the new warehouse is erected Mr. Estabrooks will have three times the space he at present has in the big warehouse on North Wharf, and he will have one of the largest and best equipped tea-blending and packing establishments in Canada.

Two and a half years ago Mr. Estabrooks occupied only about half the warehouse to which he had moved on North Wharf. The new departure is an important event in the Canadian tea trade, and the new warehouse will be a notable addition to the big commercial structures of St. John.

AFTER THE SHUTTERS ARE UP.

IRATE Individual : Confound it ; waiter, didn't I tell you I was in a hurry, and only wanted one egg ? Why the dickens did you bring me two ?

Waiter (rather hurt) : I thought as you was in a hurry, sir, I'd bring two, 'cos one of 'em might be bad !

The proprietor of a German menagerie keeps caged together a lion, a tiger, a wolf and a lamb, which he labels "The Happy Family." When asked confidentially how long these animals had lived together, he answered :

This story was told by the prototype of Captain Joe, the hero of F. Hopkinson Smith's novel, "Caleb West."

An Irishman once applied to him for a job on board his ship.

"Well," said the Captain, "where are your recommendations ?"

"Shure, an' I haven't enny, Sur."

"Can't take you, then—got a German here with fine recommendations—have to give the job to him."

Pat begged so hard, however, that the Captain finally agreed to take him and the German both on a trial trip, the best man to have the permanent job.

They were well out at sea when a storm arose one day while Pat and the German were scrubbing the deck. A big wave came along and swept the German overboard with his bucket. Pat immediately picked up his bucket and started after the Captain, whom he found below.

"Well, Pat, what's the matter now ?"

"Faith, sur, ye know that German what had such foine ricommindations ?"

"Yes ; what of him ?"

"Begorra, sur, an' he's gore off with one o' your buckets."—New York Times.

TRADE MARK — GROCERS' WHOLESALE CO., LIMITED — UNITY AND QUALITY — HAMILTON. — REGISTERED

We offer the following, which are not only suitable for every-day use, but admirably adapted to bestow on a friend as a Christmas or New Year's Gift : Choicest Golden Tip Assam in chests, Ceylons in chests and half-chests, British India, including Darjeelings, in chests, Oolong and Scented Orange Pekoes in cads, China Young Hyson in half-chests, Japans in half-chests, and Ceylon Green Teas in chests.

The good housekeeper knows that the best goods are not only most satisfactory, but most economical, and the merchant or his assistant who urges upon the housekeeper a tea at 25c. per lb. when she is looking for and prepared to pay 75c. per lb., provided it is value, not only insults her intelligence, but proclaims his own.

The above goods are not only first-class quality, but the best value on the market. We will be glad to send samples of any of these to independent buyers who are looking for values.

GOOD ADVERTISING.

Notes by Miss Nora Laugher, Toronto.

MAKE up your mind to turn a new leaf and to put a bright ad. on that new leaf. Start the new year with the idea that you are going to handle the advertising proposition in an intelligent and businesslike way. See wherein business can be pushed most profitably, and put all the vigor and vim you can into advertising to bring that business. You have doubtless gained much experience in the past year, so that the foundation is well laid. Take stock mentally, as it were, look back to the many old mistakes and rectify them. Off with the old stereotyped formulae. Don't be conventional, stiff, unnatural in your wording of ads. any more than you would be in your talk. Talk to your neighbor. That's the finest and best way to convince him.

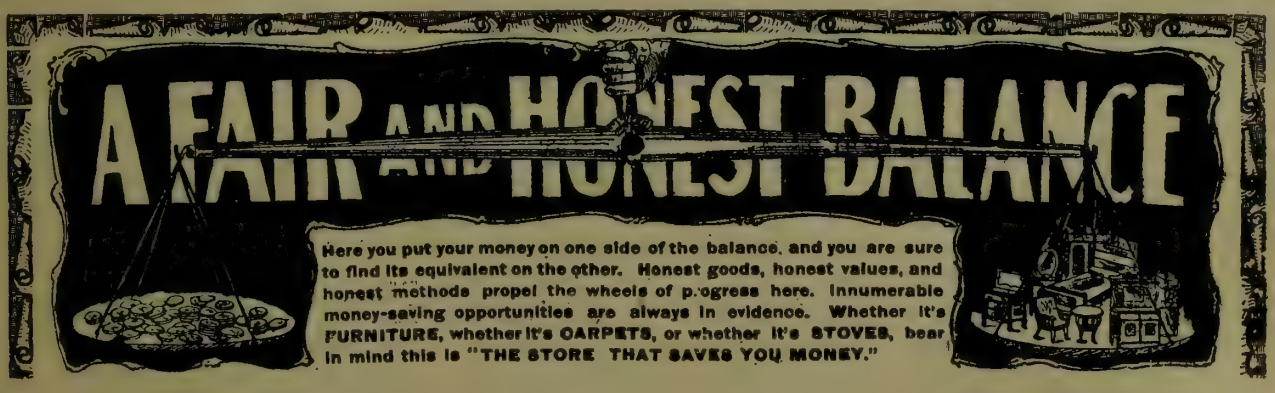
Off with the old, on with the new—new ideas, new announcements, progressive methods, more modern business plans. This is pre-eminently the age of progress, and the firm that lags and loiters in the race for business will soon be forced to drop out and the place will be filled by those with 20th century methods. You should start the new year with the intention of making a success with your advertising. Start early and stay persistently with it until the end.



Your advertising must be better this year than it was last year to be as good as it was last year, because everything in all lines is growing better and better. Every year must show an improvement. This is evolution. Remember nothing can stand still. If your advertising is not going forward it is going backward.

If 90 years ago advertising had been the science it is to-day, hundreds of people in the coal trade would have retained their wealth instead of losing it in their efforts to introduce anthracite coal. At that time a few blacksmiths in the Alleghany Mountains knew that the hard "stone coal," as it was called, could be burned, but people in Philadelphia, the likeliest market for the new product, could never succeed in getting the coals lit. Many barge loads of the stubborn stuff were sold, but as no one could make use of his purchase, the seller was arrested for fraud and the coal dumped into the street and used for macadam. So soft coal remained in favor. After much money and time had been wasted thus, a man who believed in advertising went to Philadelphia with a barge full of anthracite from his own mine, built fires in the common grates and stoves in public buildings, and invited everybody to come round and learn how the trick was done. Furthermore, he distributed circulars explaining the process. "Put wood under the coals, light it, then leave the fire alone," was his motto, for folks had sought to make hard coal blaze like pine kindlings. As a result, a few people began using the commodity and real merit got its reward—by advertising for it. Not how to burn coal, but how not to burn it is the burning question of to-day when coal and coal advertisements are at a premium.

Marvellous changes have been wrought in the business world during the last decade, and these changes well illustrate the passing of the middleman. Half a century ago the manufacturer marketed his product through the jobber; the jobber then sold to the wholesaler, the wholesaler to the retailer, and the retailer to the consumer. The producer and the consumer were as widely apart as though they belonged to different hemispheres. The manufacturer was crippled in a helpless, hopeless position, while the producer was at the mercy of the jobber. While the middleman is to-day hardly as extinct as the buffalo, yet producer and consumer have gravitated towards each other, and this change has been brought about solely by the advertisement. It is the little ad. that has exploded the old idea of big profits and small volume. Small profits and large volume are the chickens hatched by the good old advertising hen.

"Ring out the old—ring in the new," especially in the case of old-style or shop-worn goods. Wise merchants prefer to see their store full of bargain-hunters carrying off goods at cost rather than to give shelf-room year after year to old relics of bygone fashions. Move the goods on. Get into stock the goods there is demand for, but above all present them to the public by means of crisp, natural talk-to-people kind of advertising.

When an article of merchandise is criticized adversely it is well for the party not directly interested, but who may want supplies of this particular article, to get all the information he can, as frequently the adverse criticism comes from the superiority of the article, thereby interfering with the sale of some line of goods that have held popular opinion for a period, and the owners are apt to consider that a better article is nothing short of an infringement of their rights. If retail merchants ask Grocers' Wholesale Co., Limited, for samples of teas and coffees they will realize the cause of many adverse criticisms. Grocers' Wholesale Co., Limited, will be glad at all times to furnish samples and descriptions of such and attend to the buyers' request without delay.

EXPERIENCES OF A SEA VOYAGE TO THE TROPICS.

TWO days after leaving Halifax on a voyage to the West Indies the traveller encounters warm summer weather. He opens the windows of his cabin to let in the balmy breezes, and when he goes on deck without an overcoat he has no feeling of chill or discomfort. Bye-and-bye he reaches Bermuda and invests in a big straw hat and, perhaps, a few white waistcoats, unless perchance he has brought them with him. He spends the day at Bermuda in visiting at least two or three of the Island's great natural curiosities, and in the evening when the ship has put to sea he opens up the box of cigars which he bought at Hamilton, for less money than cigars of equal quality ever cost him before, and complacently settles himself in his own deck chair and talks about the enjoyment of it all to the man at his right or left. Yes, indeed, it is a delightful sensation and one that those of us who have passed through it will always remember as one of the delights of our lives.

For people who need a rest, or change of climate, and for the man or woman in search of a good time at a moderate expense, the round trip to Demerara and return by the ss. Orinoco of the Pickford & Black Line, which sails on December 29, and calls at 13 different ports, is all that could be desired.

The passenger list for this sailing is already well filled, and those who think of going, but have not yet booked their passage, should wire or write at onceto Pickford & Black, Halifax, N.S., or R. M. Melville, Toronto, Ont.

A MANUAL OF BUSINESS.

The Manual of Business. By Sydney P. Johnston. Daniel Stern, Publisher, Chicago.

This work is intended to prove a work of ready reference to business men in regard to many forms of business usage and correspondence employed by them in the conducting of their vocation. Instruction is given on the various details in connection with the office, and the general business forms, laws and regulations are fully dealt with. Valuable technical information is also given on various subjects directly related to the management of the office, the store and the factory. Also what will be useful to many a business man. Parliamentary rules and forms of resolutions are included in the matter of this book, and at the back are lists of business terms, business abbreviations and business maxims.

BRIGHTEN UP!

The Brunswick-Balk-Collender Co. are introducing to the Canadian trade their famous "Easybright" cleaner. This article commands a large sale in the United States where its merits have been well proved, and there is no question a proportionately large business can be done in it here as soon as it is once in the hands of consumers. The Davidson & Hay, Limited, have secured the wholesale agency for this polisher and cleaner, and before taking hold of it submitted "Easybright" to the severest possible tests, not only as to its merits as a cleaner and polish, but rather to find if it contained any injurious acids or ingredients which would detract from its value as a cleaner of fine fabrics. "Easybright" will clean almost everything without injury to the article upon which it is used—silver, plated ware, brass, glass, furniture, lace curtains, gloves, carpets, etc. As a window cleaner it is what every householder has been looking for in vain. For full particulars, sizes, prices, etc., write The Davidson & Hay, Toronto.

AND COLD STORAGE NEWS.

THE GUELPH WINTER FAIR.

THE Ontario Provincial Winter Fair opened at Guelph December 9, and lasted for two days. It was one of the most successful winter fairs yet held. Two thousand spectatocs passed through the doors the first day, and five thousand the second day. The capacity of the hotels was taxed, but private houses provided for the overflow. Some of the prominent men present were : Hon. Sidney Fisher, Minister of Agriculture for the Dominion; Hon. J. Dryden, Minister of Agriculture of Ontario; I. Ferris, Commissioner of Agriculture for the Northwest Territories; Prof. Clark, Agricultural Department, Ottawa; Prof. C. C. Curtiss, State Agricultural College, Iowa; Secretary Greig, Winnipeg; Live Stock Association of Manitoba; J. R. Anderson, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, British Columbia; Archibald McNeillage, of Glasgow, one of the foremost agriculturists of Great Britain.

The main building was the scene of activity during the Fair. This structure is a two storey building, 310 ft. long and 50 ft. wide, with a recent addition of 100 x 50 ft. The display of hogs was the largest in the history of the Association, containing 96 pens and some 250 animals. The sheep exhibit was above the average, and the poultry exhibit was large, including almost everything known as such by the Canadian fancier. The dairy tests were carried on in the presence of hundreds of spectators, eager to see everything. About eighty splendid specimens of Canada's best product, the bovine class, were in the stalls.

Dairy cattle attracted most attention the first day, owing to the dairy tests, but breeders and beef cattle were largely represented. Apparently the shorthorn is still the favorite of the Canadian farmer in cattle as they outnumbered all other species exhibited. The Ontario cattle which were at the Chicago Exhibition were on the grounds the first day and were a big attraction of the Fair.

There were 39 animals entered in the dairy class. The famous Ayrshires and Holsteins were chiefly conspicuous. The awards were made on a basis of butter, fats, solids, and days of milking after calving.

An interesting feature of the Exhibition was the lectures. Many lectures of the greatest practical value to the Canadian farmer were delivered in the lecture hall. Hon. John Dryden presided at these meetings. Two were delivered the first day and three the second. The subject of the first address by J. E. Brethour, of Brantford, " Correct type of Bacon Hog," was discussed by C. F. Hodges, of Brantford, and many questions on the subject were answered. The address was made very interesting by the introduction of life-sized pictures of the animals, their different parts, showing the profit derived from certain portions of the animal, and how to obtain the best results. The conclusion was that by careful breeding and feeding an animal may be marketed under 200 lb. at a better profit than is secured from heavier hogs.

The second address was by Prof. G. E. Day, O.A.C., Guelph, on " Selection and Breeding of Bacon Hogs." This subject was discussed by P. C. Anderson, of Guelph, and attracted much attention.

On Tuesday afternoon Prof. G. E. Day addressed the farmers on " Conformation and Finish of Export Cattle," and the discussion was carried on by Prof. C. F. Curtiss, of the State Agricultural College of Ames, Iowa. Later in the afternoon the other discussion took place. The first of these was entered into by Mr. McNeillage on " Canadian Live Stock Products Exported to England, and How to Improve Trade." He advocated the farmers producing the highest quality in every line, and assured them that England was ready to take all their surplus products when they reached the highest state of improvement. The last paper was, "Sheep and their Breeding." It occupied the crowd from four to six o'clock the second day. Wednesday evening a public meeting was held and many prominent men, competent to speak on agricultural topics, addressed the meeting.

Hon. Sidney Fisher closed the speaking and had in particular the following to say : " We must see to it that the quality of the goods we export is of the highest. If our cheese, bacon, and other products command such a high figure in the markets of the Old World, it is because of their superior quality. It is said the present prosperity cannot continue much longer ; that the healthy condition will fall off in the near future. If this prediction is true, then it is the inferior products from the farm that will suffer first. Let the Canadian farmers see to it that their products are not the first to suffer. Let the competition in this direction continue keen, if you want to keep on the top wave of prosperity."

$2.10 PER LB. FOR BEEF.

The sale of the carcasses was a notable feature of the Fair. The sweepstakes bullock, "Bobs," shown by James Leask, of Greenbank, was sold to A. Barber, of Guelph, at $2.10 per lb. for 1,200 lb. Another carcass, weighing 814 lb., was bought by T. Allison & Son. of Galt, at 60c. per lb. Some fancy prizes were realized in poultry. A block of 40 turkeys were bought at 20c. per lb. All the hog carcasses, 62 in number, were bought by J. & R. McHardy, Guelph, at $8.10.

THE QUESTION OF ABATTOIRS.

At the meeting of farmers and stockmen held at Guelph on December 10 great attention was paid to the present state of the cattle export trade. Hon. Sidney Fisher said that all precautions were taken, but that the present state of affairs calls our attention to the vital necessity for the establishment of abattoirs upon such a scale as will enable the live stock trade to take advantage of them on wholesale lines in an emergency.

Hon. Mr. Dryden immediately arose and said that he appreciated the importance of the statements of Mr. Fisher, and hoped that the stockmen would consider them seriously. " However," he continued, " I can say that great interests are now moving in the direction mentioned by Mr. Fisher, and I believe I can promise at the next annual gathering here to announce the location of capital in this business on a sufficient gigantic scale to handle the surplus live stock products, and enable the export live stock trade on slight notice to be turned into the channels of the dead meat trade."

This announcement was greeted with applause among those present, indicating, as it does, that capitalists of large resources are now in communivation with the highest officials of the Government, negotiating for the investment in this line of business.

HOG AR A MONEY-MAKER.

In a discussion of the above subject Mr. Mason said that but a few years ago we were importing more pork than we were exporting. Ten or twelve years ago we were deriving $540,000 from this source. Last year the trade went up to $13,000,000. The market for pork is increasing and the prospects are very bright. In the

The Park, Blackwell Co., LIMITED
PORK PACKERS,
TORONTO, ONT.

United States there is a great shortage in hogs and the shortage is becoming greater every year. This gives the Canadian farmer an assured market. The demand of the packing industry is something to be very carefully considered. The home consumption of hogs is 25 per cent. and the export 75 per cent. The packers are asking for hogs running about 160 to 220 lb. They want the lengthy, fleshy hog. With a high price for grain and a good price for hogs it is well to sell the hogs as soon as they are about the weight the packers are calling for. A first cross between two thoroughbreds is the best, but after the first cross the results are not so good. For summer conditions the best results are obtained by feeding on pasture. The hog raised under these conditions has better digestive organs and is stronger constitutionally, being out in the open and not confined to the pens.

Prof. J. H. Grisdale gave the results of experiments made at the Ottawa Farm in the production of firm bacon. He wished, at the start, to state that the fat hog is not necessarily a soft hog. Often a fat hog gives a good hard side of meat. The speaker also warned those engaged in hog raising against rushing their hogs too much and also against marketing them before they are matured. Hogs should have lots of room and be kept in clean quarters; they should be given variety in feeding. A small amount of skim milk, say, 10 or 15 per cent. to the ration of corn, gives good results. Sugar beets and mangolds are favorite roots for feeding.

CANADIAN HEREFORD BREEDERS' ASSOCIATION.

The Canadian Hereford Breeders' Association held their annual meeting at Guelph on Wednesday, December 10. The twelfth annual gathering was presided over by W. H. Hunter. The president said that the line of Hereford had largely increased in Canada and elsewhere of late. The report of the secretary explained that Ontario members of the Association will be made members of the Dominion Cattle Breeders' Association. Four hundred and thirteen pedigrees were registered and 213 changed during the year. The Society has 51 members, 11 more than last year. The second volume of the herd book has been issued, and shows 2,517 pedigrees. Receipts for the year were $881, all of which was expended. The new officers are: President, W. H. Hunter; vice-president, R. L. Michie, Oshawa; vice-presidents for Provinces—Ontario: J. A. McDiarmid; Quebec, H. D. Smith; Manitoba, J. E. Mailes; Maritime Provinces, W. W. Black; Assiniboia, J. P. Van Veer. Delegates to Exhibitions—Toronto, W. H. Hunter, A. J. MacPhie; Ottawa, Samuel Gamble; London, H. Wade and R. Stutt; Winnipeg, J. A. Chapman.

DEAR CHRISTMAS POULTRY.

A despatch from Philadelphia says: "Poultry for Christmas will probably cost from 20 to 23c. per lb. this year. The big Western meat houses, whose trade combination affects poultry as well as the larger carcasses, are in control of the turkey market. All manner of fowls are being bought by agents of the Trust, who go into the farming sections of the United States and Canada, and make their purchases in lots running from 100 to 1,000. As fast as fowls are bought they are killed, dressed and stored in the refrigerators of the Trust. Plump and tender turkeys brought 16c. per lb. at last year's Christmas markets. This year, according to both wholesale and retail dealers, they will range in price from 20 to 23c. per lb. Prime chickens and ducks will bring 25c. per lb. Beef is 3c. per lb. lower than it was in the spring, but pork is higher. All hog products are advanced in price, and are going higher."

THE PROVISION MARKETS.

TORONTO.

There is little change in the market. The demand continues good. There is not as much activity as there has been during the past few weeks, but for this time of the year the market is exceptionally good. Dressed hogs have been a little easier. Our quotations are as follows: Dressed hogs, $7.25 to $7.50 per 100 lb.; No. 1 beef, $7.00 to $7.50 per 100 lb.; hind quarters, $7.50 to $8.00 per 100 lb.; front quarters, $4.50 to $5.00 per 100 lb.; veal, $6.50 to $9.00; lamb, $6.75. Choice export cattle, $5.00 to $5.50; medium cattle, $4.50 to $5.50; other grades of cattle, $2.40 to $3.00; live hogs, selects, 6c. per lb., and fats and lights, $5.75 per 100 lb.

continues good. There is no apparent decline in prices. We quote: Long clear bacon, 10¾ to 11c.; smoked breakfast bacon, 14 to 15c.; roll, 11½ to 12c.; medium hams, 13½c.; large hams, 12½c.; shoulder hams, 11 to 11½c., and backs 14½ to 15c.; heavy mess pork, $21.50 to $22.00; short cut, $23.00 to $23.50; lard, in tierces, 10¾ to 11c. per lb.; tubs, 11 to 11¼c., and pails, 11¼ to 11½c.; compounds, 8¼ to 10c.; plate beef, $15.00 per 200-lb. bbl.

MONTREAL.

The rapid decline in Canadian Wiltshire bacon on the English market during the first part of the month was about 26s., prices drizzling from 74s. down to 48s. This, however, was followed by a steadier feeling in London, where an advance of 1s. per cwt. was made on leanest selections. On the other hand, the Liverpool market declined 4s. more, but according to mail advices from Liverpool, under date of December 6, it was expected that arrivals would fall off somewhat, and result in a steadier market. A Bristol advice of the same date reported business on spot as very slow, the low prices of Canadian bacon not having any effect on the trade; but when the customer got the full benefit of the reduction a good demand was looked for.

Provisions on the Montreal market during the week have been moving fairly well. The trade in cured meats for the coming holidays has been brisk, at almost former quotations.

Fresh killed abattoir dressed hogs are 25c. per 100 lb. higher than at our last quotations, and a fair trade is now doing at $8.25 to $8.50. Supplies of frozen stock have been arriving freely, and prices have accordingly declined, and frozen stock is now quoted at $7.75 in jobbing lots; carload lots $7.50 per 100 lb. At these prices good sales were made.

In lard there has been a good demand, the movement being active in both pure and compound brands. Quotations are as follows: Pure Canadian lard, $2.30 to $2.32½ per pail; Fairbank's "Boar's Head" lard compound, 9⅜c. tierce basis, with extras as follows: 60-lb. tubs, ¼c. over tierce; 20-lb. tin pails, ¼c.; 20-lb. wood pails, ½c.; 10-lb. tins, ¾c.; 5-lb. tins, ⅞c.; 3-lb. tins 1c. Snow White and Globe compound, $1.80 to $1.90 per pail; Cottolene, 11¼c. for 20-lb. pails, and 11⅛c. for 60-lb. tubs, for Quebec and Ontario; hams, 12 to 14c.; heavy Canadian short cut mess pork, $24.50 to $25; Canadian short cut clear pork, $23.50 to $24; American short cut clear pork, $24 to $24.50; American fat back, $24.50 to $25; bacon, Wiltshire, 13 to 14c. per lb.; extra plate beef, $14.50 to $15 per bbl.

ST. JOHN, N.B.

In pork, the market is again firm. Local dealers are still selling at the lower prices. The demand is light. In beef, prices have shown little change. The high figures have led to cheaper goods being used. Lard is firmly held. Pure in particular has come forward very slowly. Some orders are two months behind. Fresh beef is offered, and the price of domestic light beef is low. Lamb and mutton are plentiful. Pork is firmer here. Poultry is more freely offered, but prices are firmly held. We quote as follows: Mess pork, $21.50 to $23.50; clear pork, $22.00 to $26.00; plate beef, $15 to $16; mess beef, $12.50 to $13.00; domestic beef, 5 to 7c.; Western beef, 7 to 9c.; lamb, 5 to 6c.; mutton, 5c.; veal, 5 to 7c.; pork, 7½ to 8c.; pure lard, tubs, 12c.; pails, 12½c.; compound, tubs, 9¼c.; pails, 9½c.; Fairbank's refined, tubs, 10¼c.; pails, 10½c.

A car of Fairbank's refined lard was distributed to the trade this week.

The regulations prohibiting the Canadian Pacific Railway from bringing cattle through the extreme northern part of Maine, because some of the New England cattle have been quarantined, causes much unfavorable comment here. The more so as New York is left open as a shipping point. However, the winter port boats are receiving their cattle over the Intercolonial, and facilities here are equal to looking after all the business that offers.

WINNIPEG.

CURED MEATS. — The market is very active and prices are firm at last week's list. We quote: Hams, sugar cured, 14½c. per lb.; breakfast bacon, bellies, 15¼c.; backs, 14¾c.; spiced rolls, 12¾c.; smoked long clear, 13c.; dry salt long clear, 12½c.; barrel pork, heavy mess, $20; pork sausage, 9c.; bologona, 7½c.; pickled pigs' feet, in kits, $1.25.

LARD. — Tierces, 12⅞c.; 50-lb. tubs, $6.05; 20-lb. pails, $2.40; tins in cases, $7.75.

DRESSED MEATS.—The market is firmer in all lines. Beef is advancing, and there is an excellent demand for Christmas beef; 6 to 6½c. has been paid during the week for tops. Mutton is unchanged at 8 to 9c.; lambs are worth 12½c., and hogs 7 to 7½c.

POULTRY—The outlook for a plentiful supply of Christmas turkeys is not good. Manitoba has produced even fewer than usual, and Ontario is not this year in a position to supplement the shortage. Prices are firm and will advance during the week, but it is not so much a question of high prices as actual shortage of supply. Turkeys are now quoted at 13c.; chickens, 10 to 12c.; ducks and geese, 10 to 12c.

J. Ogden Armour, the president of Armour & Co., Chicago, has formed plans for a Lolita Armour Institute of Bloodless Surgery, which he has endowed with the sum of $3,000,000.

A. White, who is buying for Snell & Brown, of Galt, shipped Saturday morning two loads of export cattle to go via Intercolonial. He expected to ship five loads, but the embargo prevented it.

There is every probability that a pork factory will be established at Belleville, Ont., shortly. It will be co-operative and capitalized at $250,000. The scheme has been endorsed by the county council.

The International Live Stock Exposition at the Union Stock Yards, Chicago, opened November 30. Although the packers did not take as much interest in the show this year as last, still the exhibits of this year were finer than last year's.

During the earlier part of the month, owing to the events in New England, Buffalo experienced a live stock glut. Thousands of them halted at Buffalo. They were disposed of by killing some of them and diverting the rest to the Southern States.

The officers and members of the Guelph Fat Club Stock Club, the originators of the Provincial Winter Fair, banqueted the visiting stockmen Thursday evening, December 11. The banquet was held in the city hall and surpassed all affairs of its kind ever held in the Royal City.

C. F. Fawcett from Guelph last week shipped a carload of Shorthorn cattle to his home, the Round Hill Stock Farm, in New Brunswick; also a Yorkshire sow, purchased from the Ontario Agricultural College. The cattle were bought from some of the leading breeders around Guelph, and are all pedigreed stock.

George Menzie, cheese and buttermaker, lately of Milton, Iowa, was in Galt about a week ago endeavoring to secure a building suitable for a plant. He intends conducting the manufacture of butter and ice cream, and the sale of milk and cream, but he almost abandoned the idea owing to the lack of the necessary building.

The Canadian Produce Corporation, according to W. R. Nursey, a director of the company, will begin operations next June. It is the intention of the Corporation to buy only Canadian goods, and to sell the goods as such to the English people. It is further the purpose of the Corporation to do away with the middleman.

A new firm will start business in Vancouver at the first of the year in the wholesale grocery, produce and commission trade. The firm will be known as The Baker, Lesson Company. E. A. Baker, formerly of Oppenheimer Bros., now with F. R. Stewart, and E. W. Lesson, formerly of Vancouver, will be the principal members.

Canada was blamed for a short while for the foot and mouth epidemic. In placing the blame on another's shoulders it was lodged, first, against Alberta, and afterwards against Montreal. But on examination of the docks at Montreal it was found that the statement was untrue and Canada has emphatically denied that she was the cause of the outbreak.

The Montreal Stock Company will continue its building operations. The city is to pay the company $3,000 a year during the continuance of their contract, toward the construction, maintenance, housing and insurance of all live stock in the company's yards. On the other hand, The Montreal Stock Company is to pay the city in cash, or in 4 per cent. bonds, the sum of $15,000.

The big annual Fat Stock Show at Ottawa, is now an assured fact. Hon. John Dryden, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, has written H. B. Cowan, of The Journal, secretary of the Live Stock Association, approving of the use of The Ottawa Forwarding Company's buildings at the canal basin for the purpose of the show. The show will be held the second week in February.

Send us samples you want to match. We can save you at least twenty per cent. Recently, in competition with every local tea house of any importance, we made one sale to a Toronto retail merchant of 143 chests of Ceylons and Indians. ## ONE MORE SUGAR FACTORY.

A FOURTH beet-sugar factory has been added to the list of Canadian refineries in the completion of the Wiarton Sugar factory which started running on December 12. The mill is now grinding 350 tons of boets per day, and it will take till next March to turn into sugar the 14,000 tons of beets the company has in its sheds, and on the docks and railway sidings.

The four factories are Berlin, Wallaceburg, Dresden and Wiarton.

In his manifesto to the electors, Hon. G. W. Ross says :

"During the year, and since the elections in May, four sugar-beet factories have been completed and are now running. From 12,000 to 15,000 acres of beets have been cultivated, which will yield to the farmer a clear profit, after paying all expenses of labor, from $20 to $25 per acre—say, $250,000. We are looking to the production of at least 25,000,000 pounds of the best quality of refined sugar in the Province this year. The investment in these four refineries will probably exceed two millions of dollars. This venture of the Government has also been successful and will, no doubt, lead to the establishment of other refineries in the near future."

APPLES TURNED OUT WELL.

Fred Gooderham, of The Dawson Commission Co., Toronto, has just come back from a three weeks' stay at Cooksville, Ont., where he was buying apples for his firm. During that period he purchased between 3,000 and 4,000 barrels of apples for export to the Old Country. The crop in that section of the country, he says, has never been larger and the quality throughout has turned out fairly satisfactory.

CAPT. ADAMS BURNED OUT.

There was a great amount of damage done by water to the stock of groceries in the store of Capt. James Adams, of Dundas, Ont., on December 15, and he is now out of business. A fire originated in the office of W. E. S. Knowles, above the store, and the water thrown on the flames to extinguish them did the work of destruction on the property beneath.

KELLY BROS. ROBBED.

The grocery store of Kelly Bros., 90 Queen street east, Toronto, was entered by robbers last Tuesday night, December 16, and $250 in notes and cash was taken from the safe. The thieves entered by the skylight, and quieted the dog inside by giving him a leg of turkey. This is the fourth time Kelly Bros. have been robbed.

The "Salada" Tea Co. received one day this week orders from their New York manager, James A. McGuane, for over 60,000 lb. of "Salada" Ceylon tea. These were all for New York City and the New England States.

BACK FROM THE SOUTH.

W. G. A. Lambe, of W. G. A. Lambe & Co., Toronto, has returned from a trip through Baltimore, Philadelphia, West Virginia and other points in the Southern States. Mr. Lambe says that business is active over all that country, and that the only drawback at present experienced by business men there as well as here is that the transportation facilities are entirely inadequate to attend to the business of the country. There is a great scarcity of cars on all the railways and a lack of motive power. This state of affairs has been much felt by merchants in both Canada and the United States, says Mr. Lambe, getting shipments forwarded from the Pacific Coast, and he himself states he has had goods consigned to him on November 20, which are side-tracked somewhere between Toronto and San Francisco and can be located nowhere on the line.

BREADSTUFFS IN TRINIDAD.

Regarding breadstuffs, Gordon Grant & Co., Trinidad, report as follows, under date of December 3 : "The ss. Grenada, from New York, is the only recent arrival, but the steamers Korona, Maraval and Maracas are all shortly expected with large supplies. Demand has not been at all active during the fortnight and prices have become slightly easier—especially for the lower grades of flour, which are still in excess of requirements."

Buyers of Eleme figs should communicate with H. P. Eckardt & Co. who are offering some of the choicest quality.

EXIT (?) OF THE WHOLESALER AND RETAILER.

ONE sometimes hears it remarked that the day of the wholesaler is departing and that the time is coming when the manufacturer will send his products direct to the retailer. Now we are told that the retailer is to join the wholesaler in the exodus from the commercial field, and that the manufacturer is to pass over the heads of both in getting his products to the consumer.

The author of this startling declaration is Mr. T. M. Humble, the Toronto representative of La Presse. Mr. Humble has taken upon himself the task of educating manufacturers up to his ideal in regard to advertising. And this argument is one of the links in the chain which he is endeavoring to weld by which he proposes to pull them away from the columns of the trade journals.

A chain, we are told, is no stronger than its weakest link. If this be true, and no one has ever questioned it, La Presse's representative has welded a pretty weak chain indeed.

He is not a wise man who would design to say what the future will not bring forth. We are living in an age when great things are happening, when science is working wonders, when what was considered impossible yesterday is being accomplished to-day. It is possible that in the future the housekeeper may, by pressing a button, be able to obtain not only light and heat, but her food, clothing and general household supplies as well. But even then it would by no means follow that she would no longer require the retail dealer or that the latter in turn would no longer have need of the wholesaler.

Neither the wholesale nor the retail business is a sinecure. Each has its place in commerce. Each is a centre for facilitating the distribution of the products of the farm and factory. It was this work of facilitating the movement of merchandise that brought each into existence. When one or the other fail to perform this office it will disappear from the commercial world. But the tendency of the times does not indicate that either are likely to disappear. Retail stores and wholesale warehouses may be relatively fewer in number. But in size and importance they are likely to be relatively larger. At any rate, that is the tendency of to-day in trading as well as in manufacturing concerns. And, of course, the larger they are the greater will be their utility.

We are tending more and more towards specialization. The merest schoolboy recognizes this. The conditions would have to be of the very opposite in order to force the retailer and the wholesaler out of business. As the size and importance of the retail stores and wholesale warehouses increase, the number of lines they carry in stock will naturally multiply. And thus both the consumer and the retailer will be able to have more of their wants supplied under one roof than under the old conditions. In other words, the wholesale houses and the retail stores will possess greater facilities for doing business, and, consequently, show even greater reason for their existence.

A STANDARD FOR VINEGAR.

At a recent meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association in Toronto resolutions were passed to approach the Government re a standard for vinegars. Such a standard has become necessary, as of late there have been large quantities of worthless vinegars sold to retailers; and they can get no redress. This could be obviated by a proper standard for the goods, and we hope to see a measure in operation at no very distant date.

BUSINESS MEN IN CIVIC BODIES.

OUR municipal governing bodies are weak because their members are deficient in the strength which men of practical business experience bring.

Society influence and political pull are all too powerful factors on election day to expect anything else as long as the business men in the various municipalities do not use their influence and mark their ballots in favor of men of the desired type.

We would not for one moment advocate the election of business men because they are business men. We only do so because they are the best qualified for the duties appertaining to municipal administration. Those who would successfully govern a city and make and unmake its laws must of necessity be possessed of the quality of business commonsense. No sane man would for one moment question that. And yet, while in the abstract we acknowledge this to be good doctrine, in practice our actions take a contrary course. In other words, we preach one thing and practice another. We acknowledge the fitness of the business man, but we choose Barabbas the ward heeler, the political partizan, the man who is merely using his position or his party as a stepping-stone to civic or civil service.

A few weeks hence the electors of the different municipalities in Ontario will be electing their representatives to the local governing bodies. The duty devolving upon them if they desire good civic government is obvious.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF GROCERS.

An effort is being made to induce the National Grocers' Association of the United States to hold their convention in January, 1904, at Niagara Falls, N. Y.

Should the convention be held there it would certainly excite more interest among the grocery trade in Canada than any other gathering of the National Association has hitherto.

THE QUESTION OF RECIPROCITY WITH THE UNITED STATES.

IT is to be hoped that no one in Canada anticipates the realization of closer and better trade relations in the near future between this country and the United States because at Detroit last week the National Reciprocity League of the United States adopted a resolution favoring reciprocity with Canada. It is quite true the resolution was strongly worded, urging that "the Government of the United States should take immediate steps to secure closer and more advantageous trade relations with Canada, and that reciprocal relations beneficial to both countries should preferably follow the general lines of the removal by both countries of the duties on the natural products of each, and such mutual extensions of the free list and reductions and changes of the duties on the manufactured products of both as will give to each a low rate of duty as is given to any other country."

The language used by some of the speakers at the convention was even stronger than the words of the resolution, part of which is quoted above. Mr. E. N. Foss, of Boston, a director of three large manufacturing concerns and the owner of extensive iron works, made the bold statement that "the New England manufacturers required reciprocity in raw materials with Canada to save their workshops and factories from being closed. * * * If Canada does raise her tariff to our tariff against her, then many of our New England mills and factories must close down."

"In Canada," declared ex-Governor Lind, of Minnesota, "they can raise all the products of the northern zone, and they have what the people of the States require, and it is not right to prevent the free exchange of these commodities. * * * The sensible course for the United States is to treat Canada as if she were in the Union."

What a difference from some of the utterances in Congress in 1864, when the Bill to abrocate the treaty of 1854 was being discussed! Nothing scarcely unkind enough or derogatory enough could be said. Canada was of no consequence. We had no market in Great Britain. And Representative Baxter declared: "They (the Canadians) have nowhere else to go but to our (the United States) markets."

Again, at the Reciprocity Convention, held in Detroit in July, 1865, Hon. J. W. Potter, United States Consul at Montreal, declared: "It is not the policy of Americans to continue the treaty. And within two years after its repeal Canadians themselves will apply for admission to the United States." This was 37 years ago, and still Canada has not sought admission to the United States.

But in spite of the change in sentiment toward Canada, the dissipation of much of the ignorance that abounded in regard to this country, and the resolution adopted at the recent convention, the politicians in the United States are far too strongly entrenched in their opposition for the most ardent advocates among the commercial class in both countries to expect a realization of their hopes for at least some years to come.

The reciprocity treaty of 1854, which provided for free interchange of the products of the sea, the soil, the forest and the mine, was the result of many years of agitation more or less continuous. Away back in 1816, President Madison brought the subject before Congress in a special message; and the Administrations of Munro, John Quincy Adams and General Jackson also interested themselves in the question. In 1847 the British Minister at Washington made a proposal for a reciprocity arrangement with Canada, and in the same year our own Parliament authorized the admission, free of duty, of natural products of the United States as soon as Congress had passed a similar measure.

The New York Chamber of Commerce took the question up in 1852, and the treaty of 1854, which was adopted by the United States in 1865, was the outcome. Webster, Everett, Douglass, Eward, Marcy, Dix, Clayton, Cushing and other such political stalwarts were supporters of reciprocity with Canada. But where is there to-day in the United States such advocates of the cause? Echo answers, where?

One thing we do know, and that is that the opposition of certain interests in the United States has so far been able to burk all attempts at reciprocal arrangements with Cuba, Jamaica and Trinidad. And if these can succeed what can we expect should a treaty between Canada and the United States come before Congress for ratification? It does not require the vision of a prophet in order to anticipate what the result would be.

While it may be in the distant future, we believe that ultimately the trade relations between the two countries will be more equable. The politicians will not be able to have their way always. The business men in the United States are awakening to the fact that the inequality in the two tariffs cannot be maintained except to the injury of their own country. And the more they realize this the more will they exert themselves to remove or modify the cause.

In the meantime it is the duty of Canada to sit still and await results. There must be no more importuning. They must come to us, not we go to them.

SITUATION IN HOG PRODUCTS.

IN the past week packing in the West, according to advices from Chicago, is estimated at 595,000 hogs, with 775,000 for the corresponding week last year. Total packing since November 1 is estimated at 2,895,000 hogs, as against 3,770,000 during the same period last year, a shortage of 875,000.

It may be seen, therefore, that the stocks of lard continue to show a decrease. As a result to be expected, cotton-seed oil has advanced over 1c. per gallon during the past few days, with a firm market and possibility of higher prices, which must increase the cost of cotton-oil products. The foreign trade continue to buy in the States at ½ to 1c. per pound more than they could buy a better grade of goods for in Canada. This changed condition has suddenly come upon the Canadian producers, which they do not seem to be taking advantage of, to secure export business of lard.

COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS' ANNUAL.

THE Dominion Commercial Travellers' Association held its 28th annual meeting in Montreal on Saturday evening, December 13, with the president, James Robertson, in the chair.

The president's report made pleasant reading. The financial condition of the association was shown to be in the best of shape. The report went on to say:

"Negotiations have been carried on with the transportation companies, with a view to having the week-end tickets apply to all points, or at least to certain cities which were not included in places to where week-end tickets could be obtained. We regret to say the companies did not see their way clear to adopt our suggestion, and our request was respectfully declined.

"The Prince Edward Island tax on commercial travellers has continued to occupy the attention of the board. Conferences have been held with sister associations, and all have ageeed to make a combined effort to test the legality of this obnoxious law should the opinion now being obtained warrant us in so doing. With this object in view, the best legal advice in Canada is being sought, and we are now awaiting a report which we hope to receive in the course of a few days.

MORE COMMODIOUS ROOMS.

"Our present rooms not proving as attractive as they might be, the directors have decided to return to the Board of Trade building, where more commodious and convenient accommodation can be obtained. Rooms have already been secured, which we expect to occupy as soon as the new building is completed. The death claims were confined almost altogether among members of long standing. The amount paid under our mortuary benefit scheme to the beneficaries of deceased members was $32,300, representing 32 claims. Average age of deceased members was 51 years, their membership averaging 16 years.

"Three different sums, amounting to $26,000, have been invested in first mortgages on real estate, bearing 5 and 5½ per cent. Total amount now invested: First mortgages, $183,500; harbor bonds, $15,237; Board of Trade second mortgage bonds, $5,000.

"The total received on revenue account was $49,773. Of this amount $32,300 has been paid for claims arising from the death of 32 members. The working expenses amounted to $4,358. The net surplus for the year was $14,028. This amounth as been added to capilal account, which now aggregates $203,004.

"The increase in membership for the year, was greater than in any previous year since 1882, and reflects the great activity and growth of the wholesale trade, consequent upon the increased settlement and development of the resources of our country. Number on roll as per last annual statement, 3,749; new members, received this year, 651; less lapsed through nonpayment of annual subscription, 336; making our present membership, 4,046, a gain of 315 for the year."

The annual rental of the associations new rooms in the Board of Trade building will be $1,200.

It was decided that subscriptions, limited to one dollar per member, should be collected for the purpose of endowing a bed in the Montreal General Hospital.

The following resolution was offered by Mr. Max Murdoch, seconded by Hon. J. D. Rolland, and carried unanimously:

"That the absence of uniformity in the legal procedure for the distribution of the assets of an insolvent debtor is detrimental to the commercial interests of the Dominion of Canada, and an obstacle to the extension of trade, both external and internal;

"That this uniformity can only be obtained by means of a Federal Insolvent Act;

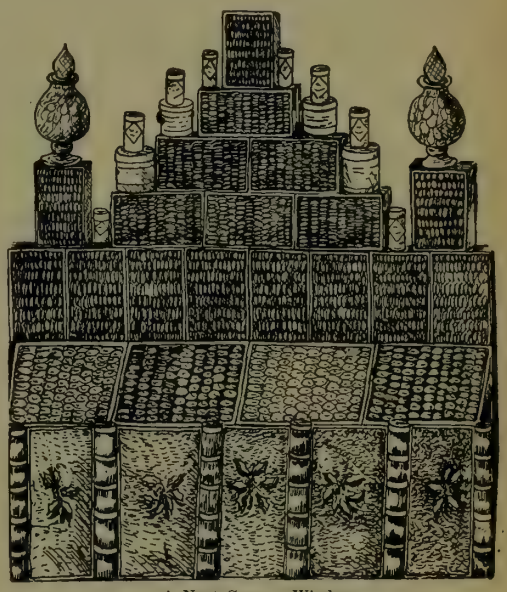
"That it is urgent that an equitable uniform insolvent law be passed at the forthcoming session of the Federal Parliament."

THE OFFICERS ELECTED.

For the first time in the history of the Association, there was no balloting for office-bearers, all having been elected by acclamation at the last quarterly meeting. They are:

President—Mr. James Robinson.
Vice-President—Mr. George A. Mann.
Treasurer—Mr. J. S. N. Dougall.
Directors—W. B. Mathews, R. C. Wilkins, W. H. Evans, A. Fournier, W. J. Egan, P. J. Paradis (Quebec), S. A. Agnew, John Paterson, A. D. Gall, R. Booth, jr.; past-president, T. L. Paton.

The annual dinner of the Association will take place December 22.



MUTUAL BENEFIT SOCIETY.

The Dominion Commercial Travellers' Mutual Benefit Society held its seventeenth annual meeting on Saturday afternoon. President J. T. Lesueur submitted his annual report. He said that the membership now totalled 1,038, with 120 new members added during the year, which, although not increasing the total number to that extent, on account of the customary annual lapses, would still materially improve the society's position on account of the new additions being almost entirely young men. The number of death claims provided for since the last annual report was 13, leaving in hand, after paying all charges against the society, a balance of $5,508. With a view to so increasing the membership that the six regular assessments might prove sufficient to meet the average number of death claims, and thus obviate the need of special assessments, it was pointed out that this could be done by adding about 500 recruits to the regular membership.

President—Mr. J. T. Lesueur.
Vice-President—Mr. A. McA. Murphy.
Treasurer—Mr. Chas. Gurd.
Trustees—Messrs. David Watson, F. S. Cote, Max Murdoch, J. N. Christie, E. H. Copland, John Hardie, C. M. Mills, J. W. Rousseau, Alex. Peden and D. M. Campbell.

is, are daintily and carefully put up, but everybody, and most of all the small folk, rejoice to see the grocer make his Christmas display. For then we know that Christmas is not far away, and the season of gifts, good-will, plum pudding and mince pie is at hand. The merchant whose window we illustrate has made an unusually good use of the material at his disposal and has put in a most tempting display of good things. Most things wanted for the Christmas cookery were there. Raisins, currants, dates, figs and preserved fruits, etc., in boxes and jars. The cans and small jars contain honey, and the little sprigs of holly with their red berries add just a seasonable touch.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, December 18, 1902.

GROCERIES.

THERE is a steady trade doing in wholesale groceries this week and jobbers are filling the last of their Christmas orders. The volume of business transacted in wholesale groceries this season has been satisfactory, but jobbers all fall have been hampered by the slowness of the railway companies in shipping forward goods from the various points of importation. There has been much delay, especially in getting fruits from California and from the ports on the Atlantic sea coast. Also in delivering goods to the retailer delays of three or four days have not been uncommon. The volume of trade is less than last week in almost every line, and is now of a sorting-up character. The only change to report is an advance of 5 per cent. in poultry. Sugars are steady and the demand for the season is moderate. The principal business is being done in nuts, raisins, figs and other classes of fancy goods suitable for the seasan. Indian and Ceylon teas are strong, but no quotable advances have been made in prices here, the trade being content with firmly maintaining values throughout the list. Young hysons are also high and low-priced teas of this description are not now to be had of first hands.

CANNED GOODS.

The retail trade generally have now become reconciled to the fact that higher prices have to be paid for tomatoes and canned vegetables of almost every description, and so buying has been more active in all lines, the principal sales being transacted on a basis of $1.60 to $1.85 for tomatoes; 90 to 95c. for peas, and 90c. up for corn. The available supplies of all these vegetables are small and should the present conditions continue the prices of these next summer, before the new crop comes in, will be much higher than usual for the time of the year. The prices of canned poultry have been advanced 5 per cent., and sardines are still scarce and firm, with hardly any obtainable. There has beeo a little movement from stock in fruit.

COFFEES.

Trade in coffee is still fairly active and quite a lot of the cheaper grades are moving out. The Brazilian markets are firm, but the New York market is dull and saggy. The European markets are also lower. We quote as follows: Green Rios, No. 7, 3¾c.; No. 6, 8c.; No. 5, 8¼c.; No. 4, 9c.; No. 3, 10 to 12c. per lb.

NUTS.

Retailers have been buying heavily in nuts in anticipation of a big Christmas trade. There is just now a rush to get orders off, as the crop this year has been late in coming in. The prices are steady throughout the list. We quote: Tarragona almonds, 12½ to 13c.; Grenoble walnuts, 13½ to 14c.; Marbot walnuts, 11½ to 12½c.; Bordeaux walnuts, 10½ to 11c.; Sicily filberts, 9 to 10c.; Brazil nuts, 14½ to 15c.; Italian chestnuts, 9½ to 10c.; peanuts, green, 7 to 10c. and roasted, 9 to 11c.; Pecan nuts, 15 to 16c. and shelled almonds, 30 to 32c. per lb.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

The volume of trade transacted in rice on the local market keeps fair and the primary markets continue firm. Tapioca is firmer on the primary market. We quote: Rice, standard B, 3½c.; Patna, 4¾ to 5c.; Japan, 5½ to 6c.; Sago, 3¾ to 4c. and tapioca, 3¼ to 3¾c.

SPICES.

A fairly active tone dominates the local spice market and the movement from second hands to the retailers is principally in baking and pastry grades. Strong advices from the principal markets on pepper have had the effect of keeping stiff the prices here.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There is a fair call for the brighter grades of syrup. A few repeat orders are coming in for molasses.

SUGAR.

The local sugar market remains in the same inactive condition indicated in our report of last week. Trade is light, and both buyers and sellers seem indifferent at the moment. The only feature worthy of note in the general situation is - the decline of 10c. in New York refined made on Monday, the 15th inst. This, however, was no real index of the situation, as refiners never realized the advantage of the previous week, which was merely nominal, and they caused it to be known that they were ready to book orders at the former prices. As we went to press we announced a shading in quotations of raw sugars of 1-16c., and the market remains steady on this basis, 3 15-16c. for 96 deg. centrifugals, duty paid, New York. With the prices established on the 4c. basis, there was considerable disposition to sell shown on the part of holders, especially of sugar at Cuban outports, where storage facilities are inadequate. The refiners having anticipated requirements three of four weeks ahead were indifferent buyers. Business on the lower basis was further facilitated by Europe coming in lower for beets. The market there has fluctuated between 8s. 3¾d. and 8s. 6d., and on the close quotations are 8s. 4½d. f.o.b. Hamburg, at which price the market is firm. The latest information from Mr. Licht estimates a further reduction of 110,000 tons in the growing crop of Europe, further reducing the outturn to 5,615,000 tons.

See pages 43 and 44 for Toronto, Montreal, St. John and Halifax prices current.

The grinding of the new Cuban sugar crop has now begun, but little, if any, new sugar will be available for shipment this month.

The receipts for the week at the four United States ports were 16,728 tons; the meltings, 34,000 tons, and the total stock in the four ports 165,439 tons, against 187,711 tons last week and 127,550 tons last year.

TEAS.

Buying in all grades of Ceylon and Indian blacks has been fairly active on the local market this week, and the holders, on the strength of firm advices from the primary markets, are strong in their views, and values have been fully maintained. The heavy sale of Indian and Ceylon greens continues, and the Chinese article is scarce, the cheaper grades of young hysons being now unobtainable at first hands. There is an active demand for Ceylon and Indian greens at from 14 to 19c. Indian greens of attractive style are in good demand, but there is no stock of those at 14c. Indian pekoes and orange pekoes at about 16c. would sell readily, but the stock is almost exhausted and good drawing teas are hard to procure. Those grades of Kangara teas, at from 18 to 20c., are scarce, and 22 to 36c. descriptions are luxuries, as they are in few hands. Some lots of ordinary Darjeelings, at from 18 to 20c. are offering, but goods of this class, at from 30 to 40c., are sparsely offered, there being none here and hardly any on the London market. Mail advices from London, England, state that there was a slight decline in the prices for all grades of Indian teas, the bidding lacking the same animation it recently had and competition being slack, but the firmness of holders continued and a large proportion was withdrawn from sale. The Ceylons offered sold without much alteration in price, but there was a tendency towards rather easier rates.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

CURRANTS.—These are a shade easier on the primary market. The trade here is mostly in small lots. We quote: Fine Filiatras, 5½c. up; Patras, 6¼ to 6¾c.; Vostizzas, 7 to 8c. per lb.

VALENCIA RAISINS.—There is still a fairly good sorting-up demand for Valencia raisins. The prices are unchanged. We quote: Fine off-stalk, 7 to 8c.; selected, 8 to 9c. and selected layers, 9 to 10c. per lb.

SULTANA RAISINS.—There is not a heavy call for Sultana raisins. The prices are unchanged at 9 to 13c. per lb.

DATES.—There is a good demand for dates from stock for the holiday trade, but the bigger part of the heavy orders have been forwarded to their destinations. We quote: Hallowees, 4½ to 5c.; Sairs, 4 to 4½c. and Fards, 7½ to 8c. per lb.

PRUNES.—These are firm on the Coast and further advances are looked for. The volume of business on the local market has been heavy during the past week. We quote: 100-110s, 4 to 4½c.; 90-100s, 4¾ to 5½c.; 80-90s, 6 to 6½c.; 70-80s, 6½ to 7c.; 60-70s, 7 to 7½c.; 50-60s, 8 to 8½c.; 40-50s, 8½ to 10c. per lb.

FIGS.—The crop of Comadre figs is reported exhausted at first hands and prices are likely to go higher at once. There is a good local demand for all classes of figs. We quote: Tapnets, 4c.; Naturals, 8c. and Elemes, 10 to 15c. per lb.

CALIFORNIAN SEEDED RAISINS.—These are still quite active and stocks of loose muscatels are becoming light. Quotations are as follows: 8½ to 9c. per lb. for 12-oz. packages and 10½ to 11c. for 1-lb. boxes of choice goods in packages. Californian loose muscatels are quoted as follows: 2-crown, 7½c.; 3-crown, 8c. and 4-crown, 9c. per lb.

CALIFORNIAN EVAPORATED FRUITS—Coast advices report a strong outlook on apricots and peaches. The local trade is fairly active. We quote: Apricots, 8 to 13c. and peaches, 8 to 12c. per lb.

GREEN FRUITS.

There is now an active market for nearly all lines of green fruits. Oranges and lemons are selling freely, and of the former, Californian navels and Mexicans are in largest demand, with Mexicans a little in the lead. The navels are a little late in coming to maturity this year, consequently they have only been on the market in large quantities the last few days. They are of good quality, large, and of nice flavor. Californian lemons are selling well and so are Messinas. The export apple trade continues and although the English market might be higher, the sales made there are at a figure that is yielding a fairly satisfactory profit to the exporter. Our quotations are as follows: Californian navel oranges, $3.50 to $4 per box; Florida oranges, $3.50 to $3.75; Mexicans, $2.25 to $2.50; Jamaicas, $2.35 to $3 in boxes and $5.50 in bbls.; Valencia oranges, $4.50 to $6.75 per box, according to sizes; Tangerines, $4.50 per half-strap; pineapples, $4 to $4.50 per crate; grape fruit, $3.50 to $4 per box; Malaga grapes, $5.50 to $7 per bbl.; winter apples, $2.25 to $3 per bbl.; fancy Jersey cranberries, $10.50 per bbl.; Cape Cod, $9.50 per bbl.; Nova-Scotian, $7.50 per bbl.; sweet potatoes, $4.50 per bbl.; bananas, $1.25 to $1.75 per bunch for ordinary, and $2.25 to $2.50 for large bunches; Californian lemons, $4.25 to $4.50 per case; Messina, $3.25 to $3.50 per box; cucumbers, $1.75 to $2.50 per box; Californian tomatoes, $2.50 per basket carrier.

VEGETABLES.

A moderately active market is reported in nearly all lines of vegetables, with the prices about the same all round. Potatoes are scarce and high. Prices are as follows: Lettuce, 30 to 40c. per doz.; mint and parsley, 15 to 20c.; cabbage, 30 to 50c. per dozen and $1 per barrel; pickling cabbage, 25 to 50c. per doz.; carrots, 40 to 50c. per bag; beets, 40 to 50c. per bag; potatoes, $1 to $1.25 per bag; celery, 50 to 75c. per dozen; squashes, $1 to $1.50 per dozen; pumpkins, 50c. per dozen; artichokes, 50c. per bushel; spinach, 40c.; parsnips, 40 to 50c. per bag; vegetable marrow, 30 to 50c. per doz.; celery, Californian, $4.50 per crate; ditto, cauliflower, $3.75.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EGGS.—Few strictly new-laid eggs are offering and those coming in would bring fancy prices. One lot was sold last week, in a retail way, at 40 to 50c. per dozen. There is a good demand for limed and cold stored. We quote: Strictly new laid, 26 to 30c.; fresh, 19 to 20c.; limed, 18c. and cold stored, 16 to 19c.

BEANS.—The offerings are small and jobbers are inclined to buy only for their immediate wants. We quote: Handpicked, $2 and prime, $1.75 per bushel.

DRIED AND EVAPORATED APPLES.—Hardly any dried and evaporated apples are offering, and the demand is light. We quote: Evaporated, 6½ to 7½c. and dried, 4 to 4½c. per lb.

HONEY.—There is a fair demand for honey. We quote: Extracted clover, 8 to 8½c. in large quantities; in glass jars, small sizes, 95c. to $1.85 per doz; combs, $1.50 to $2 per doz.

POTATOES.—These are scarce and in good demand. The farmers do not seem to be desirous of selling the potatoes at present and seem to expect higher prices. A few carlots offered this week brought $1 per bag.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

BUTTER.—Choice dairy butter is coming in slowly. The demand for the good product is heavy and the prices are firm. The surplus stock of dairy which had been accumulating all summer has been gotten rid of and the market at present is in a healthy condition. The demand for creamery is good and the market is strong. We quote: Dairy, 1-lb. prints, 18 to 19c.; large rolls, 16 to 18c.; tubs, 16 to 17c.; inferior tubs, 14 to 15c.; creamery prints, 23 to 24c. and creamery solids, 22 to 23c. per lb.

CHEESE.—The market for cheese, both in this country, the United States and Great Britain, is strong. In New York the prices have advanced to 13¾c., an appreciation of ¼c. since last week. The price in Great Britain is 62s., as reported by a private cable this week. This is equal to a parity of about 13c. at Canadian shipping points. The local prices are 13 to 13¼c. for the finest qualities, according to quantity.

POULTRY AND GAME.

DRESSED POULTRY.—The arrivals of poultry this week have been light and prices are firmer. The demand is brisk. We quote: Turkeys, 11 to 12½c.; geese, 7 to 8c.; ducks, 8 to 10c. per lb., or 60c. to $1 per pair; old chickens, 35 to 40c. and young, 40 to 75c. per pair.

LIVE POULTRY.—There have been light receipts of live poultry this week and the prices are therefore up a little. We quote: Turkeys, 8 to 9c.; geese, 5 to 6c.; ducks, 7c. to 8c.; chickens, young, 7c. to 8c. and old, 5 to 6c. per lb.

GAME.—There has been quite a holiday demand for game and the stocks are getting light. Our quotations are as follows: Teal, 20c. per pair; pin tails, 30 to 35c.; black ducks, 70 to 75c.; butterballs, 30 to 35c.; red heads, 60c. to 65c. and blue bills, 20 to 30c.

FISH.

There is an active market for all lines of frozen fish. Fresh herring are nearly all out of the market. In sympathy with the 10c. advance in Baltimore oysters, the prices here have been put up 10c. per gallon. Smoked and prepared fish are moving out freely. We quote: Frozen fish, trout, 7 to 7½c.; perch, 4 to 5c.; pike, 6c.; British-Columbian salmon, 15 to 20c.; whitefish, 7 to 7½c.; mackerel, 15 to 20c.; rock bass, 4c.; halibut, 15c.; blue pike, 4c.; live lobsters, 25c. per lb.; oysters, $1.05 to $4.80 in small pails and $6.75 to $7.50 for large; smoked ciscoes, $1.25 per basket; Digby herring, 75c. per bundle; finnan haddies, 7 to 8c. in 15-lb. boxes; codfish, $4.50 for 25-lb. boxes and $1.80 for 2 doz. box; quail on toast, 5½c. in boxes; boneless cod, 4½c per lb.; ciscoes, $1.25 per basket; kippered herring, $4 per case of 4 doz. tins; Labrador herring, in half-barrels, $3 and lake herring, $4; salt sea salmon, $8 to $10 per 100 lb.; salt sea mackerel, $2; lake herring, $4; frozen sea herring, $2.25 per 100; bloaters, Yarmouth, $1.25 to $1.50 per box.

GRAIN, FLOUR AND BREAKFAST FOODS.

GRAIN.—The offerings have been large and the prices are easier. Buying has been active, and our quotations are as follows: Red wheat, 72c.; white wheat, 72c.; barley, 40 to 45c.; oats, 34c.; peas, 76c.; buckwheat, 52c.; rye, 50c. per bushel on track, Toronto.

FLOUR.—The prices of flour are steady with a good demand. The buying is principally in small lots. Quotations are: Ontario patents, in bags, $3.35 to $3.65; Hungarian patents, $4.10 to $4.20; Manitoba bakers', $3.75 to $3.90; straight roller, $3.40 to $3.50 per bbl.

BREAKFAST FOODS.—There is a good demand for all the standard brands of breakfast foods. The prices are steady. We quote: Oatmeal, atandard and granulated, in carlots on track, $4.30; standard rolled oats, in carlots, $4.10 per barrel in bags; in wood, 15c. extra, and for broken lots, 25c. per bbl. extra; rolled wheat, $2.25 per 100 lb. bbl.; cornmeal, $4; split peas, $4.75; pot barley, $4, in bags; in wood, 15c. extra; Swiss food, per case, $2.88.

HIDES, SKINS AND WOOL.

HIDES.—These are weak without any quotable change, owing to a decline on the Chicago market. The offerings are heavy, of poor quality, and are not in good demand. We quote: No. 1 green, 8c.; No. 2 green, 7c.; No. 1 green,steers, 8½c.; No. 2 green, steers, 7½c.; cured, 8½ to 9c. per lb.

CALF SKINS.—These are selling freely. Our quotations are as follows: Veal skins, 6 to 14 lb. inclusive, No. 1, 10c.; No. 2, 8c.; do, 15 to 20 lb. inclusive, No. 1, 9c.; No. 2, 7c.; deacons (dairies), 60 to 70c. each.

WOOL.—There is an active demand for wool, owing to strong Old Country markets, and prices here are up 1c. per lb. We quote: Unwashed, 8 to 8½c.; fleece, 15c.; pulled wools, super, 15 to 16c. and extra, 19 to 20c.

SHEEPSKINS.—These are in good demand at 75c. each.

TALLOW.—The offerings are large and the prices are weak. Jobbers are buying at 6 to 6¼c. and selling at 6½ to 6¾c.

SEEDS.

The seed market is quiet. The offerings are limited and the demand is small, and no improvement in the deliveries is looked for until the new year. At outside points $6.25 to $6.75 is paid for red clover and $5.75 to $6.75 for alsike. There is practically no timothy offering, and prices are nominal at $1.50 to $1.85 per bushel.

---

MARKET NOTES.

Oysters have advanced 10c. per gallon.

Canned poultry have advanced 5 per cent.

There is a firmer feeling in poultry this week.

The stocks of Valencia raisins in London are small.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, December 18, 1902.

GROCERIES.

THE demand for holiday goods this year has been eminently satisfactory, all houses reporting an excellent trade. During the first of the week warm weather enabled jobbers to ship perishable goods by freight, and they were looking for a whole week of mild weather to allow of their making all their shipments of such goods. Among the price changes this week are canned peas, which are 5c. higher for the lower grades. Sisal ropes are ½c. lower, being now quoted at 12 to 13½c., according to size. The scarcity of sardines is very marked. The catch was a failure both on the French and Portuguese coasts. Shads are also scarce. On the local market western brands of baked beans are in short supply at present; this is due to the lateness of the season in canned vegetables and the extra work required of the canneries, which left them but little time to provide for the demand for baked beans. Salt has advanced in price, as it is now necessary to store it instead of leaving it on the wharves. The present price is 52 to 55c.

SUGAR.

On the 9th inst., refined sugars on the New York market were advanced 10c., and in expectation of a similar advance, buyers placed good orders with Montreal jobbers. But no advance was made on the local market, and in New York on the 15th inst., the price was reduced again to the former figure, no business having been done at the advance. Locally, there is no quotable change. Montreal refiners have withdrawn their No. 2 grade of granulated sugar from the market. Granulated sugar is now worth $3.80 and yellows, $3.15 up to $3.75.

TEAS.

A very good demand is reported on the local market for dusts, siftings and fannings; these are somewhat scarce at present and the prices are firm. The Indian market is now closed and prices are in consequence a little higher. The Ceylon market has followed this advance. There is a good demand for Ceylons. Although there were 4,500,000 lb. more exported from Ceylon this year than last, yet the consumption, from one cause or another, has also increased, and to such an extent that there has not been left the same quantity as last year in holders' hands. Japan low-grades are in fair demand, but there is not a great deal on the market; in fact, it is reported that two or three houses have sold all their stocks. Gunpowder teas, in some cheap grades, have arrived in small quantities on this market, and are offered at 15c. per lb.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The demand for Barbados molasses is still unsatisfactory and business is by no means as brisk as was expected by most jobbers. This is said to be due to a Halifax concern which is offering some cheap stuff which is called Barbados molasses, and which it is supposed the trade have been buying. The price of Barbados is now 23 to 24c.; New Orleans, 16 to 17c.; Antigua, 24c.; Porto Rico, 38c. In corn syrups there is little doing. We quote: In bbls., 3c.; in ½-bbls., 3½c.; in ¼-bbls., 3¾c.; in 38½-lb. pails, $1.40 and in 25-lb. pails, $1.10.

SPICES.

Prices on spice have undergone no change, though the market, both locally and in New York, retains all its firmness. Quotations are as follows: Nutmegs, 35 to 55c. per lb., as to size; penang mace, 45 to 50c. per lb., as to quality; pimento, ground, 12½ to 15c.; cloves, 15 to 25c.; pepper, ground, black, 17 to 22c., according to grade; white, 25 to 27c.; ginger, whole Cochin, 15 to 17c.; Japan, 13 to 14c.; Jamaica, 16 to 20c.; Afghan, 12 to 13c.; ground Japan, 15c.; Cochin, 16 to 17c.; Jamaica, 20 to 22c.; and Afghan, 13 to 14c.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

There is no change whatever on this market, which is steady under a fairly active demand. We quote: B rice, in bags, $3.02½; in half-bags, $3.07½; in quarter-bags, $3.12½; in pockets, $3.17½. In ten-bag lots an allowance of 10c. is made. CC rice, $2.92½, in bags; $2.97½ in half-bags; $3.02½ in quarter-bags and $3.07½ in pockets. In the open territory prices are about 10c. less. Patna rice is worth 4 to 5c. per lb. and tapioca, 3½c.

CANNED GOODS.

The market is still very firm all round, though, except in peas, no actual change in prices has been made. The lowest price obtainable from jobbers now in peas is 95c., an advance of 5c. over the previous week. We quote: Tomatoes, $1.60 to $1.75; corn, 95c.; peas, 95c. to $1.20; string beans, 87½c. to 90c.; strawberries, $1.45 to $1.60; blueberries, $1.25; raspberries, $1.45 to $1.60; gooseberries, $1.45 to $1.60; pears, 2s, $1.60 to $1.70; 3s, $2.10 to $2.15; peaches, 2s, $1.65 to $1.70; 3s, $2.50 to $2.75; 3-lb. apples, 85 to 90c.; gallon apples, $2.10 to $2.20; 2-lb. sliced pineapples, $2.20 to $2.30; grated pineapples, $2.50; pumpkins, $1 per dozen; spinach, $1.50; sugar beets, 95c. to $1; salmon, pink, 92 to 95c.; spring, $1.25; Rivers Inlet red sockeye, $1.30; Fraser River red sockeye, $1.40.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

CURRANTS.—The demand for Christmas trade has been good, and there is still a fair movement. Prices are: Fine Filiatras, 3¾c. in cases; cleaned, 5⅝c.; in 1-lb. cartons, 6¼c. and finest Vostizzas, 6¼ to 7c. per lb.

SULTANA RAISINS.—The market is active. Prices range from 9 to 12c., the latter price for 1-lb. packages.

VALENCIA RAISINS.—The market is firm under an active demand. We quote: Finest off-stalk, 7 to 7½c.; selected, 7½c. to 8c. and layers, 8 to 8½c. per lb.

FIGS.—There is no change. Comadres are quoted at $1.20 per tapnet and Eleme figs at 10½ to 20c. per lb.

DATES.—The selling price is 4c., which is very cheap, as at present it would cost more than that to import them.

MALAGA RAISINS.—There is a great scarcity in these. "Royal Buckingham Clusters" are pretty well exhausted. There are practically no boxes and but very few ¼-lb. boxes. The latter sell at $1.15. We quote as follows: London layers, $1.75 to $1.90; "Connoisseur Clusters," $2.15 to $2.50; "Royal Buckingham Clusters," quarter-boxes, $1.15; "Excelsior Windsor Clusters," $4.50 to $4.60; ¼s, $1.30 to $1.40.

CALIFORNIAN RAISINS.—Prices are steady. There is a good demand. Prices follow: Loose muscatels, 7¾ to 8c.; seeded, in 1-lb. packages, 9¼ to 10c.; in 12-oz. packages, 7½c. per lb.

PRUNES.—There are no more 70-80s in Oregon prunes; 60-70s are now on the market at 6¼c. There is a good trade doing, and our quotations are still as follows: 8½c. for 40-50s; 8c. for 50-60s; 7¾c. for 60-70s; 7½c. for 70-80s; 6¾c. for 80-90s; 6½c. for 90-100s. Oregon prunes (Italian style) are quoted as follows: 40-50s, 7½c.; 50-60s, 7 to 7½c.; 60-70s, 6¼c.; 90-100s, 4½ to 4¾c. per lb.

NUTS.

Shelled almonds, 28 lb. to the box, are offered this week at 28c. Otherwise there has been no change in prices. keen to sell. Tomatoes, $3.50; corn, $2.10; peas, $2.

CANNED FRUITS.—Gallon apples have arrived and are quoted at $1.35 to $1.40 per doz. Other canned fruits are in normal demand and without change of prices.

DRIED AND EVAPORATED FRUITS.—The trade in raisins and currants is heavy as is usual at this season. There has been great difficulty in supplying orders for seeded raisins, owing to the slowness of delivery by the railways. Fine off-stalk, $2.25 to $2.30; layer raisins, $2.50 to $2.55; Sultana, 9¾c.; choice table fruit, in 22-lb. boxes, $1.70 to $2.75, according to quality and brand; muscatels, 7½ to 8½c.; seeded muscatels, 9½ to 10c. Currants, 4¾ to 5½c., and 1c. additional for cleaned fruit.

CANDIED PEEL.—Lemon, 9c.; orange, 9½c.; citron, 12½c.; cut and mixed peels, in 1-lb. drums, $1.80 per dozen.

GREEN FRUITS.—The Christmas trade promises to be a heavy one. Stocks in the city are large and well assorted, and jobbing houses are busy getting orders on the heated cars. Prices are without change. We quote: Oranges, navels, $5.50 to $6; seedlings, $4; Mexicans, $5; Tokay grapes, $3 per case; Malagas, $8 per keg; lemons, $6 per case; cranberries, $10 to $11 per barrel; bananas, $3 to $3.50 per bunch.

HONEY.—There is a fair demand for both comb and strained. Strained honey, in 1-lb. glass jars, $4.50 per case and $2.40 for comb.

SUGAR.—Granulated, $4.45; light yellows, $3.85. Lump sugar, $5 and icing sugar, $4.75 to $4.80.

FLOUR.—There is a very active domestic trade, but prices seem to stick at the same dead level of $2 base for best Hungarian patent.

ROLLED OATS.—Very good market and prices are unchanged at $1.75 for the 80-lb. sack. There is a good demand also for all classes of package breakfast foods, of which there would seem to be a new one daily. We quote: Buckwheat flour, in packets, per doz., $1.50; buckwheat flour, per sack, $3.25; ditto, per half-sack, $1.65; rolled wheat, per sack of 80-lb., $2.25; wheat granules, per sack of six 10-lb. bags, $2; granulated oatmeal, per 100 lb., $2.80; standard oatmeal, per 100 lb., $2.80; cornmeal, sacks, per 100 lb., $1.80; ditto, half-sacks, 92c.; white beans, choice, per bushel, $2.40; split peas, per sack, $2.70; whole peas, per lb., 2¼c.; pearl barley, Ontario, per sack, $3.30; pot barley, Ontario, per sack, $2.20.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, December 15, 1902.

THE wholesale grocery trade has been very active during the past week in all lines of seasonable goods, including dried and green fruits, fancy biscuits, confections, and various other holiday goods. There has also been a fair trade in other general lines. The week compares very favorably with the corresponding season last year, in which trade was exceptionally good. The retail trade has also been more than an average one. Money seems to be plentiful and those who have it are free to spend it. Even among the workpeople this condition prevails. Work has been plentiful and at the holiday season they will spend largely, even if they run the risk of being close-hauled before the rush of spring work sets in.

Sugar is still firm. Though there was lately a decline of 10c. at Montreal, and about the same time an advance of a like amount in New York, the price here remained steady, as it was considered that the changes were only the result of local conditions, and a reversion to the old figure might take place at any time. It has been before noted, with reference to Halifax merchants, that with uncertain and unexplained fluctuations in the market, they are rather conservative and only advance or decline their prices when a real necessity compels the same. No doubt this tends to the stability and greater regularity of business.

Country produce has not been coming in so well during the last week as in former years, but there will probably be considerable come in this week. Turkeys have been quoted (wholesale) at 13c., but that article is scarce and they will be up to 15c. before Christmas. One dealer has contracted for a large quantity in P. E. Island, and this is the figure he expects to place on it. Good creamery butter is very scarce and many families are having to use a grade lower. Butter prices are firm with an advancing tendency. Eggs are exceptionally scarce since the cold weather came on, and best fresh are retailing at 40c. per dozen.

Since the weather changed and brought good roads throughout the country and

There is no better trade-winner than a good article - Sell your customers address orders to 12 Front St. East - Toronto and they will receive prompt attention a chance for the farmers to get their hay off the marshes, considerable of that article has changed hands at prices ranging close to $10. Much is being held in the hope of higher prices. Since the close of navigation from the outports in P. E. Island, there has been a firmer feeling in oats, as the expense will be much greater in transportation by steamer and rail than by schooners and other craft. The steamer Shelly cleared from Charlottetown last week for Finland with a cargo of 136,000 bushels of oats. It is stated that these oats have been ordered by the Russian Government for seed purposes.

There is no change in the Southern fish markets, and trade is dull here. Prices have further declined in Newfoundland.

OTTAWA TRADE GOSSIP.

THE past week has been a busy one with retailers. Farm produce is scarce. Good butter, poultry of all kinds, and potatoes command good prices. The sugar market is firm. Canneh goods are selling well for this season of the year. Retailers say their customers are buying in quantities for fear of having to pay higher prices. An advance of ½ to 1c. per lb. has taken place on Californian raisins.

EUCHRE AND SMOKING PARTY..

The Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association held a Euchre and Smoker in Booth's Hall on the 9th inst., which proved to be a great success. Those who attended last year's party pronounced this one the best. About 130 grocers and their friends among the wholesale trade, together with outside travellers who happened to be in the city, were present.

A committee of the Association met each one as he came in and introduced him to one another until about 9 p.m., when the game started. Ten games were played, which resulted in six tieing for first place and four for the "Booby." The final saw off for first place was won by Mr. J. O'Neill, who received a beautiful briar pipe, donated by Provost & Allard. The "Booby" prize was captured by Mr. Rae, of The "Blue Ribbon" Tea Company, of Toronto. Mr. Geo. Atkinson captured the prize of a case of "Bee" starch, offered by Snowdon-Forbes, of Montreal, to the grocer securing the highest number of games.

Refreshments were then served and were partaken of heartily. After the inner man was well satisfied, the following programme was carried out:

Dance—"Irish Jig"—Master Bazil Bambrick.
Song—Stuart de la Ronde.
Recitation—John E. Cox.
Song—F. F. Meyer.
Instrumental—Arial Bros.
Song—F. Durocher.
Speech—President Provost.

An orchestra dispensed music during the game so that at no time during the evening was it unpleasant for those who did not play.

There were present, besides the retail grocers of the city: Mr. Snowdon, of Snowdon-Forbes, Montreal; Mr. Rae, of The "Blue Ribbon" Tea Co., Toronto; Mr. Fred. Mitchell, of E. W. Gillett, Toronto; Mr. A. Provost, of Provost & Allard; Mr. Gerald Fitzgerald, and Mr. Hy. Higgert, of H. N. Bate & Sons, and Messrs. J. E. Cox, W. Austin, and C. Booth, of J. G. Whyte & Sons.

Inquiries are being made in Ottawa for the brushes belonging to fruit-cleaners. Some grocers here would be glad to see addresses in next week's "Grocer."

Tobaccos, Cigars, and Smokers' Accessories

A DEPARTMENT FOR RETAIL MERCHANTS.

CHRISTMAS AND THE SMOKER.

THE season is upon us when a man must accept his wife's "2-fors" for which she paid $7.50 for a box of 50, and convince her that she could have got him nothing he wished more; that he could never have afforded to get them himself; that the next month will be happier on account of those cigars; that her choice is worthy of a connoisseur, etc.

He will tell her that he really must take them down to the office to show "the boys" what his wife gave him for Christmas. Then he carefully ties them up before her, in the same tinted perfumed paper and pink string in which she gave them to him and starting out with the parcel conspicuously held in his hand—exchanges the lot for a morning paper with the first newsboy he meets.

That is one of the seasonable Christmas jokes and we would advise no woman to buy her husband's cigars unless she knows exactly what he smokes and has it written down. Still, a woman with a husband who smokes has a very easy time picking presents for him. Let the dealer who handles smokers' accessories bring them forward now and he can feel sure that every woman whom he induces to buy will have a pleased husband on Christmas morning.

A few of the sundries to be shown are pipes of different shapes, makes and prices, cleaners, trays, matchsafes, pipe-racks, tobacco pouches and cigar and cigarette holders. One of the most useful presents a wife can give is a cigar or cigarette case. The best cigar case is not the leather one, as it does not protect the cigar, which breaks so easily in the pocket. Handle a metal one—some light metal like aluminum—with places for three cigars, and you are sure to have good sales. This case fits the pocket, protects the cigar and holds all the cigars the average man needs at one time.

Bring these sundries up to a counter where they can be seen, or, better still, put them in the window. They make a neat display and will be found an easy way to dispel the perplexity of many a woman when looking for a present for her husband.

CIGAR FACTORY BURNED.

The immense five-storey factory in Montreal, manufacturing the "Stonewall Jackson" cigar, was completely destroyed by fire on December 14. The fire starting shortly after four o'clock in the morning burned well on into the afternoon in spite of the efforts of the whole brigade, who could do no more than save the adjoining buildings.

The morning was bitterly cold and the ten hours' fight of the firemen was one they will ever remember. When they arrived the ground floor was wrapped in flames and it was found impossible to save anything. The entire stock, including over a million cigars, was consumed, making a loss of from $50,000 to $60,000.

Mr. John Michaels, the proprietor, resumed work as best he could the following day, so that lovers of that cigar will be deprived of it for as short a time as possible.

The insurance on the factory will aggregate over $55,000, which is divided as follows:

|---|---|
| Royal | $16,000 |
| North British and Mercantile | 4,000 |
| Norwich Union | 5,000 |
| Imperial | 8,250 |

INCREASE IN TOBACCO CULTURE.

Tobacco culture is increasing everywhere, not only in the area of land under tobacco cultivation, but in the actual number of countries which can fairly lay claim to the title of tobacco-producing States. Formerly Cuba, the Southern States of America and the Philippines were responsible—at all events in name—for practically all the tobacco consumed in the British Isles, the Eastern products grouped under the name of Turkish having then no great vogue with us. Then India joined the list, Sumatra began producing her "wrapuers," and Borneo, Burma, the Canaries, and other countries soon made their appearance in the price catalogues. Development has since taken place all along the line, and it would be interesting to compare the present output of Egyptian cigarettes—chiefly made of Greek tobacco, it may be remarked in parenthesis--with that of a score of years ago. The production of Mexican tobacco, according to a recently issued consular report, has lately increased to a very large extent, owing to the starting of new plantations in the States of Vera Cruz, Oaxaca, and elsewhere, and the amount of leaf estimated for this year's gathering is not less than 17,000,000 lb. Last year Mexico produced 207,000,000 packets of cigarettes and 120,000,000 cigars, and the manufacturers and the planters claim that the quality has so greatly improved that it is almost if not quite equal to the best products of Cuba. Nor are our colonies unrepresented in the record of this expansion of a world-wide industry. Queensland, we learn from the official reports, is now both a producer and manufacturer of tobacco on a quite respectable scale. Her farmers cured nearly 500,000 lb of leaf last season, and her six tobacco factories manufactured 612,350 lb of tobacco, 28,857 of cigarettes, and 1,463 lb. of cigars.—Home and Colonial Mail.

THE TOBACCO TRUST.

"THE CANADIAN GROCER" has from time to time endeavored to keep its readers informed in regard to the different phases of the tobacco question, which has for some time occupied a great deal of the attention of the trade. In pursuance of this policy we herewith reproduce the following article, written by C. J. Halton, president of the Retail Cigar and Tobacco Dealers' Association :

"The pursuit of happiness is one of the inalienable rights of the peoule, and the courts have given an interpretation to that phrase. The pursuit of happiness means the right of every citizen to earn his bread in pursuit of some occupation, and that right is taken away by the trusts. By trusts is not meant legitimate corporate wealth, for legitimate corporate wealth and power are the most valuable and desirable things, but when corporate wealth assumes such proportions that it aims to control the necessaries of life, it then becomes incumbent upon the people to destroy them. Tobacco is essentially a necessity, and the most pernicious of all trusts is the Tobacco Trust. It started in 12 years ago by organizing to prevent competition on the part of manufacturers, and has been so successful that to-day it controls 90 per cent. of the manufacturing interests in tobacco throughout the United States, Canada and Cuba.

"Not satisfied with the control of the manufacturing of tobacco, it started after the jobbers of tobacco, and by domineering, threatening and menacing tactics, it has succeeded in driving the jobber out of business. It is now going after the retailer. To support its many high-salaried officers and pay the heavy running expenses and losses on certain branches of its business, it has decided to enter the field and reach the consumer directly.

"This tobacco octopus told the jobber 'you must handle our product or you will not handle any at all.' When it got him within its grasp, they ground him down so that even in handling exclusively of its product, he could not make a livelihood and he was driven out of business. It then approached the retailer and told him that he must handle its product, or he could not handle any, but there it found a different proposition. Although the cupidity of many of these retailers compelled them to submit to these domineering tactics, it has not as yet succeeded in driving the retailer out of business. It has, however, entered the field in competition with him, and has organized—although it denies it, but unsupportedly so—a corporation known as The United Cigar Stores Company, Limited, which has opened up stores in the various large cities throughout the United States, fitted them up elegantly, by a lavish expenditure of money, paid large rents, which it seems impossible to believe that their profits would permit, and are going after the retail business by cut-rate tactics, selling cigars at one and two cents apiece that as standard brands formerly sold for five and ten cents, to attract the consumer, and when it has succeeded in getting control of the retail stores, the next tentacle that will spread itself out from the body of this enormous octopus will be one to control the consumer.

"Tobacco is indeed a necessity, the Internal Revenue Reports for the six months of this year showing a consumption of 275,000,000 pounds of tobacco throughout the United States, which means that the Trust can compel the consumer to buy its product and it will levy heavy taxes upon him. There is one way to prevent this, and that is, you must fight the devil with fire."

NOTES OF THE TOBACCO TRADE.

Daniel McCabe, tobacconist, Peterboro', Ont., has assigned to O. De Laplante.

The creditors of The Parkdale Cigar Company, Toronto, held a meeting on December 15.

Wm. H. Walsh, a cigar traveller residing in St. Thomas, was arrested in that city at the instigation of the temperance people, charged with attempting to stuff the ballot box on referendum day.

Wm. Wiley, a prosperous grocer in London, Ont., is an appreciative reader of THE CANADIAN GROCER. He has taken it for some years, and says he would not be without it for several times the subscription price. He cannot see how any up-to-date grocer could begrudge $2 a year for such a good trade journal as THE GROCER.

WINDSOR RETAIL ASSOCIATION.

AT Windsor, on Tuesday evening, December 9, the local branch of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada held their regular monthly meeting. The president, A. E. Edgar, occupied the chair.

Four new members were admitted, as follows: Howell Bros., jewellers, Oulette avenue ; Jno. M. Lord, grocer, Aylmer avenue; Morton & Christie, hardware, etc., Sandwich street east, and Herman Burwaska, plumber, Sandwich street west.

The auditors' report for the year just closed was read, and on motion was adopted.

The secretary reported that he had carried out the instructions given him at the last meeting in writing to the chief of police informing him that certain merchants of the city were giving amusement-stamps in contravention of the by-law. Nothing having been done in the matter a committee was appointed to obtain evidence and make complaint against the offenders in the police court.

The president appointed the following committee to make arrangements for the first annual "At-Home" to be held next month : Honorary President Geo. H. Nairn, Auditor A. J. McTavish, and Secretary B. J. Davis.

The rest of the evening was taken up with a discussion of the advisability of forming trade sections, it having been shown that there are grocers and plumbers and hardwaremen sufficient to form these two sections. And it is hoped by the next meeting there will be a sufficient number of druggists to form another section.

The secretary was ordered to draw a warrant for the amount due the Central Association, and forward the same to the central secretary at Toronto.

There being no other business the meeting adjourned.

Christmas Window Displays

A Few Hints and Suggestions.

THE cold weather, the chilling winds and the masses of snow lying everywhere over the land tell us that Christmas is at hand. There is at this time of the year a great demand for goods for Christmas gifts and other purposes and the grocer therefore puts on his counters and shelves a suitable supply of holiday goods. To bring these goods before the public is then his endeavor, and accordingly he makes attractive window displays. At this time of the year there are hundreds of men, women and children who make it their practice to go round looking in at the attractions displayed in the windows.

Everything should be arranged in the windows for the nicer the window the greater the attention it is bound to create. The sightseers usually estimate the importance of the store by the beauties of its window displays. When the grocer puts nice things in his window and changes them often, keeping them clean and fresh, his business generally has a more prosperous tone about it than it otherwise would have. Nothing succeeds like success.

A common method of displaying goods is to appeal to the public with a large mass or quantity of articles. This mode is usually an effective one for drawing custom. The merchant puts out in front of his store half a dozen chickens, and he finds they attract little attention. Let him put out one or two hundred and there will be a than the usual amount of interest manifested in his store by the public. Provided his store is in a prosperous and thickly populated district, large enough to absorb all the goods offered, he will not have as much difficulty, the weather and time of year being favorable, in getting rid of his two or three hundred as he would of his half-dozen.

The interest aroused by the display of one hundred articles at one time is enormously greater than the interest created by the hisplay of a dozen.

A SIMPLE FRUIT DISPLAY

may be arranged by fixing the floor of the window so that it may incline from the back towards the front, and dividing it into six or eight squares. In each square place a pile of dried fruit, currants, raisins, figs, dates and nuts. This display may be varied by laying out the floor of the window in the shape of a star in the rays of which one kind of fruit may be displayed and the rest of the window filled in with currants or raisins. The fruit need not be laid on the squares too deep; an inch deep ought to suffice to make the display attractive and give it the appearance of being large in quantity.

Another fruit window could be constructed by placing in rows green fruit, like apples, oranges and grapes. There should be placed in the window narrow boxes, as long as the window is wide, and the fruit piled neatly in rows along the boxes. These, by being covered over with green or colored tissue paper, built up with fruit, will look attractive.

DISPLAYING CANDIES.

A simple way of showing off candies advantageously and effectively is to pile neatly on several plates many different kinds of the sweet stuff, and arranging it in the window in an artistic way. A large central pile, placarded, should be built and the plates placed around it in a way that will attract attention. Candies always sell well at Christmas time.

A nice show-window can be made with candies in pound and half-pound fancy boxes. The lids of the boxes should be taken off and the boxes arranged in several groups. The brilliantly colored papers lining the boxes, together with the variously bright colors of the candies themselves, make the display a brilliant one. A central pile or arrangement of boxes, larger than the rest, may be worked in with advantage. Too much should not be put in the window at one time, nor should the display be left too long in the window without changing. A plant or flower in such a window will add to its beauty.

A CHRISTMAS WINDOW

may be arranged by building a mantelpiece and fireplace in the window, and hanging up some stockings by the fireplace. A Christmas tree thickly hanging with candies, toys and fruits may be built on one side of the fireplace. The latter is built by piling a single column of round cans on top of each other, five or six cans high, to form the edge of the fireplace opening. On each side a similar column may be built, the two columns being about two or two and a half feet apart. A board should be placed across the top of the two columns. On each side of the cans place square packages of equal size, of breakfast foods or other goods done up in a similar fashion. The cartons should be placed three rows wide and piled up three or four rows above the top of the fireplace opening, the making of which we have just described above. Similar packages should be placed on the board over the opening until they reach with the others a uniform height along the top. At each end, outside the cartons, there should be placed two rows of round cans, like those used in building the outer edge. A board then may be laid across the top with a row of empty cartons nailed upon it and another board placed over all. On top, any fancy articles may be displayed, such as attractive bottled goods, boxes of candies, etc. In the fireplace two or three logs may be placed and by means of an electric light and colored tissue paper at night there may be produced a pleasing effect.

A CANDLE OR LAMP

behind the logs may be used if the electric light is not obtainable. This display may be varied a good deal to suit the taste and facilities of the grocer.

COCOA IN TRINIDAD.

Gordon Grant & Co., Trinidad, in their report of December 3 regarding cocoa, say: "Moderate supplies are being marketed but on a much smaller scale than was generally expected by this time. A favorable change in the weather has enabled good progress to be made with picking and drying and a substantial increase in deliveries is anticipated by the end of the month. Keen competition still continues regardless of the depressing advices from consuming markets, and ordinary quality readily commands $12.75 to $12.90 per fanega, whilst good red to fine estates are in active demand at $13.00 to $13.50, according to quality, chiefly for shipment to the United States markets. Clearances during the fortnight amounted to 5,955 bags, of which 2,852 bags went to New York and exports from October 1 to date amount to 21,003 bags, as compareh with 4,606 bags for the corresponding period last year."

---

The smelt fishing season opened December 1, and fishermen of Shediac and Buctouche met with great success. 150 tons were caught the first day at Buctouche, and at Shediac 100 tons.

A WORTHY INSTITUTION.

WHEN the farmer puts his seed under mother earth he expects it to bear bushels of grain in a few months.

So it is with the merchant. He invests money in merchandise, counting on a profitable turnover.

A father pays for his son's education anticipating that it will provide the young man with the powers of mind to put the body and head at work in gaining a livelihood.

Yet the seed may not bring forth grain, the merchandise may not be sold at a profit, and the young man may not reach the ideals of his father.

In all these instances the expenditure of money is a speculation. It may bring happiness and it may not.

Do you want to put your money into active work where you are sure—no speculation this time—it will reap happiness not only to yourself but to suffering children?

A Scene in the Sick Children's Hospital.

To-day the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, is performing a heavenborn mission on earth. It is renewing health, removing pain and straightening distorted limbs of hundreds of young Canadians, boys and girls, who will yet make their mark in this growing Dominion, but who, were it not for this noble institution, might have already filled an early grave.

That's where your dollar can find a way to bring you pleasure and profit without any doubts or fears as to the investment. Money is always at work. It is ceaseless in its labor, but in no spot in this fair Canada is it put to better service than at the Hospital for Sick Children. Step into the hospital any day in the week and you will see the fruits. Faces once pale and wrinkled are healthy and round; bodies once aching with pain are filled with life, and limbs once helpless are as active as bright Canadian boys and girls can make them.

The Hospital for Sick Children depends solely upon the generosity of the people of Canada. It requires $35,000 a year for its maintenance, and it stands to-day as a monument to the big hearts of our people.

It takes a dollar a patient per day to maintain the Hospital. The Ontario Government contributes $7,000 a year, or almost 17 cents per patient per day, for there are always at least 150 children under treatment. This amount from the Government is all expended on maintenance. Then the corporation of the city of Toronto gives $7,500, or 17 cents per patient per day, and remember, not for Toronto patients, but for every child no matter from what point he may come. And in addition to this Toronto citizens donate from $4,000 to $6,000 for the maintenance of all patients, to say nothing of the $4,000 contributed yearly by Toronto people towards maintaining cots they have founded in the Hospital.

Ten years ago the Hospital was encumbered with a mortgage. The building and its furnishings cost $150,000. The corporation of the city of Toronto contributed $20,000 and the citizens of Toronto gave $60,000. Year by year the mortgage has been reduced, and it is now paid.

The Hospital must proceed in performing its great mission. Money is needed to maintain it, and this appeal is made for that purpose. Hospital work cannot be conducted without money. To keep the machinery moving dollars and cents are needed. Nurses, domestics and officials have to live. Their wages must be paid.

Let every one who can spare a dollar forward it as quick as the good thought strikes them to Douglas Davidson, Secretary of the Hospital for Sick Children, or to J. Ross Robertson, Chairman of the Trust, College street, Toronto.

BRUSH CATALOGUE FOR 1903.

The United Factories, Limited, Toronto, have just issued their catalogue for 1903, which will be sent to the trade during the next few weeks. In addition to the numerous lines of painters', artists', household, toilet and factory brushes, horse brushes and stable brooms, brooms and whisks, woodenware and fibreware, baskets, mats, twines, cordage and display tables which the company have sold in past years, several new lines, and particularly of brushes, are being introduced to the trade. These new lines are expected by the company to meet with general favor, and should be examined carefully. The catalogue is well illustrated and very comprehensive, comprising 206 pages. A good feature of the work is a number of practical hints concerning the handling and use of brushes, which every grocer should allow his clerks to read. If you do not get a copy of this catalogue in the next week or so, drop a card to The United Factories, Limited, of Toronto, mentioning "The Canadian Grocer."

THE BARBADOS MOLASSES CROP.

CROP reports from Barbados are somewhat discouraging as will be seen by the following extracts from business circulars issued by the various exporters at the Island:

S. P. Munson, Son & Co., say: "The weather has been unusually dry and the crops are suffering materially so that the output of both sugar and molasses next year will be much below the average."

Clairmonte, Man & Co.: "We have practically had no rainy season this year and there is every probability of the next sugar crop being a short one. Sales of molasses to Canada during the present season have been 25,073 puncheons, as against 26,241 in 1901."

James A. Lynch & Co.: "There is no sign of any break in the weather and the estimate for the sugar crop grows smaller daily under such unfavorable conditions. In some districts the ratoons are already lost."

Jones & Swan: "Rain is greatly needed throughout the Island; the little that has fallen has been so small that in some parishes the canes have suffered considerably. A short crop next year is certain, a fact that Nova-Scotian shippers of lumber would do well to keep in mind."

If the deductions made by Barbados exporters are correct, and there seems to be such an unanimity of opinion that one can scarcely refuse to accept them, we shall probably see somewhat higher prices for molasses at the opening of the Barbados market in February. Old crop is now practically out of the market.

Canada has a double interest in the Barbados molasses industry. First, because we are large consumers and anything that decreases production has a tendency to increase price. In the second place, we supply lumber to the estate owners and we do not wish to see the demand reduced. Barbados seems to be in particularly hard luck this year. She had a smallpox epidemic and the Island, up to the present, is quarantined. Latest reports, however, say that the disease is now well stamped out and no doubt the restrictions placed on the port will shortly be removed.—The Maritime Merchant.

Too many Package Cereals already did you say?

Yes, and you say the fads have got to go—people are getting tired of them.

Now, if you find the Package Cereals burdensome, what's the best way to reduce your lines—keep on pushing everything you've got or gradually work all your trade into the line of least resistance?

Why not select one or two good ones and recommend them?—get your trade into the habit of asking for Tillson's Oats, for example.

You'll find it easy to sell Tillson's Oats—of course you know the power of advertising, especially the Tillson kind.

Now don't you think the bulk of your Cereal trade could be done on Tillson's Oats and one or two others? Try it.

Honesty Goes Hand in Hand With Prosperity.

If you are not honest you may prosper for a short time, but your fall will be swift and sure.

If you are honest and find that you do not prosper your case will stand investigation, and in nine cases out of ten the reason the honest grocer does not prosper is because he uses old and infirm scales in his business, and when he thinks he is selling a pound of sugar or rice, or anything else, he really is parting with about a pound and a quarter for the price of a pound.

Are you prospering as you should?

If not, it might be a good thing to look into the scale question. We have a Ball-Bearing Computing Scale which is HONEST. We guarantee this scale and sell it on easy terms.

ADVERTISING FRAUDS.

By J. L. Troy.

THE question of publicity, "advertising," is one of prime importance to the progressive business man. How to get the best results for the least money is a matter which interests every advertiser who has a message to convey to the public. Every up-to-date business man concedes that advertising well and judiciously placed in mediums of recognized worth and circulation pays. The selection of the proper medium requires careful consideration, as many unworthy fake schemes are constantly being foisted on the advertising public. There are more fakers in the advertising line possibly than in any other calling, due principally to the fact that the average business man is not so well posted in the matter of advertising as he might be. The average business man is altogether too willing to give ear to the plausible story of the slick advertising faker, who has, according to his own story, the best thing in the advertising line on earth to offer.

Some of the advertising fakes now worked successfully, particularly on this side of the line, are old. Notwithstanding all that, there are merchants thoughtless enough to try them and pay largely for the privilege of trying. Those are the merchants who will tell you that they spent two or three thousand dollars, as the case may be, last year in advertising, and that results were not satisfactory. All the money wasted in fake schemes is charged to advertising. The writer knows one firm that spent twelve hundred dollars last year, out of a total appropriation of two thousand, in fake advertising schemes purely and simply. This firm complained they did not get adequate returns for the amount spent in advertising and condemn advertising in unmeasured terms.

The reputable daily or weekly newspaper of known circulation for the retailer is unquestionably the best he can employ to reach the buying public. For the manufacturer, wholesaler or jobber, a reliable trade paper should be employed to carry his announcements to the merchant. We advise the advertising public to give a wide berth to the oily-tongued advertising faker. He arrives in our midst wearing a suave debonnair air, knows it all, is very smooth and plausible and usually catches the business man napping, and, of course, works him for an order.

He comes sometimes as the self-styled agent of some respectable fraternal society from whom he gets permission to get up a programme for a concert or entertainment. His modus operandi is this: He secures permission from the secretary or some person else in authority in some fraternal or other society organization or trade union to get up a programme, he agreeing to furnish the programme free of charge. He then goes among the business people soliciting advertisements from them in the name of the organization which gave him the privilege, levying blackmail purely and simply until he reaps a rich harvest.

Then, again, there is the faker who gets up hotel advertising, such as hotel registers, combination counter stands for hotels, blotters for the writing table, clocks set in a frame containing advertisements, writing desks with ads. in the back, etc. The gentleman who gets up this form of advertising, first gets the assent of the hotel proprietor to his proposition to furnish him with a register, or some other requisite free of charge. The next step is to secure the names of those from whom the hotelman buys his supplies.

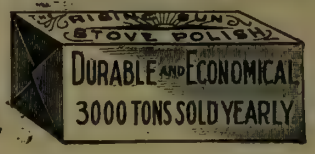
After the names have been secured the slick advertising faker goes around and solicits advertisements in the name of the hotel proprietor. Another case of blackmail, but he gets the advertisements and afterwards the cash.

Another is the so-called industrial number for some paper. The ad. faker in this case goes to some publisher of a weekly or daily and agrees to pay a certain sum of money for a certain number of copies of the paper to be published on a certain day, and distributed with the regular edition. That done, he proceeds to write a short sketch about the town, publishing a cut of the city hall and chief magistrate, perhaps. The rest of the number is made up of write-ups of the business houses for which he charges so much per line. He will tell an advertiser that the number of copies printed will be so much, when, as a matter of fact, not over one-fourth the number promised will be printed—often even less than that.

The fellow with the calendar fans, notions, and countless other things, all more or less worthless fakes appears on the scene quite frequently and gets his share of what is going.

The merchant who pays his money for such a class of advertising as we have just mentioned does not get value for his money. He is the man who will tell you that he spent so much money last year in advertising and it did not pay him, but when you come to analyze his advertising account you will find that the greater portion he wasted in some fake proposition or scheme.

A special Christmas publication recently secured nearly 200 advertisers. On the promise of 15,000 circulation several men used it who do not advertise in any of their local papers. As a matter of fact, only 200 copies were printed. They were used by the faker to leave with each advertiser when he collected his account.



Profitable advertising is not an accident; it is the result of careful thought along common-sense lines. If the advertiser is new in the business it would be well for him, perhaps, to consult with some of his friends in business who have advertised extensively and made a success of it. If he has no such friend in business with whom he can consult, then he should take into his confidence a man experienced in advertising, a capable honest man connected with some well-known honest publication, listen to his advice, and be guided by what he tells him. Always remember one thing—don't listen to the unknown advertising faker who is here to-day and away to-morrow. He is not out for your good, he is after your dollars.

Advertising well and judiciously placed in respectable newspapers and trade journals of known circulation pays, and pays well, but your money is absolutely thrown away when invested in fake advertising schemes.

MINNEAPOLIS MILLERS BUYING MANITOBA WHEAT.

Minneapolis millers have come on the markets of Manitoba and are purchasing hard wheat for grinding in bond at Minneapolis for export. Bell and Washburn, of the Washburn, Crosby Co., have already contracted for the delivery of 1,000,000 bush., chiefly through the Northern Elevator and Winnipeg Elevator Companies. This will be all shipped out of Manitoba by the Canadian Northern, Northern Pacific and Great Northern lines to Minneapolis, where one big mill will be set aside for the grinding of Manitoba wheat.

MEETING OF CANNED GOODS PACKERS.

THE Canadian Packers' Association met in Toronto on Thursday and Friday, December 18 and 19. Those present included: H. I. Matthews (president), Thos. J. Dake (inspector and secretary), W. A. Ferguson, Russell Bowlby, Wellington Boulter, David Marshall, —. Jasperson, James Doland, F. H. Lowrey, T. Owens, F. W. Hepburn, S. Nesbitt, James Campbell, —. Clark, —. Hegermann.

In regard to the pack of fruits and vegetables of this season, it was stated that in Quebec Province the pack of tomatoes was 10 per cent. and in Ontario 33⅓ per cent. of the ordinary one. There was a good pack of gallon apples and also of small fruits, but operations on the former were not completed, and definite estimates as to its extent were hardly yet obtainable. The pack of corn and peas was light. Canners were now busy with poultry, which it appeared would not turn out a large pack.

Seven factories which last season were closed up by the Association, the owners having been paid a certain amount of money to remain for a year out of the market, will, in all likelihood, be again in operation next season. "There will be no curtailment of the pack next year," said a well-known member of the Association to THE CANADIAN GROCER.

The canners this season are not making as large profits as the present prices would indicate, as a good many of them have had to reimburse their customers for unfilled orders.

Tomatoes from the United States have been placed on the Canadian market, and some samples of the Baltimore article were, on Thursday of last week, opened up at the Walker House, Toronto. While in color these were everything that could be desired, it was generally conceded that their flavor was not equal to that of the Canadian canned tomatoes.

There will be another meeting of the Association in February.

AN EVIDENCE OF BUSINESS ENTERPRISE

THE Sentinel-Review admires Canadian ability and Canadian enterprise. There is a clear case of it which is now attracting the attention of the public through the advertising columns of the press. It is so interesting a case that we draw attention to it in a manner entirely unusual in these columns. The case in point illustrates the influence of business enterprise through clever advertising. Everybody of late has been reading the Tillson oatmeal advertisements. The reason of this is simply that they are very cleverly gotten up. Both in matter and style they are equal to the best up-to-date advertising seen in American newspapers and magazines. The man who is doing the work is putting money into the pockets of the Tillsonburg firm. When American firms are deluging the country with health foods, it is a pleasure to see a Canadian company stand up on behalf of the old-fashioned oatmeal of our Scotch forefathers, made by modern methods, and declare that "it is a food, not a fad." This is a stroke of genius—beeause it is true, and it strikes a responsive chord in the public heart. We hear that the Tillson firm are "getting there" with a vengeance since they started to advertise in this style. Their success is a lesson to other Canadian manufacturers and business men. They are supplying the public with a first-class article; and they are putting it before people in an attractive way. Here is the whole secret of success. It has always been humiliating for us to see the way in which American firms prepare and advertise their goods in comparison to the small number of Canadian firms who do the same thing well. There are thousands of Canadian manufacturers and business men who could succeed by the simple expedient of improving their product, putting it up in more attractive form, and presenting it to the public in bright newspaper advertising. In scores of lines the Americans have invaded this country simply because Canadians have not been up-to-date. Bewailing this for many years past, it is a pleasure to see a Canadian, indeed a local firm, thoroughly up-to-date. We have long known that there were no better millers in Canada than the Tillsons of Tillsonburg. Newspaper readers must admit now that there are no cleverer advertisers. We take off our hat to the company! After reading the Tillson oatmeal advertisements we will stick to the Scotchman's diet. Sandy has long been thriving on what is "a food, not a fad."—Sentinel-Review, Woodstock, Ont.

THE JAPANESE EXHIBITION.

THE Canadian Commissioner to the Japanese Exhibition, to be held shortly at Osaka, Japan, is William Hutchinson. The Canadian building will be finished at Osaka about January 15. In regard to the Dominion being represented at this Exhibition, Mr. Nosse, Japanese Consul-General at Montreal, expressed himself to a reporter as believing that this country will derive great benefit therefrom. The Dominion will be enabled to make herself known not only in Japan, but throughout the Orient, thus creating a future market there for the surplus products of the soil, the forest, the sea and the mines of British Columbia and the Northwest Territories. There was made from Canadian flour a bread superior to all others, but at the present time a big business in flour, amounting to $3,000,000 a year, was transacted by United States firms with the Japanese army and navy. This business might be made come to this country.

ONTARIO FRUIT IN THE WEST.

LINUS WOOLVERTON, Grimsby, Ont., secretary of the Ontario Fruit Growers Association, stated to a reporter that he did not much fear the efforts that were being made by the British-Columbian fruit growers to control the Northwest fruit market. Ontario produces the fruit, and all that is necessary is to abandon the plan of shipping fruit on consignment to Winnipeg and other Western points.

No other trade would submit to the plan of shipping its products to the other side of the continent, with the prospect of their being dumped upon a glutted, demoralized market, and then put under the hammer and sold at whatever they will fetch. Winnipeg buyers now contract for British-Columbian fruit in the orchards, and they would contract for Ontario fruit if the growers would unite and would pack their apples according to certain standard grades, which are now being evolved under the workings of the Fruit Marks Act. With cold storage there is no longer need for growers to rush their fruit in by the train load on consignees, without knowing any of the conditions of the market, and bearing down prices to an unprofitable point. Under the consignment system Western dealers are not particular about the quality, because they like to see a glut, which will bear down all prices, and give them a chance to pick up good fruit cheap, but if they could only get fruit under contract they would be anxious to secure only the best fruit, which is the only kind that will stand the freight charges. Poor fruit ought never to be sent to the Northwest, but, whatever is done with it, it should be disposed of at the grower's lowest freight rate points, that is, as near home as possible.

THOMAS B. BAKER DEAD.

A prominent Northwestern business man died recently at Winnipeg in the person of Thomas B. Baker. Deceased was head of the Western Elevator Company, 55 years of age and a native of Brantford, Ont. He went West in 1881, started a general store in Moose Jaw in 1882, forming a partnership with Mr. Lea. He also was in the grain-buying business, and in 1889 removed to Winnipeg, forming a partnership with Alexander Reid, which firm was in 1901 incorporated with the Western Elevator Company, Limited.

MONTREAL WHOLESALERS.

The Wholesale Grocers' Association, of Montreal, held their annual general meeting on Friday, December 20. The business of most importance before the members was the election of officers for the ensuing year, which resulted in the return of last year's executive. The officers are now as follows :

President—Albert Hebert.
Vice-President—L. E. Geoffrion.
Treasurer—S. J. Carter
Directors—J. Ethier, D. L. Lockerby, J. E. Quintal.

D. L. Lockerby was chosen for nomination to the incoming council of the Board of Trade, as the representative of the Grocers' Association.

The Association had been notified by the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild that the general meeting of the latter body would be held in Toronto on January 21, and the Montreal Association was invited to suggest topics for discussion at the meeting. For this purpose there will be a meeting of the Montreal Association on Tuesday, December 30.

Albert Hebert, president, and S. J. Carter, treasurer, were appointed delegates to represent the Montreal Association at the meeting of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild.

The mistakes of others should protect every grocer from similar blunders. There are a few grocers who wish they had purchased

AND COLD STORAGE NEWS.

CANADIAN MEAT AND STORAGE PLANT.

U. S. Consul-General John L. Brittinger writes as follows from Montrealin regard to new plants to be built in Canada : "The meat-packing firm of Swift & Co., Chicago, recently purchased the property of the Fowlers Canadian Co., at Hamilton. A new pork-packing plant is to be erected which will be larger than any like establishment in the Dominion.

"Premier Peters, of Prince Edward Island, has announced an important agreement with a firm of Canadian and American capitalists which insures for the Island the most complete and modern outfit of cold-storage appliances that can be obtained. The capital of the company is $1,000,000. It pledges itself to establish three cold-storage warehouses, one in each county, with a capacity sufficient to handle all the animal and agricultural products of the Island, and to do a certain amount of additional business for Nova Scotia and Newfoundland.

"It will further establish at Charlottetown a canning factory capable of handling all the fruit and vegetables of Prince Edward Island ; and at the same place an immense pork-packing and meat-canning establishment, for the whole of the Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland. It is bound to maintain and operate all the above for 30 years, to expend $250,000 in the first year, and to pay annually $40,000 in wages in Prince Edward Island alone. In return, the Local Government guarantees an issue of mortgage bonds, for which the company is to provide a sinking fund, and grants exemption from taxation, to have effect at once. Monopoly is to be permitted."

DEAD MEAT INDUSTRY AT TORONTO.

The dead meat industry promoted by a large United States firm at Toronto Junction will occupy 20 acres west of the Union Stock Yards at that place. The new company will erect abattoirs and other necessary buildings, which will cost between $10,000 and $15,000. It is expected that 800 hands will be employed in the various works at the Junction.

PRIVATE CAPITAL IN MEAT BUSINESS.

Asked if the Dominion Government would aid the dead-meat industry, Hon. Sydney Fisher said to a reporter : "I don't want people to become possessed of the idea that Government aid is necessary, or is likely to be granted, in a matter of this kind. In the past I have expressed myself as opposed to Government subventions for such enterprises, on the ground that conditions were not such as to promise success. Conditions now are more propitious than they were, but I am not yet by any means sure that any necessity exists for Government aid. I am inclined to think the prevailing conditions are sufficiently favorable to justify the investment of private capital entirely, and if that is so it is better that private capital should undertake establishment of industry."

THE PROVISION MARKETS.

TORONTO.

There is practically no change in the market. Some dealers quote dressed hogs easier, but on the whole there is no change. On Tuesday the outlook was that there would be a greater demand for choice beef and mutton than characterizes this season. Our quotations are as follows : Dressed hogs, $7.25 to $7.50 per 100 lb. ; No. 1 beef, $7.00 to $7.50 per 100 lb. ; hind quarters, $7.50 to $8.00 per 100 lb. ; front quarters, $4.50 to $5.00 per 100 lb. ; veal, $6.50 to $9.00 ; lamb, $6.75. Choice export cattle, $5.00 to $5.50 ; medium cattle, $4.50 to $5.50 ; other grades of cattle, $2.40 to $3.00 ; live hogs, selects, 6c. per lb., and fats and lights, $5.75 per 100 lb.

In provisions the demand is very light. Medium hams are quoted by some ¼c. cheaper, and heavy mess pork 50c. easier. Our quotations are : Long clear bacon, 10¾ to 11c. ; smoked breakfast bacon, 14 to 15c. ; roll, 11½ to 12c. ; medium hams, 13¼ to 13½c. ; large hams, 12½c. ; shoulder hams, 11 to 11½c., and backs 14½ to 15c. ; heavy mess pork, $21.00 to $22.00 ; short cut, $23.00 to $23.50 ; lard, in tierces, 10¾ to 11c. per lb. ; tubs, 11 to 11¼c., and pails, 11¼ to 11½c. ; compounds, 8¼ to 10c. ; plate beef, $15.00 per 200-lb. bbl.

MONTREAL.

There have been no quotable changes in the market this week, although it is reported that prices on mess pork are being shaded somewhat by some dealers. In hams and bacon, prices are unchanged and the market is steady.

There has been a fair demand for dressed hogs. Frozen stock are somewhat higher in price, but the market is steadier at present. In a jobbing way, the price of frozen stock is $7.75 to $7.85, and fresh killed abattoir hogs sell fairly well at $8.25 to $8.50 per 100 lb.

The movement in lard is fairly satisfactory. The demand for compound brands has been on the increase of late. Quotations are : Pure Canadian lard, $2.30 to $2.32½ per pail ; Fairbank's "Boar's Head" lard compound, 9⅜c. tierce basis, with extras as follows : 60-lb. tubs, ¼c. over tierce ; 20-lb. tin pails, ¼c. ; 20-lb. wood pails, ½c. ; 10-lb. tins, ¾c. ; 5-lb. tins, ⅞c. ; 3-lb. tins 1c. Snow White and Globe compound, $1.80 to $1.90 per pail ; Cottolene, 11¼c. for 20-lb. pails, and 11⅛c. for 60-lb. tubs, for Quebec and Ontario ; hams, 12 to 14c. ; heavy Canadian short cut mess pork, $24.50 to $25 ; Canadian short cut clear pork, $23.50 to $24 ; American short cut clear pork, $24 to $24.50 ; American fat back, $24.50 to $25 ; bacon, Wiltshire, 13 to 14c. per lb. ; extra plate beef, $14.50 to $15 per bbl.

ST. JOHN, N.B.

The Christmas market was particularly well supplied with fresh meats. Some extra fine beef was displayed. While domestic stock is plentiful and lower than last year, Ontario stock is higher, though present price is lower than the figures quoted through the larger part of the season. A little fine veal, especially for Christmas trade, is offered. Lamb and mutton are low. Pork is firmer. Poultry is rather higher than last season. How the price holds will depend somewhat on the weather. Barrelled beef and pork seem firmer with sales light. Lard is a fair stock with market firm. We quote : Mess pork, $21.50 to $23.50 ; clear pork, $22.00 to $26.00 ; plate beef, $15 to $16 ; mess beef, $12.50 to $13.00 ; domestic beef, 5 to 7c. ; Western beef, 8 to 9c. ; lamb, 6 to 7c. ; mutton, 6c. ; veal, 9 to 10c. ; pork, 7½ to 8c. ; pure lard, tubs, 12c. ; pails, 12½c. ; compound, tubs, 9¼c. ; pails, 9½c. ; Fairbank's refined, tubs, 10¼c. ; pails, 10½c.

S. Z. Dickson made the finest Christmas display in our city market. One feature was some extra fine prize beef from Ontario.

Kane & McGrath sold a car of special Ontario beef to the retail trade for the Christmas table.

The Butchers' Advocate thinks that it is better for the retail man to give his donation to the church fairs in cash than in staples.

There is a warm competition existing between Charlottetown and Summerside. The bone of contention is the Dominion Packing Company.

Vancouver cannot relieve the hog situation. And so Swift & Co. have resolved to ship from both Vancouver and San Francisco to Australia.

The Wm. Davies Co., Toronto, have taken out a permit for a store to cost $1,200, and an ice-house to cost $2,000 on Front street near Vine avenue.

The World thinks that the Provincial Winter Fair has outgrown the Royal City. It advises the citizens of Toronto to wake up and erect a suitable building.

The high prices which poultry command are attributable, first, to the long, cold, wet spring and wet summer, and, second, to the heavy calls from United States buyers, and a good market in England.

The Wm. Davies Co. had a fine display of Christmas meat at their central branch, 24 Queen street west, Toronto. Here was exhibited the sweepstakes winner and two other prize cattle, the three aggregating 3,000 lb.

The frog farming business is conducted on a large scale in Ontario. One frog farm alone produced 5,000 lb. of dressed frogs' legs in one year. Most of them were shipped to the United States and sold at fanty prices.

December 18 Jas Maylor & Son shipped from Forest to Liverpool, for John Bull's Christmas table, about 1,500 turkeys, which weighed over 18,000 lb. They paid out about $1,500 to the farmers of that locality for the birds, and turkeys are a short crop this year.

The following are some of the chief rules of the Brooklyn Retail Butchers' Association. No more Christmas or New Year's presents will be given away by the members of the Association; no tickets will be purchased from organizations arranging entertainments and no advertisements will be given for programmes or souvenirs that are made up for such occasions. Members who violate any of these rules will be fined $50.

Fire at Charlottetown, P.E.I., recently destroyed the market building, a large wooden structure, a characteristic institution of that agricultural Province.

The International Livestock Exposition of Chicago was a pronounced success. The country visitors left fully $1,000,000 behind them in the restaurants, hotels and stores. The value of the exhibits, based upon the sales, was nearly $1,250,000. Besides the 2,420 horses, cattle, sheep and hogs in the exhibition grounds, there were fully 100,000 stock in the Union Stock Yards' pens to be seen also.

THE SCARCITY OF POULTRY.

POULTRY is scarce this fall in Canada. The weather all season was unfavorable for growing domestic fowl, and in consequence the offerings so far of the dressed and live product have been limited.

The prices in Canada have ruled firm up till the present, and there does not seem to be much poultry left in the country.

Turkeys, particularly, are hard to get, and prices have reached a high point, 14c. being the figure at which transactions have been made for those of extra good quality in Toronto, but some not so nicely picked have sold for 10 to 12c.

The export demand has been good, and although poultry has been scarce in Canada, not enough being offered to supply the local demands, there is a considerable quantity of dressed turkeys and chickens and some live turkeys on their way to England for the Christmas markets. Dealers state they have shipped only the best fowl obtainable, and killed and packed in the methods most approved of on the British markets.

There have also been numerous inquiries from New York, Detroit and other United States commercial centres for turkeys, and prices there have been high, the quotations in the first-named city being 25 cents per pound and upwards. Several offers by letter and cable have been received from England for turkeys of desirable size and condition. One inquiry this week was for 9,000 birds of 14 lb. and upwards, but it met with no response.

But it appears as if the Canadian home market will from this out absorb all the poultry which can be produced in the country.

There is a big market in British Columbia and the Yukon District for poultry, and a shipment of 70,000 pounds of turkeys has been forwarded from Toronto this week by the King, Darrel, Walker Co., Limited, to Vancouver and Dawson City. The price realized at the latter city will be about 25c. per pound. It is stated that they would take thousands of pounds more if they were obtainable.

ELECT MR. WILLIAMSON.

Mr. A. R. Williamson is a candidate for aldermanic honors in Ward 4, Toronto. It is to be hoped he will be elected, and the possibility of this hope being realized will be greatly increased if the business men in Ward 4 give him their votes and influence.

He has been a success in business, and the experience which he has gained during his mercantile career is just the kind of experience which is required to carry on the business of administering the municipal affairs of the "Queen City."

The business men of Toronto will not make a mistake in electing Mr. Williamson to the Municipal Council of that city.

OUR BUTTER IS ALL RIGHT.

The British Parliament passed an Act fixing the water contents of butter to be counted legally genuine at 16 per cent.; on which account the chemist of the Dominion Experimental Farm, Mr. F. T. Shutt, went to work to discover the percentage of water in Canadian creamery butter. His analysis covered 105 samples, comprising 30 from Montreal warehouses, 26 from Ontario creameries, 26 from the Northwest Territories, 15 from Quebec, 6 from Prince Edward Island and 2 from New Brunswick. These butters were of July and August make, with the exception of one or two; and only two samples showed more than 15 per cent. of water, one exceeded 16 per cent, and 92 were below 14 per cent.

On making a comparison of the averages obtained here with the butter regulations, as defined by a report of the English Departmental Committee, it was discovered that Canadian creamery butter is dryer than most of the butter made in Europe which is used in Great Britain.

MARCONI'S SUCCESS.

MARCONI has succeeded in transmitting messages across the Atlantic without wires. The impossible of five years ago has now become an accomplished fact. By the utilization of the most improbable agencies the desired end has been secured. Marconi has veritably discovered a new world just as his countryman, Christopher Columbus, 400 years ago overcame the prejudices of his contemporaries and showed them that land existed far across the western seas.

The perplexing problem which confronts the world, and especially the commercial world, just now is whether or not this new system is going to supersede the old cable system. On the one hand, it is pointed out that the telephone has never superseded the electric telegraph for certain uses. On the other hand, the telephone and the telegraph never came into such direct competition as this new system will undoubtedly enter into with the established system.

It resolves itself mainly into an economic problem. Can the new system effect the work of the old system as well and as cheaply? If so, there can be little doubt but that it will injure the business of the old system and detract from its commercial value.

But there are as yet several inconveniences connected with the wireless system. Principal among these is the danger of interception. So far as we know, there is no means of confining the message solely to its desired destination.

One thing is certain and that is that, if the cable system is to be superseded, the process will be a gradual one. The Marconi system cannot be perfected and will not be adopted in a moment. There will be no commercial crisis when the one is exchanged for the other. In all probability it will be the cable companies themselves who will gradualty supplement their systems with the more approved features of the wireless system.

A POSSIBILITY OF RECIPROCITY IN COAL.

WITHIN the last couple of weeks two resolutions providing for reciprocity with Canada in coal have been introduced in the United States Congress. The first resolution was introduced in the House of Representatives by Hon. Samuel W. McCall, of Massachusetts. The second was introduced in the Senate by Senator Lodge, also of Massachusetts. These resolutions are naturally creating a good deal of interest on both sides of the line, and particularly that of Senator Lodge, one of the most prominent men in the Republican party in the United States. But the fact that reciprocity in coal is within the field of possibility is the chief cause.

Neither of the resolutions appears to be of the "catch-penny" type or framed with the desire to catch votes. Representative McCall's Bill grants authority to the President to enter into negotiations with the British Government for the admission of coal free from the Dominion of Canada whenever "that country shall make a similar concession to us." Senator Lodge's Bill provides for the admission of "coal free of duty from Canada when the President is satisfied that no duty is imposed by that country on coal from the United States."

In a recent interview in The Outlook of New York, Senator McCall said: "The amount of coal bought from Nova Scotia by New England is nearly but not quite so great as the amount bought by Canada (the Province of Ontario principally) from Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia. The removal by Canada of the duty upon our coal in return for the removal by us of the duty on Canadian coal would greatly benefit the people, and, I believe, the people of both countries. Coal thus forms an ideal reciprocal item, or as nearly so as any can be."

During a speech delivered over two months ago at Northampton, Mass., Senator Lodge expressed himself emphatically in favor of reciprocity in coal with Canada, and, among other things, said: "I am ready to vote for a Bill—I would be glad to introduce one—authorizing the President to proclaim the abolition of all duties on Canadian coal when Canada removed her duty on American coal."

The duty on bituminous coal in Canada is 53c. per ton of 2,000 lb. Anthracite coal, it will be remembered, was placed on the free list in 1886. In the United States the duty on coal is 67c. per ton of 2,240 lb.

Coal has been a negotiable quantity in all reciprocal trade movements between Canada and the United States. In the Reciprocity Treaty of 1854, abrogated by the United States in 1865, coal was one of the products of both countries that was put on the free list.

It is altogether likely that it would have again been put on the free list by both countries under the provisions of the Washington Treaty of 1871 were it not for the indiscriminate action of the Dominion Parliament in removing the duty on both coal and salt at the very time the Canadian and British Commissioners were at Washington negotiating the treaty.

The Americans, it will be remembered, wanted access to our fisheries. And during the progress of the negotiations at Washington one of the propositions made by the Commissioners representing the United States was, in return for those privileges, that Canadian coal, salt and fish —and three years later lumber—should be admitted free. Canada was, of course, to reciprocate in kind. This proposition seemed to find general favor in the United States. In fact, one branch of the American Congress had already passed a measure making coal and salt free, and it was believed that the Senate would acquiese. But on April 17, only a few weeks after the final proposition had been made by the American Commissioners, the offer was suddenly withdrawn, opposition having developed against it in the country.

Later, when introducing in the House of Commons his Bill to ratify the Washington Treaty as finally drafted by the Commissioners, Sir John Macdonald, who was one of the Commissioners representing Great Britain and Canada, said that one of the American Commissioners expressed his surprise at the opposition which had developed to the proposal to place coal and salt on the free list. "I know right well what the reason was," continued Sir John. "The monopolists having control of American coal in Pennsylvania and salt in New York, so long as the treaty would open to them the markets of Canada for their products, were willing that it should carry, because they would have the advantage of both markets, but when the duty was taken off in Canada, when you had opened our market to them, when they had the whole control of their own market and free access to ours, whether for coal or salt, the monopolists brought down all their energies upon their friends in Congress, and through them a pressure on the American Government for the prevention of admission of Canadian coal and salt into the American market, and from that, I have no doubt, came the withdrawal by the American Commissioners of their offer. * * * Under the circumstances, Mr. Speaker, I found myself powerless."

In a letter which Sir John Macdonald wrote to Dr. (now Sir Charles) Tupper from Washington, after the American Commissioners had withdrawn their offer, he said: "I am convinced that his (Commissioner Fish) reason is the unfortunate repeal of the coal and salt duties in the Canadian Legislature."

It was unfortunate. And it is still unfortunate that the two countries impose a high duty against the coal products of each. Nature certainly never intended that such a condition of affairs should exist. The coal of Nova Scotia is wanted by the manufacturers of the New England States. Ontario has to depend upon the mines of Pennsylvania, Ohio and Virginia for its supply of coal for heating and manufacturing purposes. With Manitoba it is practically the same. Out on the Pacific Coast and the nearby States the natural source of supply is the coal mines of British Columbia.

But what Nature designed the politicians have thwarted. It is to be hoped that the politicians of both countries will set themselves to the task of remedying the present unnatural state of affairs as far as coal is concerned.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, December 24, 1902.

GROCERIES.

THERE has been the same falling off in the wholesale grocery trade this week as in other years, owing to the holiday season being upon us. The travellers now are all in and beyond a few rush mail and telephone orders, which require immediate attention, there was no business doing. The trade for December is well over for the year 1902, and the wholesale merchants are now preparing to take stock of the goods on their shelves and in their stores and compare the trade of this year with that of previous years. This month there has been a large volume of business in groceries transacted and all the jobbers appear to be well satisfied with what trade came their way. The movement in canned goods is quiet and coffees are featureless. Nuts have been heavily bought by the retail trade, notwithstanding the fact that their prices this fall were higher than the fall before. Sugars are moving slowly from first hands and the jobbers have not obtained many orders lately therefor from the retail trade. Business in nearly all lines of dried fruits has been heavy and the prices of prunes have stiffened on the strength of reports of advances in prices on the Pacific Coast. Although there has been a cessation of buying, owing to many buyers taking their customary holiday, teas at home and abroad retain their strong position and there are no cheaper grades of China or Japan teas offering.

CANNED GOODS.

There has been this week a cessation in the little business that had previously been passing in canned goods, and few transactions are to be reported. Tomatoes are held firmly at $1.60 to $1.85 for the imported article, some samples of which were recently opened out here. These, in color, were all that could be desired, but their flavor was not up to the Canadian goods. There have been considerable importations of these by a few houses from Baltimore. The feeling in peas and corn is firm, the prices ranging from 85c. up for the former and 95c. up for the latter. Fruits, meats and fish are inactive.

COFFEES.

The local coffee market is quiet. The prices on the outside market declined under freer offerings, there being unexpected selling, understood to be against purchases of coffee from Brazil on a lower basis of values. Our quotations are as follows: Green Rios, No. 7, 3¾c.; No. 6, 8c.; No. 5, 8¼c.; No. 4, 9c.; No. 3, 10 to 12c. per lb.

NUTS.

Trade in nuts locally has dropped off this week as most of the contracts have been filled. There has been heavy buying in these this season, although the prices have been high. There is a firm tone in the outside markets in all descriptions of nuts.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

Not much business has been doing in rice and tapioca on the local market. Advices from the South state that the mills there are only producing a small percentage of choice Japans, and the prices ruled firm. Tapioca outside had only a small sale, but the prices held steady. The quotations locally are as follows: Rice, standard B, 3½c.; Patna, 4¾ to 5c.; for Japan, 5½ to 6c.; Sago, 3¾ to 4c. and tapioca, 3¼ to 3¾c.

SPICES.

A dull and unchanged market for spices locally was reported. There was a firm feeling in pepper, owing to the receipt of cable despatches from the East reporting a strong tone to the market there for pepper.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There has been a falling off in the number of orders coming forward for syrups. Molasses is quiet. The export demand on the outside markets for syrups was light, but refiners had no important supplies on hand to market and so prices were well maintained.

SUGAR.

There was this week an easier tone to the sugar situation on the outside markets. The local market is unchanged, the demand for the present being simply on the hand-to-mouth basis.

See pages 39 and 40 for Toronto, Montreal, St. John and Halifax prices current.

In Europe 88 deg. beet sugar declined 1½d. for the week and is quoted at 8s. 1½d. for December and January shipments from Hamburg, at which basis the market closed firm. The decline is attributed to speculators realizing, but there does not seem to be any apparent cause for realizing, as Mr. Licht's last estimate gave firmness to the situation. The statistical position in the United States would seem to warrant higher prices for raw sugars, for the stocks for the week were reduced about 11,500 tons. The meltings continued at the figures of 34,000 tons, against 29,000 tons for the same time the previous year. This marks a decided increase in consumption. The market, however, seemed to be governed by other interests at the time and closed with sellers at previous quotations and buyers indifferent. Refiners seem to have good supplies and over 150,000 tons are sufficient for the next four weeks. In American refined the prices given last week remain unchanged, but it is reported that refiners are allowing an additional rebate of 5c. per 100 lb. to be deducted from invoices. It is not expected that the Canadian market will respond to the weaker tendency in New York, as it will be remembered that our market did not follow New York on the recent upward trend, but at present, owing to the light consumption, both buyers and sellers are indifferent.

TEAS.

Buying in teas on the local market is slow this week, but the prices are maintained at the previous advances. As the tea markets in India are closed, advices as to the outside markets now come entirely from London. Indian teas in transit are now of good quality in all grades. The best property is pekoes and orange pekoes at 7½ to 8½d. Good pekoe Souchongs are worth 6¼ to 6½d. Darjeelings are scarce and low grades are quoted at 7½d. The finest goods of this description used on this market are now worth 1s. 1½d. to 1s. 6d. The last sales made locally were at 7¼d. to 9½d. for good imitations of Japan and China teas. Ceylon blacks continue to harden for everything with fair cup quality up to the flavoring medium grades. Well made pekoe and pekoe Souchongs are scarce at 6½d., and good grades of the same were offered sparingly at 7 to 7½d. Ordinary pekoes are selling at 7d. and fair stuff at 7½d. Desirable stamped gardens are quoted here at 8½d. to 8¾d., although it would cost ½d. more to lay them down. Orange pekoes of Ceylon growth are quoted at 10¼ to 1s. 1d. for staple goods laid down here, and fancy marks were up as high as 1s. 7½d. The approach of the Christmas holidays, as a rule, formerly had a depressing effect on the market in England, but this year the reverse is the case, as there is a good, strong market for teas of every description and indications of higher prices continue to be shown. A private letter, bearing date of November 26 from Hiogo, Japan, states that the season there had closed and that while shipments from there to Canada had been smaller than last season, the total export of Japan teas was slightly in excess of last year. The stocks there were entirely used up. Last mail advices report that China greens at the close of the market jumped from 7 to 12 taels per picul, owing to the great scarcity and buying orders without limits.

Mail advices from London, Eng., under date of December 12 state that the auction there of Indian teas had met with better attention, and that the weakness noted the week previous had disappeared, the prices showing a distinct recovery with good general competition. The sales of Ceylon teas met with better attention and those at about 9d. were somewhat dearer. The finest kinds, however, sold with a slight irregularity.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

CURRANTS.—The market keeps up a fairly satisfactory trade in currants for the time of the year. A continued firmness is reported from the primary markets. We quote: Fine Filiatras, 5½c. up; Patras, 6¼ to 6¾c. and Vostizzas, 7c. to 8c. per lb.

VALENCIA RAISINS.—These are a little scarce, but the demand for them is not great. Our quotations are as follows:

Fine off-stalk, 7 to 8c.; selected, 8 to 9c. and selected layers, 9 to 10c. per lb.

SULTANA RAISINS.—The demand for these is still light. The prices are unchanged. We quote 9 to 13c. per lb.

DATES.—There are a few orders still coming forward for these, principally for the city trade, however. The tendency of dates on the outside markets is to a higher basis. The prices locally are as follows: Hallowees, 4½ to 5c.; Sairs, 4 to 4½c. and Fards, 7½ to 8c. per lb.

PRUNES.—The market for prunes is dull. There is, locally, however, a firm tone in these that has been imparted by reports of advances at the Coast, but no quotable changes have been made here. We quote: 100-110s, 4 to 4½c.; 90-100s, 4¾ to 5½c.; 80-90s, 6 to 6½c.; 70-80s, 6½ to 7c.; 60-70s, 7 to 7½c.; 50-60s, 8 to 8½c.; 40-50s, 8½ to 10c. per lb.

FIGS.—There is a quiet market reported for figs. The prices are unchanged. We quote: Tapnets, 4c.; Naturals, 8c. and Elemesl 10 to 15c. per lb.

CALIFORNIAN SEEDED RAISINS.—There is still a fair amount of business being done in these, and our quotations are as follows: 8½ to 9c. per lb. for 12-oz. packages and 10½ to 11c. for 1-lb. boxes of choice goods in packages. Californian loose muscatels are quoted as follows: 2-crown, 7½c.; 3-crown, 8c. and 4-crown, 9c. per lb.

CALIFORNIAN EVAPORATED FRUITS—There is still a little business being transacted in these. We quote: Apricots, 8 to 12c. and peaches, 8 to 12c. per lb.

GREEN FRUITS.

The holiday trade in green fruits of all descriptions is heavy. Oranges of the various kinds are moving out in large quantities. Lemons are active and the same may be said of apples. Malaga grapes and pineapples are also in good demand. Quotations are as follows: Californian navel oranges, $3.50 to $4 per box; Florida oranges, $3.50 to $3.75; Mexicans, $2.25 to $2.50; Jamaicas, $2.35 to $3 in boxes and $5.50 in bbls.; Valencia oranges, $4.50 to $6.75 per box, according to sizes; Tangerines, $4.50 per half-strap; pineapples, $4 to $4.50 per crate; grape fruit, $3.50 to $4 per box; Malaga grapes, $5.50 to $7 per bbl.; winter apples, $2.25 to $3 per bbl.; fancy Jersey cranberries, $10.50 per bbl.; Cape Cod, $9.50 per bbl.; Nova-Scotian, $7.50 per bbl.; sweet potatoes, $4.50 per bbl.; bananas, $1.25 to $1.75 per bunch for ordinary, and $2.25 to $2.50 for large bunches; Californian lemons, $4.25 to $4.50 per case; Messina, $3.25 to $3.50 per box; cucumbers, $1.75 to $2.50 per box; Californian tomatoes, $2.50 per basket carrier.

VEGETABLES.

There is a good active demand for the common lines of vegetables and the prices are firm throughout the list. Potatoes continue scarce and dear. Cabbage and lettuce are also moving out quite freely. A remarkable fact is that pumpkins are being offered so late in the season. We quote: Lettuce, 30 to 40c. per doz.; mint, and parsley, 15 to 20c.; cabbage, 30 to 50c. per dozen and $1 per barrel; pickling cabbage, 25 to 50c. per doz.; carrots, 40 to 50c. per bag; beets, 40 to 50c. per bag; potatoes, $1.25 per bag; and celery, 50 to 75c. per dozen; squashes, $1 to $1.50 per dozen; pumpkins, 50c. per dozen; artichokes, 50c. per bushel; spinach, 40c.; parsnips, 40 to 50c. per bag; vegetable marrow, 30 to 50c. per dozen.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EGGS.—There are hardly any fresh gathered eggs now coming forward and strictly new laid eggs are almost out of the market. There is, however, little demand for the product. We quote as follows: Strictly new laid, 26 to 30c. per dozen; fresh, 19 to 20c.; limed, 18c. and cold stored, 16 to 19c. per dozen.

BEANS.—There have been little offerings of beans on the local market and few transactions have been made. The prices are steady at $2 for handpicked and $1.75 per bushel for prime.

DRIED AND EVAPORATED APPLES.—These are quiet. Evaporated are offered at 6½ to 7c. and dried, 4 to 4½c. per lb.

HONEY.—Trade in honey is quiet. A two-ton lot was bought this week at 8c. per lb. laid down in Toronto. We quote as follows: Extracted clover, 8c. to 8½c. in large quantities; in glass jars, $1.50 to $2 per doz.

POTATOES.—These are scarce and in good demand. The prices are unchanged at $1 per bag on track, Toronto.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

BUTTER.—The market continues firm at an advance of 1s., and there is a good demand for all grades. Large rolls compose the bulk of the arrivals. Fine dairy tubs are scarce. We quote as follows: Finest 1-lb. rolls, 19 to 20c.; large rolls, 17½ to 18c.; selected dairy tubs, 17 to 18c.; secondary grades (showing feed), rolls or tubs, 15 to 16½c.; bakers', 14 to 15c. and creamery prints, 22 to 23c.

CHEESE.—The market is steady and prices are unchanged. There is not much inquiry reported at present for export, and the local demand is quiet. We quote 13c. per lb. for finest Septembers.

POULTRY

DRESSED POULTRY.—There have been so far light arrivals of all grades of poultry. Turkeys are scarce with a good demand, both locally and from the Pacific Coast and the United States commercial centres. There have also been inquiries from the Old Country for the turkeys. Prices are: Turkeys, 13 to 14c. per lb.; geese, 8 to 10c.; ducks, 9 to 10c.; chickens, young, 50 to 75c. and old, 35 to 45c. per pair.

LIVE POULTRY.—There is a good demand for live poultry with light receipts. The prices are firm. For delivery in Toronto the following prices were paid: Turkeys, 10 to 11c.; ducks, 8 to 10c.; geese, 6 to 7c.; chickens, young, 7 to 8c. and old, 5 to 6c. per lb.

FISH.

There is a good call for all lines of frozen fish. Trout are scarce and firmer. Oysters have again advanced 10c. in Baltimore and in view of this has imparted a firm tone to the local market. Digby herring are scarce and wanted. Our quotations are as follows: Frozen fish, trout, 7 to 8c.; perch, 4 to 5c.; pike, 6c.; British-Columbian salmon, 15 to 20c.; whitefish, 7 to 7½c.; mackerel, 15 to 20c.; smelts, 8 to 10c.; halibut, 15c.; blue pike, 4c.; live lobsters, 25c. per lb.; oysters, $4.05 to $4.80 in small pails and $6.75 to $7.50 for large; smoked ciscoes, $1.25 per basket; Digby herring, 75c. per bundle; finnan haddies, 7 to 8c. in 15-lb. boxes; codfish, $4.50 for 25-lb. boxes and $1.80 for 2 doz. box; quail on toast, 5½c. in boxes; boneless cod, 4½c per lb.; kippered herring, $4 per case of 4 doz. tins; Labrador herring, in ½-bbls., $3 and lake herring, $4; salt sea salmon, $8 to $10 per 100 lb.; salt sea mackerel, $2; lake herring, frozen, $4; frozen sea herring, $2 per kit; bloaters, Yarmouth, $1.25 to $1.50 per box.

GRAIN, FLOUR AND BREAKFAST FOODS.

GRAIN.—There have been free deliveries of oats and the market has declined 2c. per bushel. The farmers seem to be holding back their wheat for an advance. We quote: Red wheat, 72c.; white wheat, 72c.; barley, 40 to 45c.; oats, 32c.; peas, 76c.; buckwheat, 52c.; rye, 50c. per bushel, on track, Toronto.

FLOUR.—There has been active buying in flour in small lots and the prices are steady and unchanged. Quotations are: Ontario patents, in bags, $3.35 to $3.65; Hungarian patents, $4.10 to $4.20; Manitoba bakers', $3.75 to $3.90; straight roller, $3.40 to $3.50 per bbl.

We quote as follows: Oatmeal, standard and granulated, in carlots on track, $4.30; standard rolled oats, in carlots, $4.10 per barrel in bags; in wood, 15c. extra, and for broken lots, 25c. per bbl. extra; rolled wheat, $2.25 per 100 lb. bbl.; cornmeal, $4; split peas, $4.75; pot barley, $4, in bags; in wood, 15c. extra; Swiss food, per case, $2.88.

QUEBEC MARKETS

Montreal, December 24, 1902.

GROCERIES.

THE usual holiday quietness has taken possession of the jobbing trade; most of the travellers have been called in off their routes and will not start out again until after January 6. The few days of mild weather gave wholesalers a chance to ship their perishable goods by freight, and this was taken advantage of to the fullest extent. Yellow boiling peas are ½c. lower and are now worth 2½c. per lb. for finest quality. Ordinary grades sell at 2c. The latest reports from France regarding prunes indicate a very great scarcity. There are no "Excelsiors" on the market, and the other grades are also scarce. In spite of the fact that Californian prunes were sent in good quantities into the French market, the French fruit was quite sold up.

SUGAR.

The local sugar market has remained steady throughout the week and prices are unchanged, granulated being worth $3.80 and yellows ranging from $3.15 to $3.75. The New York market has been going up and down, but this market has been unaffected by the changes. It is expected, however, that another decline in New York would bring prices down here also. The London raw sugar market declined 2¼d. on beet on December 16, owing, it is said, to speculation.

TEAS.

Sales of Japan teas are not large, but considering the very high prices the demand for them is comparatively good and is evidence that no other teas can quite take the place of Japans with a certain class of trade. Quite a number of small lots have been selling during the past week or two, the price ranging between 17½ to 18½c., and in the finer grades, 23 to 24c. There has been no quotable changes in Ceylon teas, which are in fair demand.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The movement in Barbados molasses is slow this week, although one Montreal house is reported to have done good business by lowering prices below those of the Halifax concern which had entered this market. Barbados are quoted by jobbers at 23 to 24c.; New Orleans, 16 to 17c.; Antigua, 24c.; Porto Rico, 38c. In corn syrups there is only a small amount of business doing at the following prices: In barrels, 3c.; in ½-barrels, 3⅛c.; in ¼-barrels, 3¼c.; in 38½-lb. pails, $1.40 and in 25-lb. pails, $1.10.

SPICES.

The market is without any marked feature this week. Cloves are a little easier, which, however, may be due to speculative influences, as stocks are not large.

MALAGA RAISINS.—American "Connoisseur Clusters" are being offered on this market at $2 per box. The boxes are only 20-lb., however, which does not make them cheaper than the Malaga table raisins, boxes of which contain 22 lb. "Royal Buckingham Clusters" are entirely out of the market. Our quotations are now as follows: London layers, $1.75 to $1.90; "Connoisseur Clusters," $2.15 to $2.50; "Royal Buckingham Clusters," quarter-boxes, $1.15; "Excelsior Windsor Clusters," $4.50 to $4.60; ¼s, $1.30 to $1.40.

CALIFORNIAN RAISINS.—Seeded raisins are becoming scarce on this market. Prices are unchanged. We quote as follow: Loose muscatels, 7¾ to 8c.; seeded, in 1-lb. packages, 9¼ to 10c.; in 12-oz. packages, 7½c. per lb.

Our quotations are as follows: 8½c. for 40-50s; 8c. for 50-60s; 7¾c. for 60-70s; 7½c. for 70-80s; 6¾c. for 80-90s; 6½c. for 90-100s. CHEESE.—There is a better inquiry for cheese this week and a fairly good business has been done. Prices, however, are unchanged and the market is firm. Dealers do not look for an advance for some time now. The price ranges from 12⅛ to 12⅜c. per lb.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, N.B., December 21, 1902.

THE wholesale dealers are either busy preparing to take stock next week or arranging books, etc., for stock-taking February 1. Many prefer the latter date, as they have a full month after the Christmas trade to get their accounts into shape. The season's business has been good. The retailers also report good sales. The weather was favorable, and as almost everyone had enjoyed a good business year, they had money to spend. Owing to the trouble about fuel, though we are not in as bad shape as the people in the west, the poor were thought of to even a greater extent than usual.

OILS.—The market is firm in burning oil. The large sale for the season is over, though the sale is, of course large. The advance of the past few weeks is the first change of importance that has occurred for some time. Lubricating oils are in light demand. Paint oils have light spot business. Owing to the low price at which spring delivery has been offered a large forward business has been done. This refers particularly to linseeds.

SALT.—There are regular weekly receipts of Liverpool coarse salt. There is a good demand. Prices are ranging rather higher than last season. The slight advance is due to the rather higher freights charged and the increased cost of coal. In fine salt the demand is for Canadian. The sale is light. We quote as follows: Liverpool coarse, 55 to 60c.; English factory-filled, 95c. to $1; Canadian fine, $1.50 per bag; cheese and butter salt, $2.25 to $2.35 per bbl.; 5-lb. bags, $3.10 per bbl.; 10-lb. bags, $2.85 per bbl.; 20-lb. wood boxes, 25c. each; 10-lb. wood boxes, 15c. each; cartons, $1.90 to $2 per case; English bottled salt, $1.25 to $1.30 per dozen; mineral rock salt, 60c. per 100 lb. (Selected lumps.)

CANNED GOODS.—A fair business is reported, though this is a quiet season, as on the arrival of new goods, but a few weeks ago, the retail trade bought freely. Corn and peas are firmly held at higher figures. The extremely high price of tomatoes is affecting the sale. The retail trade bought quite largely, to arrive, at the lower figures. Salmon are firmly held. Spring fish have the big sale here, and one brand is particularly popular just now. Fruits are having a fair sale. Some future orders for meats are being given. The opening prices are the same as last year. In domestic fish the present sales are light. In sardines, haddies (talls and flats) and herring, fair stocks are held.

GREEN FRUITS.—The mild weather the week before Christmas was greatly appreciated by this branch of the trade, and a larger quantity of goods than usual were handled. This was particularly noticeable in Malaga grapes. In oranges the market has been well supplied, the chief sale being for Jamaicas and Valencias. Californians are not very large sellers here, and the season is early for good stock. For Floridas the prices are rather higher than last year. In apples trade is rather dull. Very few Nova-Scotian apples are seen. It is years since they have been so scarce on the market. Ontario Northern Spies are the best stock offered. Lemons are rather easier and the sale is good. Cranberries are high.

DRIED FRUITS.—Business has now quieted down. All lines were late. The market was largely bare of Valencias, particularly small boxes, but there were free arrivals about ten days before Christmas. There was much trouble about Californian seeded, but this was overcome somewhat through the late arrivals. One shipper has not yet landed his goods. One car of Californian fruit shipped November 1 is not yet to hand. In prunes, fair stocks are held. Prices on the Coast are higher. Currants are low. Sales have been very large. Dates are in good supply and the market is rather higher. Figs are in ample supply. New walnuts were late, but the market is now well supplied. Evaporated apples are low. Onions are a drug here. This has been a losing business.

DAIRY PRODUCE.—Eggs have kept at reasonable figures here. Fair stocks are held. In butter the market is firm. Best stock is scarce and commands a good price. Cheese has a fair sale and the market is firm. Stocks are light.

SUGAR.—The trade are somewhat disappointed that prices have not shown more advance, but the market is firm and higher prices are expected. The lighter demand at present affects the situation.

MOLASSES.—The demand just now is light. Stocks are firmly held. Quantity here is smaller than usual at this season, and reports favor a short crop in both Porto Rico and Barbados.

FISH.—This is a dull season. There is a fair supply of cod and haddock, and they have the chief sale. In dry cod our merchants accept fish not at all up to standard. That is, they are wet, not dry. Of course, this is to the advantage of the fishermen, but not at all to the consumers. Other markets would not accept such, and our trade are working against their best interests. Pollock are firm. Pickled fish are dull. Smoked herring are high. Full prices are asked for haddies. Our quotations are as follows: Haddies, 4 to 5c.; smoked herring, 11 to 12½c.; fresh haddock and cod, 2 to 2½c.; boneless fish, 4 to 5c.; pollock, $1.70 to $1.75 per 100 lb.; pickled herring, $2 to $2.15 per half-barrel; dry cod, $3.50 to $3.65; pickled shad, per half-barrel, $6.00.

FLOUR, FEED AND MEAL.—There has been a fairly active business. In the local market no changes in prices are reported. Oats and oatmeal show quite a range in figures. Cornmeal is low. Barley is a light stock. Split peas are scarce and high. Quotations are: Manitoba flour, $4.75 to $4.80; best Ontario, $4.20 to $4.25; medium, $3.95 to $4; oatmeal, $4.50 to $4.60; cornmeal, $3.10 to $3.15; middlings, in small lots, $26 to $28; oats, 40 to 44c.; handpicked beans, $2.35 to $2.40; prime, $2.25 to $2.50; yellow eye beans, $2.80 to $3; split peas, $4.55 to $5.25; barley, $4.25 to $4.40; hay, $9 to $10.

ST. JOHN NOTES.

A very Merry Christmas to all.

On the first of the year J. E. Angevine withdraws from the wholesale grocery house of Bowman & Angevine, having accepted a position with T. H. Estabrooks, packer of "Red Rose" tea. Mr. Angevine will be much missed by the grocery trade, being looked upon as one of the smartest young men in the business. He will be particularly missed in Fredericton and St. Stephen, cities he regularly visited in the interests of his firm. The business will be carried on in future by F. Bowman, who has associated with him Horace Cole, who for years has been a popular representative of the old firm on the road. "The Grocer" joins the very large connection of the house by extending to the new firm, Bowman & Cole, best wishes for continued and increased success.

OTTAWA TRADE GOSSIP.

THE grocery trade has been lively the past week. The weather continues fine and the country roads are in splendid condition, so that farmers have been able to market their Christmas produce. Prices of turkeys on the market here have been remarkably high, loads of them selling for 18c. per lb. Last Saturday the lowest price seemed to be about 16c. Of course, the above price was for the nicest birds. Other poultry have advanced accordingly. The sugar market remains the same. Burning oil is very scarce with the likelihood of another advance of 1c. for the Canadian article. A good business is being done among the wholesalers in nuts, table raisins, figs, etc.

Now that the price of canned tomatoes is more settled, the retailers are getting 15c. a tin in most of the city stores, gnd wholesalers are quoting $1.65 to $1.70 a dozen. Corn and peas are worth 90c. It looks as if tomatoes will be very scarce about March or April, as the demand is so much greater then.

Molasses is quoted a little higher, the price now being 26c. for best Barbados.

Fine Filiatras currants are quoted at 5 to 5½c.; Vostizzas, 6½ to 7c.; fine off-stalk raisins, 7 to 7½c.; finest selected, 8¼ to 8½c.; Californian muscatels, 4-crown, 8 to 9c.; 3-crown, 7½ to 8¼c.; Sultanas, 10 to 10½c. seeded in packages, best brands, 10 to 10⅝c.; choice, 9 to 10c.; for table raisins, "Connoisseur Clusters," $2.25 to $2.50; "Buckingham Clusters," $3.30 to $3.50. Business in prunes is quiet at present, but prices are firm.

At the Fruit Exchange to-day a very large sale took place, large quantities of apples, cranberries, Malaga grapes, Valencia oranges, Messina oranges and lemons being quickly disposed of. Prices for apples ranged as follows: No. 1 Spies, $3.25 to $3.65; No. 2 ditto, $2 to $2.35; No. 1 Baldwins, $2.75 to $3.25; No. 2 ditto, $1.90 to $2.25; No. 1 Snows, $3 to $3.25; No. 2 ditto, $2 to $2.40; No. 1 Macintosh Red, $3 to $3.85; No. 2 ditto, $2.50 to $3; No. 1 Greenings, $2.10 to $2.40; No. 2 ditto, $1.75 to $2.10; other varieties, according to quality, $1.50 to $2.50. Malaga grapes in good order brought $5.45 to $5.60; Cranberries, Cape Cods, $9 to $9.50; Valencia oranges, 714s, $4.35 to $4.65; 420s, $3.50 to $3.75; 1064s, a very small size, brought $4.65; Messina oranges, 200s, $2.25; 300s, $2.50; Messina lemons, 300s, $3.25; 360s, $3.25 to $3.50. A car of Californian navel oranges will arrive to-morrow (Tuesday). A special sale is called, so as they can be handled for the Christmas trade.

A good business is being done in fish, a number of grocers handling large quantities of frozen stock. Prices now are about: British-Columbian salmon, 9c.; halibut, 9½c.; haddock, 4c.; pickerel, 6c.; whitefish, 7c. and pike, 4c. per lb.

Butter is firm, but nice fresh stock is a little easier to get this week. Good pails and tubs are quoted at 18½ to 19c.; prints, 20 to 21c. Creamery is scarce at 22½ to 24c. Cheese is quoted by jobbers at 13½c.; Canadian Stilton's, 15c. per lb.

NOTES.

H. N. Bate, of H. N. Bate & Sons, celebrated the 50th anniversary of his wedding last week.

Great regret is expressed for P. O'Connor, one of the oldest grocers on Bank street, whose wife is lying ill with pneumonia at her home. Her case is very critical.

At the next meeting of the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association in January, the election of officers will take place and reports of the past year received. The association was never so prosperous as at present.

J. D. McCusker, of the late firm of Bedingfield & McCusker, left Friday last for St. Paul, Minn., where he has secured a position. His many friends wish him every success in his new field. He was presented with an address and purse before leaving, which greatly helped to cheer him up.

BEET SUGAR AT WHITBY.

The establishment of a beet-sugar factory was considered at a public meeting on December 19 at Whitby, Ont. Ex-Mayor Rutledge presided. Members of the County Council, which was in session last week, were present, also a fairly representative gathering of business men of the community. The opinion was that the local requirements to assure the investment of about $750,000, six-sevenths of which will be supplied by New York capitalists, whom F. Howard Annes has interested in the enterprise, can be satisfactorily met. It was decided to run an excursion to Berlin the first or second week in January.

ENLARGING THE CAN WORKS.

James B. Campbell, of the Acme Can Works, Montreal, was in Toronto last week. The plant of the Acme Can Works is being renovated and enlarged preparatory to next season's business, which is expected to be the largest in the history of the firm.

CHRISTMAS IN WINNIPEG.

From our own Correspondent.

"THE best in 20 years" is the verdict of all who visit the market. Arched from one end to the other with evergreens and flags, the sides lined with choice carcasses, and the whole one blaze with colored electric globes, it would be difficult to find a finer sight than the Winnipeg market to-day. The mutton, beef and pork is all Manitoba fed, and not old London itself, that draws on the world for supplies, can produce better. If beef, mutton or sucking pig will not satisfy you, there are turkeys, geese, ducks, pigeons, bear or moose steaks, British-Columbian salmon and Lake Winnipeg whitefish.

Kobold & Company are making the finest display and one of the steers, that reaches from top to bottom of their stalls, went east last fall and was a prize winner at the Toronto Exhibition. The whole stock is well set off with appropriate mottoes, little flags, festoons of silver gilt alternating with savory sausages. But the market is not the only place in Winnipeg where there are good things to eat. All the grocery stores are vieing the one with the other as to who shall have the most temptingly-dressed windows. There has never been a season when such expensive groceries were called for, never a season when buying was done as early as it has been this year.

Many houses report that two weeks ago they had done more business than they had done up to two days of Christmas last year, and it was counted a good year. All kinds of French specialties have found a ready sale. Asparagus, from the French Trappists' cellars, choice peas from the same fair land, olives, stuffed and unstuffed, from Sunny Spain, figs from Smyrna, "Royal Buckingham Clusters," Wallace, of New York, confections, French crystallines, preserved ginger, guava jellies, Gruyere, Gorgonzola, Roquefort, and Fromage de la Trappe, are a few of the dainties offered. The sale of ready-made plum puddings has been enormous, when you remember all the fruit that has been sold for the making of the same.

All day long, and until ten o'clock at night the stores are simply thronged with buyers. Whether you go to the market, or one of the large jewellery establishments, it is all the same, the crowd is everywhere.

More diamonds have been sold in Winnipeg already this holiday season than were dreamt of even in the famous boom days of 1882, and the best of all is that the buying of 1902 is not on the shaky foundation that it was in those historic days. There has been a larger amount of cash buying than ever before in the history of the city. People are buying because they know they can afford it. The demand is for choice gifts in all lines. Labor is well employed, there is little sickness in the city, the outlook for the future is bright, so that everything has combined to make the Christmas holiday season of 1902 a memorable one in the history of Winnipeg. Nor is Winnipeg forgetful whence all prosperity comes. Amid the rejoicing there are always some sick, some afflicted, some orphans and widows. The charitable institutions of the city are being well remembered and various committees of citizens are making an earnest endeavor to see that there shall not be one soul without a good dinner or one child forgotten of Santa Claus when the bells ring out their merry peal next Wednesday night.

A NEW JAR FOR MARMALADE.

For some time past there has been a shortage in the market for marmalade. Crosse & Blackwell will, after the first of the year, be in a position to supply the demand. They are packing their marmalade in a new jar, which is far superior to the one they have been using. One advantage of the new jar is that the lid is fitted so as to prevent any leakage, as was sometimes the case with the old one. It can also be used for canning fruits, as the cover is airtight. As soon as the present stock of jams and jellies is exhausted, they will also be put up in this new jar. C. E. Colson & Son, Montreal, are the Canadian agents for Crosse & Blackwell, and would be pleased to furnish their customers with any information which they should desire.

DEATH OF J. S. BENNETT.

J. S. Bennett, of Toronto, manufacturer of the patent shelf boxes that bear his name, died suddenly the other day. Blood poisoning was the cause of death. The circumstances surrounding his demise are particularly sad, his wife having predeceased him just one week, almost to the hour.

Deceased was in the hardware business in London, Eng., for some years. He was for a time in a hardware store in Winnipeg, and later travelled for H. S. Howland, Sons & Co., in the Northwest. It was while in Winnipeg that he invented the shelf boxes and and drawers that bear his name, and after leaving H. S. Howland, Sons & Co. he started a factory for their manufacture and was rapidly building up a prosperous trade when death so suddenly overtook him. Deceased left two sons, aged 9 and 12 respectively, to mourn his loss.

The business will be continued by a brother of deceased, who will give prompt attention to orders.

Deceased was a genial and whole-souled man, and his death is generally regretted by those who knew him.

TOBACCO CULTURE IN ONTARIO.

From the report of the Bureau of Industries.

THIS crop is confined chiefly to Essex and Kent, the former county having about two-thirds of the acreage of the Province, although even in these counties it is not grown to a large extent. Correspondents reporting on the 1st of August spoke of the plant having done well, although some complained of "worms" being very bad. Much of the tobacco was planted rather late this year on account of the rain.

Only a few correspondents made reference to tobacco in the November returns. Where mention of it was made, however, the crop appeared to have matured well and to have escaped serious injury, except in a few instances.

The following table gives the acreages for the six years 1896-1901, and the yields for the last four years :

| Year. | Essex. | | | Kent. | | | The Province. | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Acres. | Total yield. | Yield per acre. | Acres. | Total yield. | Yield per acre. | Acres. | Total yield. | Yield per acre. |
| 1901 ..... | 1,968 | 2,290,752 | 1,164 | 584 | 564,728 | 967 | 2,935 | 3,113,580 | 1,061 |
| 1900 ..... | 1,620 | 2,065,500 | 1,275 | 449 | 583,700 | 1,300 | 2,477 | 2,854,900 | 1,140 |
| 1899..... | 1,111 | 1,636,760 | 1,160 | 338 | 415 402 | 1,229 | 2,206 | 2,241,562 | 1,016 |
| 1898..... | 5,085 | 7,095,970 | 1,395 | 2,140 | 3,013,120 | 1,408 | 7,871 | 10,560,590 | 1,342 |
| 1897..... | 422 | ..... | ..... | 28 | ..... | ..... | 994 | ..... | ..... |
| 1896 ..... | 315 | ..... | ..... | 21 | ..... | ..... | 667 | ..... | ..... |

There was a sudden boom in the growing of tobacco in Essex and Kent in 1898, but a decided shrinkage in the area occurred in the following year. There has been a steady increase in acreage in 1900 and 1901, however, and the rather satisfactory showing in Essex this year should add to the popularity of the crop. The average yield per acre of the Province has not varied greatly during the last three years.

"Frenching" of Tobacco.—In the August crop returns one of our correspondents referred to the "Frenching" of some tobacco that he was growing. As no other complaints were received it would appear that the disease was local rather than general in the Essex district.

Prof. Wm. Lochhead, biologist at the Ontario Agriculture College, has furnished the Department with the following notes regarding the disease :

This disease of tobacco is known under different names in different sections. It is known as "Frenching" in the South, as "Mosaic Disease" "Brindle" and "Mongrel Disease" in the Northern tobacco districts, and "Calico Spot" in Connecticut and elsewhere. It is not yet quite certain that the disease known as "Frenching" in Essex is the same as that known under the same name in the South, for the characteristic feature of the disease in Essex is the yellowing of the main leaves and the production of tufts of rigid, worthless leaves on the larger leaves, while in the South the chief characteristic of the disease is a mottling and stiffening of the leaves.

The cause of the disease is not definitely known. Some investigators attribute the cause to an unknown parasite, probably bacterial; while others consider it a disease arising from purely physiological causes, associated either with movements of reserve proteids during growth, or with sudden changes of atmospheric conditions and unsuitable soil conditions.

The disease may occur quite early in the life of the tobacco plant—even in the seed-bed—and usually attacks the older leaves first. Apparently the disease is not contagious, and is not rapidly propagated through the soil of the field, nor will seeds from diseased plants necessarily produce unhealthy plants.

The conditions which favor "Frenching" are: Unsuitable soil nourishment; very moist soil with little light; atmospheric conditions promoting rapid growth, and poor seed. It is a fact well known to most practical tobacco growers that "Frenching" is very liable to occur whenever a rapid production of sprouts on moist soil takes place.

Along the line of prevention, it has been recommended to keep the plants in the seed-bed cool (not too warm); to change the seed-bed; to practice rotation of crops; to remove the stubs of diseased plants after the crop is harvested; the use of chemical fertilizers instead of stable manure; the addition of lime, or some other substance, to the soil which will render it more porous; and the protection of plants at critical seasons from too sudden exposure to sunlight.

It is evident that a more detailed study of this disease is necessary before the real cause is discovered, and definite remedies or preventives can be applied.

Store and Store Front Arrangement.

"M AND S.", St. John, N.B., ask for information and suggestions on arranging a store front. Store is 80 ft. deep and 25 ft. wide. They state in their letter that back of store is well lighted, but that centre of store is not light enough. The rough drawing conveys my idea of the best means of laying out this front. According to this plan you could get two nice windows, 9 ft. high, 10½ ft. long at back and 6 ft. deep. The entrance could be made 7 ft. wide at street level, receding to 4 ft. at door, which would make a nice entrance. The front glasses could be 9 ft. long and background of window would be 1½ ft. longer. Along the top of the frontage, prism glasses could be laid in. These magnify the light and would flood the interior with plenty of light. These should be 2 ft. wide. For backgrounds for the windows I would prefer a mirror the full length of the back, divided into two separate mirrors, one of which should slide so as to admit of entrance to and from the window. These mirrors should be 6 ft. high, with an oak or walnut cornice at top. Above the mirror glass should run to the ceiling. The space above the mirror to ceiling, where the glass goes, would be 3 ft. 6 in. in height. The light is thrown from the prisms, through the glass above the mirror into the store. The prism glass could be in sections, and one section should swing either on pivots or hinges so as it can be opened for ventilation at any time. This could be run from a cord inside the store. At the wall end of windows a mirror should be placed—a continuation of mirror at back would be the proper thing. This end mirror heightens the effect of the trim and gives it immensity. The window floor should be 18 in. from street level. The firm's name in brass could run across the front of window, as indicated in drawing, and below this a panelling in oak. The door might have an oval-bevelled plate-glass instead of the everyday style. The flooring of vestibule should be in fancy tiling, with the name of the firm inlaid. In winter, storm-doors could be put on outside, flush with the front. These doors would be 3 ft. 6 in. wide (each), one to push in and the other to push out. Over the door should be a transom in prism glass, to work on a pivot so as it could be opened for ventilation. For lighting I would recommend the "Fink" method, which consists of a long trough-shaped reflector with incandescent lamps. The funnel-shaped reflector is all right provided there are enough of them. These reflectors should be attached to ceiling as near to the pane as possible. The light is thrown by means of these directly on the goods below and is evenly distributed provided the reflectors are turned straight down towards the floor. According to this plan, I don't see why (if you adopt this idea), how you can get a more up-to-date front out of the space you have. This plan will give you two good-sized windows and an ample-sized entrance, and you would have the interior excellently lighted. If any of our readers can see anything that would be an improvement over this description, "The Canadian Grocer" would be pleased to hear from them so that we might suggest the improvement to our inquirer. We trust our correspondent may find something in this plan that will suit his requirements.

"G. R. A. & Sons," Chilliwack, B.C., require suggestions in arranging a stock of dry goods. They state their floor space for this purpose is 27 ft. wide and 40 ft. long. They also say that the space running from front of store nearly halfway down the entire length of store, is only about 15 ft. They ask how we could advise laying out a dry goods stock in this space. Now, here is a very difficult problem, as we are not informed whether this included jackets, mantles and millinery, or furs. And then we have no idea what sized stock each department contains. We will do the best we can to aid our correspondent with what information we have. We have made a rough sketch of what might be done, from which our inquirer might be able to get an idea or two. The drawing explains itself better than we can describe it. Towards the front of the store, where it is only 15 ft. wide, we could only get one counter. You could not get two counters and fixtures in this narrow space, as 7 or 7½ ft. is little room enough for shelves, standing space and the counter. The only thing that we can see that might be done would be to put a counter on one side of the wall, allowing 7 ft. for counter and fixture, and on the opposite wall you could build a fixture 18 in. wide. This would just leave 7 ft. for customers to pass between, which is small enough. The rest of the design explains our idea of what we think could be done with the space, but we fail to see how you could get even a small portion of what constitutes a general stock of dry goods into so small a space. However, we hope in our suggestions you may see something to your advantage. We would be pleased to aid you further in the matter if you could furnish us with a more minute idea of the layout of the store and the size of each line carried under the heading of dry goods. You also ask what the proper height and width of shelving and counters should be. I notice that the large stores in New York are all doing away with the high fixtures. Where there is ample room for laying out a stock, the fixtures should not be higher than 7 ft. The heights and widths of fixtures and counters depend pretty much on what department they are for. Shelves for a dress-goods counter should be 7 ft. high and 2 ft. wide. Counters for dress goods should be about 3 ft. 6 in. high and 2 ft. 6 in. wide. Other counters can be made much narrower, by, say, about 6 in., but 3 ft. 6 in. is the general height.

ITALIAN GROCERY STORES.

THE Italians, who have taken up their abode on this continent, have transplanted with themselves many of the customs of the land of their birth. In New York there are now quite a number of quaint Italian grocery stores which are interesting to study, as many similar ones will soon, no doubt, be started in the larger cities of Canada. These stores are even taking away some trade from the larger grocery stores. According to The N. Y. Commercial, many a thrifty housewife of New York now refuses to buy her olive oil of her regular grocer, and even the more or less big grocery stores have found their sales in that commodity gradually dropping off. The hard-to-suit housewives now go in large numbers to the little Italian grocery shops down town for their oil. They say it is better and vastly cheaper than the bottled goods kept on American grocers' shelves; and not a few of the Italian, Sicilian and Greek fruit stands now keep olive oil in tin cans and jugs and sell it to their customers by the pint, half-pint, or quart, always guaranteeing it to be fresh. And the wine vinegars of Italy and Greece now find favor with hundreds of American consumers.

Just as German immigration has made us familiar with the delicatessen shop, the Italian is doing with his grocery. In the six colonies which are established in New York each has a full complement of these establishments. The largest and best are in Mulberry Bend; next are those in Little Italy on the Harlem east side, and in the settlement near Catharine Ferry in Brooklyn.

These shops are neat and interesting, as described by The Evening Post recently. Their stock is somewhat like that of an American store, but full of articles unfamiliar to Yankee eyes. One of the noticeable displays is in macaroni. Of this goodly edible, 40 varieties are shown, ranging from a hair-like vermicelli to huge, clumsy chunks called cornarini. Tomatoes and cheese are near. The former appears in a tinned preparation of tomato paste. This is the vegetable, plain or spiced, boiled down until it is a solid. The long cooking brings out the flavor, but increases the acidity. It is used for tomato sauce and soup. The favorites in cheese are Parma and Gorgonzola. Other varieties, Italian and French, are in stock but do not compare with these in popularity.

Almonds and Lombardy chestnuts are always in demand. Besides the sweet, bitter and paper-shell almonds, are paste and flour made from the kernels, and at times the rich cake known in English as march-pane.

The sausage exhibit is worthy of Germany. The Italian sausage is usually harder and drier than the German, and possibly higher-flavored. The oldest is the bologna, in which the peppercorn and garlic add zest to the meat. The Italian salami comes second, and then follows a long series, all of which are nutritious and appetizing.

In the better stores in Mulberry Bend may be procured the delicate wafers and biscuits of Florence, Venice, and Milan, which are the originals of the Vienna and champagne wafers so largely used in American society. In the main, they are sweeter than the latter and a trifle fuller flavored. Noticeable are the graceful baskets in which wine, oil and vinegar are put up. They are of the same general type as the Chianti flask, and differ chiefly in the style in which they are ornamented by straw wrapping foil, label and tasselled cords.
